WESTFIELD WISPS.

William Cory and bride returned home from their wedding trip on Friday last.

The Rev. N. W. Cadwell and bride held a reception at the lecture room adjoining the parsonage, on last Monday evening.

The anniversary of the Congregational Sunday School was held last Sunday in the church. The exercises were very interesting.

The regular communion services were held in the M. E. church on last Sunday. Some fifteen persons were received in full membership.

On next Sunday it will be Children's Day at the M. E. church. A very interesting programme has been prepared for the occasion.

The 1st and 2d nines of the W. B. B. C. will play a game on Saturday next on their grounds on the Coe farm, near Broad street.

Mrs. Amanda France, who left Westfield about two months ago for Ocean Beach, was on a short visit to her friends the present week.

Anson F. Grant, Esq., residing on Westfield avenue, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his wedding on Monday evening. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives.

Mahlon H. Ferris lost a valuable horse on Sunday last. This is the second horse he has lost from the same disease within two months. The veterinary surgeon pronounced the cause of death paralysis of the throat.

The ladies of the M. E. church held a strawberry and ice cream festival on last Wednesday evening for the benefit of the Ladies Aid Society, connected with the church. There was a large attendance of friends and members of the church.

Sam, our popular hotel keeper, is very proud of the black canary he recently received by express from some friends. He prizes it very highly as it is a very rare species of bird, but very few of them living in captivity. Sam will spend hours describing the different performances the bird goes through in the course of the day.

Mr. Wm. Smith, a person working for Oliver M. Pierson, went to Plainfield last Saturday to purchase some clothing. He left Plainfield on a late train for Westfield. After the train left Fanwood the brakeman called out the next stop, and Mr. Smith walked to the door and off the platform. He had a large valise with him and in stepping off the cars fell upon it, which no doubt saved his life or the loss of a limb.

On last Wednesday afternoon Broad street was all excitement over a fight that was going on in front of Squire Jaques' office between two colored females, Mary Miller and Violet Miller, who had accused each of having talked slanderously about the other. Only one round was fought before they were separated by Squire Jaques. Violet claimed first knock down and first blood, which was allowed by the bystanders. Justice Jaques ordered Constables Marsh and Keestar to arrest them, and when brought before him he fined them $2 each and costs, which was promptly paid and they both left the Justice's office uttering threats against each other and that they would have the fight out until one or the other cried quits.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That in addition to taxes for the current expenses and for the support of the poor of the City of Plainfield, there shall be assessed, levied and collected by tax for the purposes of the Library Fund of the City of Plainfield for the year 1883, the sum of Eight Hundred Dollars ($800), at the same time and in like manner as the tax for current expenses of the city for the year 1883 is required by law to be assessed, levied and collected, and the moneys when collected shall be held and used as provided in Chapter 168 Laws of New Jersey for 1879.

Adopted June 4, 1883.
Approved June 5, 1883.

MR. THOMAS LYNNES, the new agent of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Company, seems to be the right man in the right place. A new horse, wagon and harness, is an evidence of the company's appreciation of his services. His office is No. 16 East Front street.

ONE of the most complete and conveniently arranged and indexed guides is that issued monthly by the National Railway Publication Company at $2.50 per annum. It is called the Ready Reference Guide, of 50 miles around New York, and sold at 25 cents a copy by the publishers, 46 Bond street.

AN observing editor says: "It is queer, how some people are inclined to take hints never intended for them, while those who are really aimed at never feel hit in the least. Newspaper publishers particularly find this true. When a dun is printed it is taken by those who always pay promptly, while the delinquents never think it means them.

AN exchange says that during the next few weeks will develope a number of falsifiers in the way of sweet girl graduate who will say—"And to you kind teachers, who have watched over us with such solicitous care, and have so carefully trained us to love the beautiful, the true and the good, we bid an affectionate, though sorrowful farewell."

IF birds are a protection from insects, Plainfield ought to be entirely exempt from pests this year. We never knew so many of the feathered songsters to make their homes in the splendid trees with which our sidewalks are lined. This fact is undoubtedly due in a great measure to the efforts of the Game Protective Societies in stopping the small boys from shooting the song birds and robbing their nests of eggs.

MESSRS. Curtiss & Griffen, the hardware merchants and dealers in house furnishing goods, of Front street, next to the post office, have just received from the manufacturer probably the handsomest wagon on our streets. It is a perfect thing of its kind, fully equipped, and is being used in the prompt delivery to customers of articles purchased at the establishment of this very enterprising and successful firm.

THE "open" or legal season for catching black bass with hook and line commenced June 1st, and numbers of this member of the finny tribe have already been taken from the waters in this section. Prominent piscatorialists, however, are of the opinion that June 1st is too early to begin angling for black bass, as they are not through spawning at that time. July 1st should be the commencement of the "open" season.

AS there seems to be a feeling existing regarding the refusal of the tenants of the Stillman Homestead property (the site of the proposed Opera House) to vacate the premises at once, we are requested by the tenants, Mrs. Fine, Milliner, and Miss Butts, dressmaker, to state that they hold a yearly lease on the property, and as it would seriously affect their business interests to at once vacate the premises during their busy season, is the reason of their refusal to do so without first being fairly recompensed for the damage to their business in removing from their present quarters.

THE New York Sun of Sunday last says: "The certificate of incorporation of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company was filed with the Kings county Clerk yesterday, its object being to construct telephone lines along all railroads, canals, rivers, bridges, highways, and streets in the states of New York and New Jersey, and in every village of the state, and between private and public buildings of the villages, and to connect all points with each other and with all telephone centres in the United States. The capital is fixed at $50,000, but may be increased to $20,000,000. The incorporators are Charles E. Cotier and Joel C. Clark, of South Framingham, Mass., Charles A. Nichols of Springfield, Mass., Morris F. Taylor of New Haven, and Alexander Cameron of Brooklyn."

Commencement.

Commencement this year, as announced by us some weeks ago, will be held in the Park avenue Baptist church, on the evening of Thursday, June 21st. The "sweet girl graduates" are now busily engaged in hunting up an assortment of awfully nice adjectives with which to stuff their essays.

The First of the Season.

Warren Engine Co., No. 3 opened the season of out-door festivities, by a grand picnic at Wooden's Grove, during the afternoon and evening of last Thursday. The attendance was unusually large, and all experienced an enjoyable time. Prof. Frazee of this city led the music for the dances, and entirely satisfied every demand made upon the ability of his orchestra.

Fine Head Covering.

M. Vermeule, the well-known hatter of Front street, opposite Somerset street, has laid in a large assortment of straw goods of every grade, which he is disposing of at extremely low prices. Judging from the crowds that visit his emporium each day, it is evident that the public know where to go for their head-wear. The latest styles of summer derby's and other hats may be found at Vermeule's.

Fatal Runaway.

Saturday afternoon last, as Mr. John West, a respected citizen of Basking Ridge, was driving a pair of spirited young horses to his home from Finderne, the animals took fright at the sudden breaking of the neck yoke fastening and became unmanageable, shied to one side and threw Mr. West out of the wagon between two large stones, along the highway. When picked up by passers-by he was unconscious and soon after died.

"Making the Most of One's Self."

On Tuesday evening, June 12th, Rev. Wm. Dayton Roberts of Philadelphia will deliver a lecture in the Lecture Room of the Young Men's Christian Association on "Making the Most of One's Self." This lecture is free to all, and young men and ladies are most cordially invited to attend. Mr. Roberts comes highly recommended, and this lecture is one brim full of good practical teachings. Remember the date on Tuesday, June 12th.

The L. L. Fair.

In the parlors of the Crescent avenue church, during Thursday afternoon and evening of last week, The Look-Out League held a fair, that in every particular was probably the most successful ever accomplished by private endeavor. The articles of handiwork offered for sale were all handsome, and in many cases unusually choice and elegant. The young ladies behind the tables were "just too lovely," and the younger ones that served the cream, cake and berries, were quite charming. The following morning $200 was handed the Treasurer of the Children's Home as a part of the profits; to which amount is to be added a substantial balance that will remain after the expenses incidental have been adjusted.

They Say

That the new managers of the C. R. R. of N. J., are considering the advisability of increasing the rates of commutation.

That the occupants of the Stillman Homestead hold a lease of the same, and demand $500 to move out.

That there is to be run a 5:15 p. m., express train from New York to this city.

That the success of the L. L. Fair, last Thursday evening, has never been excelled.

That Councilman Serrell thinks his "evidence" is proof.

That those who arrange an excursion from this city to Budd's Lake, will secure big patronage.

That the admired soprano of the Trinity church choir will sing at the "Olde Folks Concerts," this (Thursday) evening.

That the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher will lecture in the Congregational Chapel—next Fall.

The Lyon Concert.

The quality, if not the quantity, of the audience that gathered in the Park avenue church, Tuesday evening, was flattering evidence of the deserved recognition accorded the talents of Mr. David Lyon, as well as a manifestation that our public still delight in the performances of the New York Philharmonic Club. The programme was decidedly "classical" throughout, although, in spite of such fact, some of the numbers were rather enjoyable, and all were rendered with remarkable correctness.

Mrs. Cando, the contralto who has been heard in this city upon another occasion, gave two vocal compositions of Mr. Lyon's in a commendable manner; and, later in the evening, two unfortunate selections that were not so favorably received. The Club was, as usual, successful in all its efforts, but this evening was compelled to concede the greater part of the audience's approval to Mr. Lyon. That gentleman proved his right to the occupancy of high rank even among the most noted and talented of piano performers. Such perfection of execution as he displayed is rare, and worthy of much praise.

Personalia.

Mr. F. Busby of Denver, Col., with his family, is visiting friends in this city of which he was so long a resident.

At a recent meeting of bicyclists held in Orange for the purpose of forming a State Association, Mr. Harold Serrell of this city was elected Secretary.

The sincere thanks of the Senior is hereby tendered Mr. Wm. Dean, for the present of a fine and delicious Raritan shad caught by his own hands. It was very fine, "Billy."

The cellar of the residence of the Rev. A. V. Raymond was entered during last Saturday night, and the entire contents of the larder as well as all traces of the thief, disappeared.

Mr. Ford Babcock, the "junior" of the New Brunswick Fredonian, called on us Tuesday, looking as fat, happy and altogether prosperous as a man could desire. It just serves him right.

Miss Julia Bulkley, the Principal of our schools, is still very ill, but under direction of her capable assistant, Mr. Miller, preparation of the senior class for graduation progresses most favorably.

Mrs. Joseph Haines and Mrs. Kitse Ramsey have leased the Sheridan House at Elizabeth, and propose making it one of the most attractive and commodious boarding houses in the state. Success to them in their enterprise.

The wife of Justice L. F. Wadsworth, expired on Thursday morning after being a sufferer for a brief period from pneumonia. Mrs. W. was an exemplary woman, and was greatly beloved and respected by all who knew her. The bereaved husband and children have the sympathy of their many friends in their sudden affliction.

Mr. W. H. Brower, Councilman Livingston and ex-Councilman Knowland have returned from a fishing excursion to Greenwood Lake with the usual story of surpassing luck. We can, however, implicitly believe in the correctness of their amazing statistics, as they brought home the entire body of the fish to prove the tail and the scales to prove the weight. As to the flavor—a score of friends of the trio can testify it was quite too awfully delicately delicious.

Offending Bathers.

Police Captain W. S. Chase of this city with Constable P. Weaver of North Plainfield, arrested during Wednesday afternoon, a half-dozen of the lads who make a practice of bathing in their birthday suits, at the Water street bridge in broad day light. The prisoners were subsequently released with the promise of being severely dealt with if they again offended in the same manner.

Fortunately Not Fatal

A serious runaway occurred on Monday afternoon, which resulted in a narrow escape from death of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Taylor. While on their way to this city, a recently purchased team which Mr. Taylor was driving became unmanageable, and the occupants were thrown violently to the ground. Mrs. Taylor was severely cut about the head, and her husband thoroughly bruised and shaken up, but under the care of Dr. Probasco, both parties are doing remarkably well.

Picnic of Hose Co. No. 3.

The members of Warren Hose Co., No. 3, have had, during the past ten years, an amount of experience of just the kind that insures the success of every such affair they undertake. Consequently the annual picnic to be given by them in Wooden's Grove, next Thursday afternoon and evening, will undoubtedly be a grand occasion. Prof. Voss of Newark will furnish the music, the grounds will be illuminated during the night, and stages will run to and from the Grove. If stormy, the picnic will be postponed one week.

Assaulting a Woman.

During the early hours of Wednesday morning, a notorious woman of this city, who had been spending the previous afternoon and night in company of a young man, quarrelled with her escort on Front street near Peace, and claims to have been severely beaten in the face. Her screams aroused the residents in the vicinity from their slumbers, but failed to attract to the spot any of the police. The next morning a complaint was sworn to before Justice Wadsworth, by the woman, but further than this no steps in the matter have been taken.

Base Ball.

The Crescent nine of this city played a nine of the Roselle club, at that place, Saturday last; and although the Plainfielders were short their regular pitcher and owing to the illness of the short stop the positions of the players were necessarily changed, still it was again proven most obviously that our team for this year is a particularly strong one.

The following is the score by innings:

Crescents	2	3	5	1	0	4	2	1	3	21
Roselle	2	0	0	2	2	3	2	1	0	14

A game of local interest between the Crescents and the Potters, will probably be arranged for the 16th inst.

Telephone Matters.

The recently connected subscribers whose names do not appear in the last issue published of subscribers at the Plainfield exchange of the New Jersey Telephone Company are:

122—Ferdinand Fish, Park avenue.

125—A. M. Runyon & Son., Undertakers store, Front street.

123—A. M. Runyon & Son., residence, Madison avenue.

124—Mayor Wm. B. Maxson, office, Front street.

126—Thomas Brown, residence, Madison avenue.

132—Plainfield Hospital, No. 80 Somerset street.

133—John Dalbert, Ice Cream saloon, North avenue.

134—D. O. Wotherspoon. Front street.

The new subscribers to the Telephone Co. will be published in this paper every two weeks. An exchange is now established at Rahway, with lines under construction to Woodbridge, Amboy, Mattewan, Red Bank, Long Branch and Asbury Park.

Another New Enterprise.

On Tuesday last, Messrs. Chas. Wann, of North Plainfield, S. T. Hillman and F. E. Kinsman, of this city, were incorporated a body under the name of the "Mutual District Messenger Company of Plainfield, N. J." The object of the association is to furnish messenger service for Plainfield. This service is accomplished by each subscriber having in his house or place of business an electrical instrument, which indicates at the Central office the wish of the subscriber who makes a call from his place of residence. For instance, if a subscriber wants a carriage, doctor, mechanic, or any other want, he simply pulls a catch, after setting the hand on the dial of the indicator so that it points to the want desired. The summons is received at the Central Office, and a messenger boy at once dispatched to do the service. This system is patronized in New York and other large cities and is steadily increasing in patronage. The Company has a capital of $50,000, and propose charging subscribers $1 per month rental for the indicator, while the fee for the messenger service is to be at the rate of 30 cts per hour. We see no reason why this system should not be a success in Plainfield, especially as such an indefatigable worker as Mr. Charles Wann is at the head of it soliciting subscribers. It was this same gentleman who so successfully inaugurated the telephone system in this city, by securing a sufficient number of subscribers to warrant the Company in proceeding with the construction of a line. Operations on the messenger system will be at once commenced.

Stockholder's Meeting of the Music Hall Association.

Pursuant to a call issued by the Board of Directors, the Stockholders of the Music Hall Association met in the rooms of the Jerusalem Lodge last Friday evening, to transact such business in particular as the amending of the By-laws, and anything else that might be presented for action upon.

Among those present were Messrs. Chapman, Waring, Gilbert, Tweedy, Marsh, Potts, Berry and Hegeman of the Board of Directors.

In the absence of President Tyler of the Board, Secretary Marsh called the meeting to order and Mr. A. Gilbert was chosen Chairman. The call of the roll showed twenty-nine present, representing (with proxies) less than two-thirds of the total stock. The Chairman stated that the law required such a representation of interest to authorize an assessment, and suggested, in view of that fact, that a motion be made to adjourn to another time and place.

Mr. Chapman moved an adjournment to a number of evenings objections to all of which were made, and as it seemed possible that the interest desired could be obtained by going after it, the motion was tabled.

Upon the obtaining of the necessary proxies from absentees, Mr. Marsh moved that the Directors be authorized to levy an assessment of $50 on each share of stock to be called at such times and in such amounts as the Board might direct.

Mr. Murray moved that the assessments be not more that 25 per cent at a time, nor oftener than once in thirty days; which amendment was accepted as a part of the original motion.

The motion was unanimously carried.

Mr. Milliken moved that out of respect to the Seventh Day Baptist stockholders, further business be suspended, and the meeting adjourned to the evening of Saturday, June 9th, at the Common Council rooms, at eight o'clock.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 7TH.

The End of the Building Loan.

MESSRS EDITORS: When three months ago the present management took hold of the Building Loan, its affairs seemed in a truly chaotic condition. Rough and rugged indeed was the road to a final settlement of its affairs and the prospect was dark and gloomy. With almost unparalleled resolution and consummate skill, under the leadership of Mr. G. Bachman, one of the most accomplished financiers which it is the pride of Plainfield to possess, the present Board of Directors, aided by the legal astuteness of its solicitor, went to work determined to leave no effort untried to work order and harmony out of the confusion before them, and it is my pleasure to record their success. In that brief space of time a full settlement and adjustment of its affairs has been attained, and on Tuesday evening the last meeting of the Board was held and the end reached.

The first series pays a pro rata of $1.44 and the second $8.97 per share.

The ability displayed in such a result should not be left unemployed, and we hope a new Building Loan, so much needed in our city, will at once be started. The past experience can be turned to good account.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS EDITORS: An item appears in this week's issue of the Central Times saying complaints of subscribers to the Telephone Company are made, that eavesdroppers take off messages they have no business to hear. The report which evidently prompted the editor of the paper to publish the item being made known to me was thoroughly investigated, and I find the story which occasioned the rumor emanated from other sources than the Telephone. While I think it but right for proprietors of newspapers to also investigate matters of this kind before making them public, I will say that now none but employees of this Company are allowed at the switch-boards in the Company's office. Employees mentioning any conversation excepting of a public nature, will be discharged. The operating rooms of the company are always open to the public, and where subscribers are all cordially invited.

Yours Respectfully,
PERCY C. OHL,
Manager.

Thanks.

HEADQUARTERS WINFIELD SCOTT POST, No. 73,
DEPARTMENT NEW JERSEY, G. A. R.

COMRADES: Your Commander thanks you for your prompt and hearty response to his orders for Memorial Services and your soldierly bearing and gentlemanly deportment on both occasions of our appearance in public. It proves the spirit of "twenty years ago" burns as brightly as it did when you left all behind and followed where the Stars and Stripes led. The country was saved then by your patriotism and valor and it is still with safe keepers. To the Memorial Detail much credit is due and they will please accept our congratulations and thanks, as also the Marshall and his aids for their admirable arrangement and order, and the officers of the Post for their able and efficient support. We most heartily thank Mrs. Olsson for her great aid in contributing, as she did, so much to the pleasure and beauty of the services. The children—God bless the children—they did well and behaved well. Rev. Mr. Raymond will please accept our thanks for his help and for his kind and cheering words from his pulpit Sunday evening, May 27th. It strengthened us and we all hope to hear his words of wisdom again. We freely accord our thanks to Mr. Maxson for his able and acceptable address; he will please accept them. And finally, all who contributed in any way to the occasion, will please accept our thanks.

W. E. MATTISON,
Commander.

Paralytic Stroke.

Mr. Clifford B. Rogers, conductor on the Central Railroad, and who has been in the service of the same since 1875, had his left side paralyzed last Friday evening, on leaving his train at Jersey City. Mr. Rogers was in charge of a Roselle local train. He was attended by a physician, and afterward conveyed to his home at Roselle, where he has a wife and child.

Music Hall Finances.

The Treasurer of the Orange Music Hall Association, Mr. T. S. Root, has just prepared his statements for the financial year now closing, which shows a prosperous season from the Hall, the receipts having amounted to nearly $8,899 34, the net profits of which were $3,840 98. This is an extremely gratifying exhibit, and the directors deemed it advisable to apply $4,000 of the cash in hand to the payment of fifty shares of the preferred stock, which will add eight per cent. to the value of that remaining and leave only $10,000 of the preferred stock outstanding.—Orange Chronicle.

Another life saved. J. C. Gray, of Dadeville, Ala., writes he: I have been using your Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, and can say, of a truth, it is far superior to any other Lung preparation in the world. My mother was confined to her bed four weeks with a cough, and had every attention by as good physicians as there are in the country, and they all failed to effect a cure; but when I got one bottle of your Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, she began to mend right away. I can say in truth, that it was the means of saving her life. I knew of five cases that Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam has cured, and my mother is better now than she has been before for twenty years.

Catarrh of the bladder, stinging irritation, inflammation, all kidney and urinary complaints, cured by "Buchu-paiba." $1.

A dangerous counterfeit. There are dangerous counterfeits in circulation, purporting to be "Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer." The strongest evidence of its great value is the fact that parties knowing its great efficacy try to imitate it. Each bottle of the genuine has a fac simile of a walnut leaf—blown in the glass; and a Green Leaf on the outside wrapper. The "Restorer" is as harmless as water, while it possesses all the properties necessary to restore life, vigor, growth and color to the hair. Purchase only from respectable dealers. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. Johnston, Holloway & Co., Philadelphia, and Hall & Ruckel, New York, wholesale agents.

POETRY.

KEROSENE CAROL.

Oh, she was a maiden fair to view,
With her blonde black hair and her eyes of blue;
But, alas! our life is but a span—
She started a fire with a coal-oil can.

And when the coroner came to see,
He rubbed his hands with ghastly glee;
"Oh, I should be a mournful man
If I got no help from the coal oil can."

Then mum, the sexton, came in time
To help us finish this rustic rhyme,
Singing, "Nothing fills graves faster than
The blasting breath of a coal-oil can."

Many men kill themselves for love, but many more women die of it.

The most dangerous flattery is the inferiority of those who surround us.

A sunny face—the outward latch which invites to the home of the heart.

We generally think better of ourselves than we are willing to acknowledge.

The most important part of every business is to know what ought to be done.

To-morrow is not elastic enough in which to press the neglected duties of to-day.

It is not what you have in bank, but what you have in your heart, that makes you a man.

The least error should humble, but we should never permit even the greatest to discourage us.

That was a good prescription given by a physician to a patient, "Do something for somebody."

A solid and substantial greatness of soul looks down with neglect on the censures and applauses of the multitude.

HAD HEARD HIM.

A hard featured man, dressed in a new suit of very cheap black, called at the house of a well-known minister, and, upon giving his name, was invited to a seat in the gentleman's study.

"I have a few days to spend in the city," said Mr. Prickle, the visitor, "and I did not want to leave without calling and paying my respects to you. I have heard you preach many a time. I like your preaching, and, though I do not belong to your church, yet I must say that you preach the best sermon I have ever heard."

"Yes," the good man repeated; and as a bell tinkled he arose and said: "Come out, my friend, and take dinner with me."

Mr. Prickle went out, received an introduction to the preacher's family, and began to eat with an avidity that attracted attention.

"You say that you have heard me preach many a time?" remarked the minister.

"Oh, yes," the man replied, shoving a fork full of mashed potatoes into his mouth.

"I don't remember ever having seen you at my church. I suppose you heard me in the country."

"No," said the visitor, chewing a mouthful of green peas, "not in the country."

"Certainly not in town."

"Well, sorter yes and sorter not. You know you preached at the penitentiary for some time. I was in there for stealing a wagon, and finished my time today. Thank you for the bread."—Arkansaw Traveller.

SLOW, BUT GETS THERE.

Going down the great Jackson route from Grenada, Miss., writes a correspondent, a regular old homespun native of the state entered the sleeping car and paid for a berth. He had never been inside of a car of the kind, and everything astonished him. When the porter came to make up the beds I saw that the native was greatly perplexed, but as he made no direct appeal it wasn't my duty to post him. He was the first one to make preparations for bed. He glanced anxiously around, pulled off one boot, and then took a rest for five minutes. When the other boot came off he had solved the problem. Pushing his boots under the berth he started for the rear platform, and nothing was heard from him for about ten minutes. Then he put his head into the door and called out:

"All you 'uns in thar', look out for I'm coming!"

And come he did. He had disrobed while standing on the platform, made a bundle of coat, vest and pants, and as he shot into bed after a run up the aisle he gurgled out:

"Old Mississip may be a little slow, but she allus gits thar' just the same!"

FASHION NOTES.

Red in all shades is much worn.

Shoes to match dresses grow in favor.

The simpler the hairdressing the better.

Trains are only fashionable for married ladies.

Bronze and carnation pink is a pretty combination.

Cream white cashmeres made quite plain are worn.

The preferred gloves are in cool shades of gray and tan, chamois and buff.

Japanese curtains are very pretty and light and suitable for summer wear.

Scarlet and white matting is now the most fashionable carpeting for the bedrooms.

The exaggerated styles of the court of Marie Antoinette are very popular in Paris.

The taste for mahogany red, terra cotta and brick-colored gloves is on the wane.

Yokes of children's dresses are square or round, high or deep, according to fancy.

Vests are popular for summer dresses. They are generally of the trimming material.

Broad sash ribbons, with large fruit designs, looking as if hand-painted, are extensively worn.

Olive shades combine well with the new shades of strawberry, terra cotta and shrimp pink.

A new table cover is embroidered in a design of frogs in all attitudes and at all angles, skipping over it.

Oval mirrors are placed over the mantle, and flanked on either side by tall, old-fashioned candlesticks.

Children's white caps have flaring ruffles of embroidery across the front in floss silk or worsted, in sunflowers, poppies, buttercups or other bright flowers.

The latest style for bureau covers and tidies consists in the introduction of colored designs either in the borderings or centers. These colored designs are either oval or square, and are surrounded by a pattern to be worked in silks, flosselles or crewels to match them in colors.

SOCIETY NOTE.

Johnny Fizzletop accompanied his sister to a party at the residence of Col. Percy Yenger. In accordance with the prevailing fashion the ladies wore low-necked dresses, very much to the astonishment of the aforesaid Johnny. Next morning, at the breakfast table, Johnny, being engaged in reading the morning paper, asked:

"Pa, what do they mean by unanimous?"

"Unanimous, my son—well, when everybody wants the same thing, then they are said to be unanimous."

"Well then, those ladies at the ball last night were unanimous, for they all wanted the same thing."

"What was it, my son?"

Prudery is a perfume that conceals vitiated air.

An obstinate man does not hold opinions; they hold him.

It is easier to suppress the first desire than to satisfy all that follow.

The world does not require so much to be informed as to be reminded.

Private prayer is your chief preservation from sin, temptation and error.

It is a truth but too well known, that rashness attends youth, as prudence does old age.

FRIGHTENING CHILDREN.

A lady in this city overheard her nurse-girl talking to the little child she was putting to sleep, and among other legends of the nursery in which she indulged, was this:

"If you don't go right to sleep this very minute, a great big, awful black bear, with eyes like coals of fire, and sharp, white, cruel teeth, will come out from under the bed and eat-you-all-up!"

The poor little thing nestled under the clothes, and after a long season of terror fell asleep, to dream frightful dreams of bears eating her.

That night when the stolid nurse had composed herself in her own comfortable bed, and had put the light out, there came a sudden rap at the door, and the voice of the mistress called loudly at the door:

"Maggie! Maggie! for mercy's sake get up as quick as you can! There's a fearful burglar under the bed, and as soon as you get asleep he's coming out to rob and murder you!"

At the word burglar the girl sprang from the bed with a scream, tore open the door, and fell into hysterics in the hall.

The lesson was even more instructive than the mistress had designed, but when the girl's fears were calmed, she said to her:

"You did not hesitate to tell my little delicate child, who could not possibly know that it was a lie, a cruel story of a bear under her bed; now, when I treat you in the same kind of a slumber story, you are nearly frightened to death. To-morrow you can go into the kitchen and work; you are not fit to care for little children."

How many children are there who, every night of their lives, are frightened to death.

The reason men succeed who mind their own business, is because there is so little competition.

An up-town merchant was walking down Wall street a few minutes after 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. "Why, how are you, Mr. C.?" exclaimed a member of the Stock Exchange as the two met at the corner of Broad street.

"Very well! how are you?"

"In the best of health. By the bye, what are you doing down here?"

"I think I will speculate a little in stocks this afternoon."

"Too late," replied the broker, "it's after 3 o'clock."

"Oh!" ejaculated the merchant as he walked on, "tis never too late to speculate in your mind, and it don't cost anything."

HERE AT LAST.
AFTER LONG AND WEARY WAITING RELIEF IS BROUGHT TO THOSE WHO NEED IT.
"Well, Pat," said an Orange county Physician to a complaining Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when its too late for me to see it."
When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, the rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days, for all affections to which a plaster is ever applicable. Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A ROMANCE OF HISTORY.

It was nutting time.

The blooming band of peasant children had gathered from far and near to have a merry day amid the nut trees and hedges.

I say children—but girls of fifteen and lads of eighteen and twenty were scattered through the group.

The nut harvest was a joyful time to them.

The young are always attractive in a certain way. The undimmed brightness of the eye—the happy smiles hovering around the rosy lips—each has a beauty to itself; but add to the youthful face the charm of chiseled features, and of lustrous brown eyes, looking out upon the world with an innocent wonder at the changing scenes of loveliness so constantly unfolding themselves before them—frame it in a mass of shining, wavy gold of nature's own crimping—and poise it upon a form so lithe and slender in its exquisite grace that Praxiteles might have chosen it as his model—and you can form an idea of Rika Bremer—the acknowledged beauty of the whole surrounding country.

And there was a romantic story about her going the rounds.

It was said that no less a personage than Prince Eric, the son of the great and good Gustavus, had been standing one morning by one of the palace windows to witness a rustic procession, which had been gotten up in honor of some important victory, recently won by his famous father; and as he stood listlessly gazing out, his eyes brightened suddenly, and he turned to an attendant and whispered a few words which caused him to hasten away. When he returned he was not alone—Rika was with him.

Prince Eric's beauty-loving eyes had been attracted by her, as she had stood amid a group of other maidens, looking at the gaily dressed columns of her countrymen filing by.

She, too, was in holiday attire; and the black velvet jacket, fitting closely to her slender figure, and adorned with silver-gilt buttons, brought out so vividly the excellent fairness of her skin, with its rose-leaf tints of red upon her lips and cheeks, that she looked like of a different sphere as she stood amid her mates.

Confused and blushing, she now awaited the princes, pleasure. She dared not raise her eyes to his face.

Had she done so she would have been overpowered by the earnestness of the gaze with which he regarded her.

From the moment his eyes rested upon Rika's face, the world held out one peerless woman to him.

It mattered not that his younger brother Duke John, was even then in another kingdom, wooing for him a royal bride, upon whose brow rested a diadem, whose splendor far exceeded the one which he was to inherit upon the death of his father.

No. In that moment Elizabeth of England was forgotten. The peasant maid who stood before him had become the queen of his fancy.

'Thy name, little one?' he asked.

Rika raised her eyes to the handsome, earnest face, but dropped them timidly as she met his glance.

'I am Frederika—the forester's daughter—your Majesty.'

'Nay, not yet crave I for the title, madam. Young blood must have its vent, and I am glad to know that the cares of government are not soon to rest upon my shoulders, broad though they be.'

With a smile he glanced at his stalwart frame, which was acknowledged to be one of the finest specimens of physical comeliness in the country as was his face called the handsomest of any prince's in Europe.

Rika courtesied respectfully, but did not reply.

If the gracious prince chose to address as an equal one of the humblest of his father's subjects, she knew well her position, and was to the full as proud of her unsullied ignorance and integrity as the haughtiest maid in the relm.

Her shy modesty added to her beauty in Eric's eyes.

'Where livest thou, Frederika?' he asked, softly; 'for I would like to send my father a commission to fell some trees which must interfere with the comfort of the king's hunting parties in the forest.'

This he said, knowing intuitively that it would startle Rika to give her his true reason and say that he intended to start out himself in quest of fairer and more precious game, which must be ensnared in tenderer toils than those at the command of the keenest sportsman of his father's court.

After a few words more he suffered Rika to go. But the sweetest memory of her presence went not with her. It nestled deep within his heart.

After this interview, scarcely a week passed that did not find Eric's steps turned in the direction of the forrester's cottage.

A glass of milk from Rika's own white hands was the draught most preferred by the Royal hunter—although, out of courtesy, he would sometimes accept a mug of mead from the sturdy old father.

Matters were in this stage at the time our story opens.

The nuts were gathered, and the groups had dispersed to their various homes, with the understanding that they should meet again the next day and go together to the palace and dispose of their treasures.

The next morning found them on their way, dressed in their best as became so eventful an occasion in their unusually monotonous lives; for royalty has such a glamur to uninitiated eyes that the mere sight of the walls which shut it in is eagerly conveted.

It was a pretty sight to any one who might have been stationed at the window to see that blooming procession of neatly dressed lads and lassies, as they wended along with many a merry laugh and jest, until at last they halted in the great square before the palace.

But to the watching eye of the Prince who had received a hint of the coming of the nut gatherers—there was but one face worth looking at among the throng.

'Come', he said to the courtiers who were standing near, 'let's go down to the square in a body and make the hearts of your merry rustics even merrier to-day by exchanging some coins for the nuts they have with them.'

A prince's suggestion never lacks for listeners, nor for followers: and soon the rich toilettes of the court people were scattered about amidst the crowd in the square.

Eric's steps were at once turned towards Rika.

He soon possessed himself of her nuts and after paying for them lavishly in golden coins, he took from an inner pocket a locket and chain, which he gave to her, saying:

'Wear it for my sake. There is no one who would look fairer in it. You ought to be a queen, little Rika, and I will make you one.'

Before Rika had time to realize aught but that his words had filled her heart with a bewildering sense of happiness, he had gone, his gift alone remained to prove that she had not been dreaming.

But she soon came to her sober senses.

It was well-known that King Gustavus had been holding negotiation with the maiden Queen of England, to induce her to bestow her jeweled hand upon his elder son, and it had reached Rika's ears.

Such a thing had been known as a maid of low degree being wooed and won by a royal suitor. The tale of Grisel's happiness, and of her woes as well, was a favorite one among the folk-stories told around the humble hearths of the peasantry; and if fate had ordained it to happen to her also, Rika would have been as glad and proud a maiden as ever the sun shone on. But she would listen to no words of love from one whose hand was as good as given to another.

Thus she thought as she walked slowly homeward.

So the next day a little barefooted boy—the child of a neighboring farmer—was sent to the palace by Rika with Prince Eric's gift, carefully tied up in a piece of linen cloth cut from the corner of a web, which she herself had woven from flax raised from the seed and prepared by her own deft hands.

Could the unconcious trinket have told Eric that Rika's bright eyes had lingered lovingly and regretfully upon it, and that she had pressed it to her red lips again and again, it might have lessened his chagrin in receiving his present back again.

As it was it only kindled anew his determination to win Rika for his own, be the consequences what they might. It should not be said of him that a lowly peasant girl had given him, the Crown Prince of Sweden, such a rebuff.

He threw a large cloak over his rich court suit; and thus disguised he mounted Olaf, his favorite hunter, and hastened towards Rika's home.

Hot anger was contending with his love for the rustic beauty as he rode along.

But when he at last reached the borders of the cleared patch of land in the forest which held the little cottage, had dismounted from his horse and tied him to a sapling, and found himself standing at the door, awaiting an answer to his rap, all was forgotten in the thought that he was soon to gaze upon the beautiful face which had haunted his fancy so persistently since fate had first brought it before him.

Rika opened the door and stood for an instant in glad surprise, gazing up into her lover's face in utter forgetfulness of the differences in their stations.

'Ah! little one, thy face for once tells me all that I wish to know. Thou lovest me. I see it in those eyes.'

And before Rika had time to retreat he caught her to his heart and imprinted passionate kisses on her trembling lips.

She drew herself from his encircling arms, and stood panting like a frightened fawn.

Then she threw herself at his feet, and clasping her hands entreatingly she said:

'Oh, most noble Prince, let it not be put against thy record that innocence and virtue received no respect at thy hands. Go, I entreat you! Should my father return and find thee here, he would surely first kill me, and then kill himself in shame and despair. Oh, go!'

'I mean thee no harm, Rika. I love thee; and when one loves he hurts not the object of that love.' To win thee I will give up my heirship to the crown to my brother John; and while he wears the diadem upon his brow, I will content my self with love and happiness with thee.'

'Not so, noble Eric,' said Rika, firmly; 'if thou wouldst make such a sacrifice, I, for one, will not be a party to it. After such a marriage—entailing as it would, so much loss—love would prove but a transient guest without a home. Reproaches would drive the fickle god away.'

'Tell me the truth, Rika,' interrupted Eric, with passionate earnestness, 'do you love me?'

'So well that I would rather die than harm would come to one so noble through any influence of mine.'

'And yet you refuse to make me happy?'

'I refuse to work your ruin, noble Prince. The present is not all of life. But see—the sunlight has already reached the middle point of your dial! In ten more minutes my father will be here. If thou wouldst shield me from harm, go.'

'I will obey now; but I will not give up the hope which lured me hither. Farewell for a time most obdurate maiden.'

Then with a long, lingering, regretful look, the Prince turned and departed.

Days and weeks passed on.

At last came a time which was to plunge the nation into mourning. The good and great Gustavus was stricken with a mortal illness.

He died, and was laid beside his kingly progenitors, and Eric was the reigning sovereign in Sweden.

Young, impulsive, and his own master, with his heart filled with but one image, is it to be wondered at that he suffered no obstacle to delay the union with the maiden of his love, after the days of his mourning were fully accomplished, and that the pretty nut-girl of Sweden became its crowned Queen!

Search the annals of history, and you will find the romantic story of the marriage on record, adding still another folk-tale to those the country maidens tell over to each other at the watching time between daylight and starlight, when all nature is going to rest, and your hearts are attoned to sympathy with all true lovers.

DON'T FIND FAULT.

In the first place, does it pay to be continually finding fault? It is a very easy matter to pick flaws in any piece of work, for no one's work is perfect. Fault-finding often becomes chronic and grows on a man just as an evil habit does, increasing day by day. There is nothing so disagreeable as to visit a home where fault finding is continually going on; where, at the breakfast, dinner and tea table, no pleasant word is spoken, but instead each one is finding fault with the other for some trifling error. I do not mean that error should not be rebuked, but when the evening twilight is gathering, when the work of the day is over, then kindly call the little one around you and gently and solemnly tell them of their wrongs, and see if you are not much better repaid than if the little heads had dropped all day at the angry glances and frowns on your face. There are many things every day that annoy us, but don't make life sadder by finding fault. The world might seem much pleasanter at all times if we would forget to fret, frown and find fault.

—Carpets—Conductors.

GIRLS AND BOYS.

Our deadliest enemies are our boys. Girls indeed are often a great nuisance to a father; they have to be fed, doctored, clothed, educated, if possible married, and, if nobody will have them, provided for as old maids. All this means a good deal of worry, no doubt. But, on the other hand, a daughter, if of a fairly good disposition, and not absolutely repulsive to look at, is often a great convenience in a house. She sees to the warming of her father's slippers, is always ready to sew a button on his shirt, or find his spectacles, or docket his papers or, in fact, do any of these innumerable things which wives forget to do, and which no servant can be trusted to do properly. Moreover, a girl's pleasures are usually quiet and unobtrusive. And even if she be a little high-spirited, a man must indeed be a nincompoop if he can't snub and bully his own daughter into a complete sacrifice of her whims to his convenience. There is this, too, to be remembered, that a daughter, if moderately well treated by nature in point of appearance and by her parents in point of clothes, is often quite a credit to an old gentleman as he walks down the street with her, arm-in-arm. This is a matter to which fathers are often keenly alive. For be it observed that no one can get much dash out of a wife when once "the spread of age," as it is called, has taken fairly hold of her. For these and other reasons it often happens that a father is quite fond of his daughter, and almost grudges her to the husband who is prepared to take her without a penny.

But a son stands on a very different footing. Look at him from what point of view you please, a boy is an unmitigated nuisance. Of course, it is always possible that some good may grow out of him, as mushrooms of manure. When he ceases to be a boy, and grows to man's estate, he may become a very amiable member of society. But where is a father's satisfaction in that? When the youngster grows up he takes to paddling his own canoe, and might just as well be somebody else's son for any benefit his parents get out of him." This is a sad truth, which father's are not slow to anticipate.

In Austin, nobody thinks there is anything odd in the expression, "He plays poker like a member of the 18th Legislature."

An Ohio man has taken the small-pox from a pet pig. When once this disease gets in a family it is pretty sure to go through it.

Cincinnati has a deaf and dumb lawyer. It has been suggested that the Government ought to employ him in the next Star-route case.

Some one wants to know why Nilsson announces every concert she gives in Boston as a "farewell." Because she does fare well every time.

"Is it a crime to be a woman?" asks Mrs. Blake. Not, we think, if she sincerely repents, asks to be forgiven, and promises not to be so again.

"Dwo vas schoost enough, bud dree vas too blendty," remarked Hans, when his best girl asked him to take her mother along with him to the dance.

Rev. Dr. Pusey left a personal estate of more than $80,000. All his property goes to his daughter, Miss Mary Amelia Brine. That is to say it is all salted down.

The poet said that cleanliness was next to godliness. This is not to be understood to apply to the kind of godliness represented in the top gallery of a theatre.

When a man dies, men inquire what he has left behind him, angels inquire what he has sent before him, and the devil inquired what he has brought along with him.

This summer farmers will offer special boarding rates to dudes, as several of these creatures will make it unnecessary for the farmers to make and set up scare-crows.

When Carlyle said that everybody should have an aim in life he had no reference to the fair sex. He had doubtless often seen a woman trying to throw a stone at a hen.

"Yes," said a Vermont clergyman, "I consider it all right for a minister of the gospel to trade horses: but, as a matter of policy, he should trade with some one outside of his own congregation."

A "young inquirer" wants to know "when is a man most truthful?" When he is asleep, boy; when he's asleep. And don't you trust him too far even then. His wife doesn't. Often and often, when he has impressed her with profound conviction that he is so sound asleep that thunder couldn't wake one eye of him, she hasn't more, than got her hand into the breast pocket of his coat before he snarls "Out o' that, now!" and scares her into a thousand fits. Man is a very uncertain piece of property under any circumstances, and he's safest when he's dead. That is, most men are.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

DEMOCRACY.

Democracy is the party of the people and the fearless defender of liberty and the Constitution.

That it was at first, and in spite of opposition the most bitter and ungenerous, that it has continued to be and so remains at the present day.

We are bound to admit that men prominent as professing Democrats, and honored as such, have at times wandered from the straight path of political rectitude, but we do assert that the rank and file, the honest masses of the party, have ever stood faithful to the patriotic principles of Jefferson, which are the essentials of free government.

Men may change and must die.

Principles cannot do either.

Loyalty to civil and religious liberty, to justice and honesty in the enactment and execution of law, to the general public good, and to an equality of rights and privileges among all the people, is the proud record and purpose of Democracy.

That was Democracy in 1787, when the Constitution first drew the breath of life, and it is Democracy in 1883.

It stands unchanged as stands the granite hills.

And that is why the Democratic party has outlived every species of hostility and now lifts high its banner of organization in all the States of the Union.

"Principles not men" is the badge worn by every true Democrat.

The Constitution, as it actually reads, is his political guide.

The preservation of Freedom his registered vow.

The honor of country and the individual welfare of each citizen his earnest aim.

TARIFA.

To provide for public debt charges, pensions, and the legitimate current expenses of government, necessitates the raising of a large annual revenue.

To accomplish that, the levying of duties on foreign importations offers the customary and most feasible plan.

To realize such needed revenue demands the existence of a fully proportioned tariff.

There is no doubt about that.

Ultra free trade means the abolition of all duties, and, consequently, of all revenue therefrom.

It would involve the imposition of direct taxation.

It is impracticable and finds favor with theorists only.

Ultra protection means the virtual prohibition of general imports through excessive rates of duty, and would, like free trade, create the necessity of direct taxation to a large extent.

It also lacks practicability.

A tariff for revenue, so justly arranged in details as to give incidental, reliable and ample protection to every American industry, without forcing any to pay tribute to others, would furnish financial resources for the honest wants of government, and at the same time, confer wholesome and durable encouragement upon every species of labor, enterprise and invested capital.

That is practicable and equitable.

It is Constitutional.

It is Democratic.

THANKS.

Our Republican editorial friends throughout the country are very kind, evincing as they do great anxiety to relieve Democratic Representatives from the arduous task of selecting a Speaker for the next House of Congress.

It is exceedingly kind on their part, if not entirely disinterested, yet, nevertheless, must be declined with thanks for four very positive reasons, namely—

The incoming House of Representatives will be overwhelmingly Democratic.

It will directly represent the popular will.

Among its members will be several Democrats eminently fitted to fill with credit the Speaker's chair.

Its majority being Democratic, will make manifest the old-fashioned Democratic virtue of promptly assuming and faithfully discharging each and every obligation of duty, looking alone to the people for reward, and caring first and foremost for the general public good.

Renewing thanks to our friends of opposing political faith, we must beg them to keep cool and sedate through the heated term, and assure themselves of the fact, that the next House of Representatives will readily designate and surely elect a sound and competent Democrat to wear the honors of the third officer known to the Constitution

JERSEY CENTRAL BONDS.

A conference was held June 7th, at the offices of the Central Railroad Co. of New Jersey, between President Gowen, a committee representing the American income bondholders and Edward K. Bacon, representing the English bondholders.

President Gowen proposed the following terms, which will probably be accepted by the American Committee and Mr. Bacon: That the company first pay 10½ per cent. for back interest in 6 per cent. scrip, interest from May 1, 1883, convertible into stock of the company on and after January 1, 1885, with proper provision against duplication of interest and dividends for the same period. Second. Then the present bond to be stamped with an agreement that hereafter it shall draw 6 per cent. instead of 7 per cent.; that it shall not be paid until 1908, and that the holder on and after January 1, 1885, and until January, 1907, can convert it at par into stock at par, with proper provision against duplication of interest and dividend for the same period.

CHANGE OF OFFICIALS.

Gen. Manager Wooten of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad on Friday last issued an order by which the C. R. R. of N. J. and its leased lines were put under the management of the Reading, and separated into divisions. W. W. Stearns, formerly General Superintendent of all the Central roads, is designated as Superintendent of the New Jersey Central Division, which is to include the main line, South Branch, High Bridge Branch, N. Y. & Long Branch road, and the ferries, with headquarters at Elizabeth. W. S. Polhemus is appointed Supt. of the L. & S. Division, including the L. & S. and all its branches, with headquarters at Mauch Chunk. Rufus Blodgett is retained as Superintendent of the N. J. S. Division, consisting of the N. J. S. Railway and its branches, with headquarters at Manchester, Ocean county.

GROVE STREET BRIDGE.

Now that the Somerset County Board of Freeholders have reconsidered the resolution passed by the old Board, which demanded that work be resumed on the Grove street bridge according to original plans and specifications, and have also decided to meet in a body at the site next Monday and view the premises, it is earnestly to be hoped that the wishes of a majority of the tax-payers interested, will be acceded to, and a new structure, the entire width of the street, be ordered erected. We understand that three, at least, of the members of the present Board, who are new members, have never seen the bridge in its present condition, and therefore an opportunity will now be afforded them to pass judgment upon the merits or demerits of the structure. The Union County Board are in favor of a wider bridge. Let us hope the present Somerset Board will be of the same opinion after next Monday.

COAL COMBINATION.

Another coal combination is on the point of completion. The conspirators are the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western and Reading Roads. The Lehigh Valley will act with them, and it is not thought that the Pennsylvania Coal Company will hold out. By the lease of the Central, it is stated that the Reading now controls 44.21-100 of the actual coal production. The only thing which prevents a complete monopoly of the coal business is the fact that the bituminous production is too large to be controlled.

The terms of the recent acquirement of the Philadelphia and Atlantic City Railroad by the C. R. R. of N. J. are said to be as follows: The Jersey Central people agreed to pay Mr. Edward Massey, the principal owner of the Philadelphia and Atlantic City, $475,000 for his stock and bonds. The company, it is said, has given him $75,000 in cash, and proposes to pay him the remainder in a new issue of Philadelphia and Atlantic City Railroad bonds. The purchasing company also agreed to pay another party about $162,000 in Philadelphia and Atlantic City Railroad stocks and bonds and $25,000 in cash. President Gowen, of the Philadelphia Reading, proposes to make the Philadelphia and Atlantic City a standard guage road next Fall.

The Jersey Central Railroad Co. has notified Charles Parrish that three months from the 1st of June that company will take complete possession of its coal property. This property is known as the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Coal Company, the mines of which are located at Wilkesbarre, and have been operated under contract by Charles Parrish since the Jersey Central went into the hands of a Receiver. A clause in the agreement between Mr. Parrish and the railroad company states that either party may relinquish upon three months notice, and the Jersey Central takes advantage of this. It is stated by those in authority that the company by mining its own coal will save at least $1,000,000 per year.

John F. Babcock, editor of the New Brunswick Fredonian, has been appointed Postmaster of New Brunswick, in place of the absconding P. M., Levi D. Jarrard. The appointment meets with the approbation of the entire community of New Brunswick, and Middlesex county. No better or more efficient man could have been picked out for the position. His only fault is that of being a Stalwart Republican but then after 1884 he will see the error of his ways probably. We congratulate you, Bro. Babcock, on the appointment.

During the thunder storm last Sunday night lightning struck the house of Simeon Earls, near Flatbrookville, Sussex county. Earls and his wife and little daughter were lying upon the floor. Earls was instantly killed and the woman and little girl were injured by the shock. The dead man was a laborer, with six or seven children. Boards were torn from the house by the stroke and thrown across the road.

The reduction of the National debt in the eleven months ending on May 31, amounted to $115,725,000, and the surplus for the entire year will not exceed $125,000,000, a sum slightly in excess of Secretary Folger's original estimate, which has been affected by legislation and the varying demands of the Pension Office. The receipts for the present fiscal year have been nearly equal thus far to those of the last year, except in the Customs division, where the decrease is already about $10,000,000.

The Ohio Republican State Convention last week nominated J. B. Foraker, of Cincinnati, for Governor, and declared in favor of a tariff "which will provide a revenue for the Government, and at the same time will protect American producers and American labor."—The word "manufacturer" is not used, and the plank, on the whole, may be explained by the Republican tricksters as convenience may require.

N. L. Dukes, the assassin of Capt. A. C. Nutt, at Uniontown, Pa., December last, was shot and killed last Wednesday, by Nutt's eldest son, James, aged 20 years, who fired five shots from a revolver at Dukes as he was passing along the street, three of which passed clear through his victim's body. Public opinion is with young Nutt who surrendered himself after the shooting.

The Massachusetts House has passed a bill to increase the pay of members of the Legislature from $500 to $750. It will make a difference, if it becomes a law, of about seventy-five thousand dollars a year to the State Treasury.—Should the Senate concur, it is believed the bill will run against a snag when it reaches Governor Butler.

The first conviction in the State under the new law to prevent the sale of pistols to minors, took place in Paterson last week, where a junk dealer was fined ten dollars and costs for its violation. It should be strictly enforced. The new law to prevent the sale of cigarettes to minors goes into effect on July 4th.

The jury in the Star route trials are deliberating upon what their verdict shall be. One of the jurors, named Vernon, created a sensation on Wednesday, by falling to the floor in a faint, caused by the too sudden stoppage of his whiskey rations, which he was in the habit of imbibing.

The high license fee bill, having passed the House of the Illinois Assembly, has also been advanced to a third reading in the Senate, which ensures its ultimate passage. The Governor favors the bill.

A large turtle was found the other day on the farm of George M. Van Campen, in Pahaquarry township. On the hard shell was carved 1765. The figures are in the old style the 7 and the 5 extending below the line of the other numerals. It is thought that they were cut in the year which they indicate.

Upon the "Polly Ham farm," on Schooley's Mountain, there stands a chestnut tree which is 33 feet in circumference at its base. At the height of ten feet it has six branches, the circumference of which aggregate fifty-four feet, or an average of nine feet each. The tree bears an excellent crop of chestnuts every year.

In the Hudson County Court Monday last ex-Judge Garretson moved to quash the indictment against Francis Meehan for allowing a prisoner, on payment of $1, to escape from the penitentiary while he was warden of that institution. Judge Garretson's main point was that a prison keeper is not indictable for the escape of a prisoner who was illegally committed.

The body of a man supposed to be Matthew T. Williams, of Three Rivers, was found in Silver Lake, June 11th. Williams came to live in these parts less than a year ago. He was dressed as a clergyman and appeared to be a man of means. He had been heard to state that he was sixty years of age and came from Baltimore and that on account of ill-health he ceased preaching ten years ago. Deceased was an Englishman of slight frame, the little finger on the left hand being amputated.

Elisha B. Gaddis, of Newark, employed William Schanugher as coachman, three months ago. On Sunday last the coachman was missing, and Mr. Gaddis found that a valuable mare, a buggy and set of harness had been taken from the stable. The police telegraphed to Morristown and learned that Schanugher had driven through that place at 2, p. m. on Sunday. The Chief started in pursuit and traced the thief to Parsippany. It is believed that Schanugher belongs to a band of horse thieves in Morris county.

Mrs. Eliza Crusen, a negress, died in Trenton on Monday last, aged 103. She was born of slave parents on the farm of Charles Welling, near Pennington. She was a good-sized girl when the Revolutionary war was raging. She saw General Washington at Princeton and elsewhere and delighted to talk about him. Her memory was remarkably good up to the day of her death. At 21 years of age her master set her free. She afterwards married James Crusen and removed with her husband to Lower Wakefield township in Bucks county. Her husband died fifteen years ago aged 90. The couple had thirteen children, of whom seven are still living.

TAYLOR'S MARKET!
7 and 9 North avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Cash buyers are entitled to the best in the land, and at the lowest prices; it's not fair to ask them to make up losses incurred by the credit system. We are pleased to announce that Beef, Mutton and Lamb are declining, and will soon be as low as at any time last Fall. We are now slaughtering a drove of extra fine cattle, fed by Mr. Wm. Allen, of Dutch Neck, Mercer county. The average weight is about 1,600 pounds, and they eat juicy and tender.

On Saturday nights we sell Coarse Meats at extremely low prices, in order to clean up for the week, and those who are marketing on Saturday night will do well to call and compare our Meats and Prices with others.

We sell Taylor's Celebrated Trenton Hams at 14¾ cents for the medium weights, and 15¼ cents for the small, lean Pig Hams; also fine Sugar Cured Shoulders at 10½ cents.

THE warrant for the sale of real estate for 1881 taxes is in the hands of the Collector, and the names of the delinquents will be advertised in our next issue.

THE sweet notes of quail were heard early Friday morning last, in the very centre of our city and suburbs of North Plainfield. Keep an eye on the pot hunter.

THOSE "gentlemen" who indulged in so much loud argument at the corner of Third and Liberty steets, just after midnight Tuesday morning, should consider the feelings and comfort of a very sick woman in the vicinity and avoid repeating the performance.

THE adjourned meeting of the stockholders of the Music Hall Association, was held in the Council room last Saturday evening. Some unimportant changes in the By-laws were adopted. From the personal desire expressed by a number of the stockholders, the Secretary of the Board of Directors was enabled to state that the majority was in favor of appointing E. L. Roberts as architect.

IT is a singular fact that while those summer visitors, the Martin birds, have built nests and reared young in the bird house in front of Cortell's meat market, they failed this year to take possession of like quarters in front of Robert's Livery Office, where for years past they have been in the habit of locating. The only cause assigned for this is that the pugnacious Sparrow drives the Martin away. Shoot the sparrow.

THE Old Folk's Concert for the benefit of the Children's Home given in the Park avenue Baptist church, Thursday evening of last week, was attended but by a small audience, owing to the unfavorable condition of the weather. The concert was rather enjoyable in spite of its hackneyed character, and the choruses were really pleasing. All will regret, however, in view of the cause, that the entertainment effected any financial loss.

The Perfection of Simplicity.

In the pump house of the C. R. R., of N. J., opposite the station in this city, is on exhibition a duplex pump that is undoubtedly the simplest in construction and the most effective in its results of any present application of steam power to the raising of water. The pump end is the same as in general use, but for the steam end, the inventors—Mr. Albert E. Hall & Son, of this city—claim the perfection of simplicity and the greatest results. The model on exhibition may be seen at work any day.

How to Detect Classical Music.

"By request" we republish the following, and thereby give our readers a simple rule by which the most ignorant may know whether any given piece of music should or should not be admired. If you know at once what it is all about; if it seems to be saying, 1, 2, 3, hop, hop, hop, or 1, 2, 3, bang, bang, bang, you may conclude at once that you are listening to something of a very low order, which it is your duty to despise. But when you hear something that sounds as if an assorted lot of notes had been put into a barrel and were being persistently stirred up, like a kind of harmonious gruel, you may know it's a fugue, and safely assume an expression of profound interest. If the notes appear to have been dropped by accident, and are being fished up at irregular intervals in a sort of placid or drowned condition, it is likely to be a nocturne; and nocturnes, you know, are quite too utterly lovely for anything. If the notes seem to come in carloads, each load of a different kind from the last, and if the train seems to be an unreasonable long time in passing a given point, it will turn out most likely to be a symphony; and symphonies are just the grandest things that ever were. If the notes appear to be dumped out in masses, and shovelled vigorously into heaps, and then blown wildly into the air by explosions of dynamite, that's rhapsody; and rhapsodies are among the latest things in music.

The Regular Monthly Meeting of the Club will be held on Monday evening next, June 18th.

Business Embarrassment.

An assignment for the benefit of their creditors was filed in the County Clerk's office at New York city, Tuesday, by Edward A. Vanderhoof, and Frank H. Morrison, Frank F. Vanderhoof, and Henry B. Vanderhoof, composing the firm of Vanderhoof, Morrison & Co., brokers, at No. 36 New street, to Reese B. Gwillim, with a preference of $25,000 to J. H. Morrison, of this city. Much sympathy is felt at the ill fortune that has overtaken this firm, the principal members of which are residents of Plainfield and possessed of many warm friends among our citizens.

Mass Meeting.

The citizens of North Plainfield are called upon to assemble at Warren Eng. House. Saturday evening next at 8 o'clock, to discuss the Grove Street Bridge question. It is proposed to appoint a committee of citizens from the meeting, to confer with the Boards of Freeholders of Union and Somerset Counties, who will meet at the site of the bridge Monday next, and then and there examine designs of a proposed new structure to be shown them by the Freeholders. Should said design meet with the approbation of the committee they are to be accepted in behalf of the citizens. It is earnestly desired that there be a large attendance at the meeting.

Robbed Again.

During the night of May 7th, the residence of Mr. James Conneely was entered by some person unknown, who climbed upon the roof of the front porch, entered a second story window, and departed with $80 in money, a watch and chain, and other articles of value. Last Friday night, just one month after, a thief again visited Mr. Conneely's; and this time brought a short ladder and securing another from the barn of Mr. Flynn adjacent, reached to a side window through which an entrance was effected. The visitor, upon this latter occasion, secured about $9 in small silver pieces, leaving behind the vest and pants which he had carried away and searched after leaving the house. A clue to his identity is believed to be in possession of the authorities.

German Fair.

The ladies' Committee who had charge of the recent fair for the benefit of the building fund of a new German Church, to be erected in this city, desire to extend herewith their sincere thanks to all who so kindly responded to their appeal for assistance. The success financially has proved highly satisfactory, thanks to the benevolent spirit of not only the German citizens of Plainfield, but also of a large number of American citizens who attended. The Committee is under great obligation to the press for their valuable services, and to the "Saengerbund" for permitting the use of their handsome club rooms and the rendering of vocal music, which formed an attractive feature on one of the evenings; and further to Gazelle Eng. Co. No. 1, for the loan of tables and chairs.

MRS. HENRY STRAUSS,
President.

Our New Offices.

The interior of the business offices and editorial room of the CONSTITUTIONALIST having just been decorated in a highly artistic and decidedly handsome manner, we are naturally exceedingly proud of their appearance and take much delight in showing them to our friends and patrons and brothers in the profession. The ceiling decoration and side-wall papers are from the well-known manufactory of H. Bartholomae & Co., of New York city, which firm stands unrivalled for its style, coloring, and its taste in combination of harmonious tints. The painting and hanging was done by the Weaver Bros., and H. S. Barnes of East Front street, in a most satisfactory manner; while the wood work and finishing touches were imparted by Mr. T. O. Doane and Mr. S. M. Pound. We would cordially invite an inspection by all who would like to look upon a completed work that is unexcelled, in its line, anywhere.

High School Commencement.

The commencement exercises of the Plainfield High School will be held in Park Avenue Baptist Church, Thursday evening, 21st inst.

Doors open at 7:30.

An address is expected from General Wager Swayne, of New York.

Music by the 7th Regiment Band.

In addition to the usual prizes, Penmanship will this year be rewarded in the name of President Kirkner of the Board of Education.

Except for a moderate number of seats reserved for the immediate friends of the graduating class, and the teachers and officials of the school, no tickets of admission will be issued and none required.

The Board of Education has done the best it could, and while regretting inability to provide more adequate public accommodation, cherish the hope that a commodious and well appointed Opera House will be ready for the Class of 1884 and all interested citizens.

The Hotel Netherwood.

As we announced last week, the Hotel Netherwood is to be opened about the 25th inst by Mr. S. V. Woodruff, under whose personal supervision that elegant suburban resort is now being made ready for the reception of guests who are already making application. Residents in this city do not need to be told of its magnificent appointments, desirable location and the scores of advantages it possesses, but for the information of others, we gladly endorse everything in its favor that can be said. The Hotel, which is now open for inspection, is complete in all its appointments, contains 200 rooms (40 suites with private baths), elevator, electric bells, and every convenience for the comfort of guests who desire the advantage of pure mountain air and surroundings and to avoid the expense and discomfort of protracted railroad travel. The hotel is of brick, six stories in height, commanding an unobstructed and charming view, and but two minutes walk from the Netherwood station. Delightful drives and good stabling. Terms may be had by addressing S. V. Woodruff, Plainfield, N. J., or upon application, in person at the Hotel.

To Save Your Furs.

You can have your furs stored and insured against all loss or damage from moth or fire, at a small precentage of their value, by application to W. H. & R. Barnett of Newark, whose advertisement will be noticed elsewhere. Their agent will be in Plainfield on Wednesdays the 20th & 27 and will call on any of our citizens who may notify the firm by mail or telephone. The address is 17 Academy street, Newark, and the telephone call, No. 38.

Barbed Wire Fencing.

Barbed wire fence is fast taking the place of post and rails throughout the country and much of it is being constructed in this city and vicinity. It is neat and durable and can be built for one third the cost of the old style country fences. A decision just rendered by the United States Court is against the two parties who have for years had almost a monopoly of the manufacture of barbed wire for fences, and as a consequence the price will soon be much lower. The profits of the business have been enormous, amounting to many millions of dollars.

Tin Cans Utilized.

An exchange says the heretofore useless article, old tin cans, has become a factor in trunk making. Newark is famous for its trunk making industry, and recently some of the manufacturers discovered that old tin cans may be advantageously used, and they are now gathered and sold to trunk makers to bind the edges and bottoms of trunks, and sometimes to cover up defects of woodwork. The process of heating the cans also has its profitable results, for the solder, running into a receptacle, is sold for twelve cents a pound, it alone paying, it is claimed, all that is originally paid for the cans. We advise the young folks, who have been collecting postage stamps, to turn their attention to tin cans. It will be more profitable and less troublesome.

Who Owns the Horse?

Mr. Thomas Burns recently purchased of an ex-Mayor of this city a horse for $65, paying $60 in cash and leaving a balance of $5 standing. Subsequently Mr. William Coleman (a culled pusson) was allowed to use the animal, and taking advantage of such temporary possession he paid the $5 balance to whom it was due, requested and received a receipt in full for the horse, and locked the animal up in his portion of Mr. Burns' barn. The latter endeavored in every manner to set the law and the city authorities moving in such a way as would bring about the return of his property. He, however, was at last forced to take the matter into his own hands, and drawing the staple from the door of Mr. Coleman's premises he entered, took out the horse and locked it in his own barn. As we go to press there are no new developments. Mr. Coleman has the receipt, Mr. Burns has the horse, but who the property legally belongs to, we cannot say.

Redeeming Check Stamps.

The commissioner of Internal Revenue has issued a circular supplementary to circular No. 259 in regard to the redemption and cancellation of stamps imprinted checks and drafts. It provides that printed checks and drafts may be sent to the Internal Revenue Bureau at once, instead of from July 1, as originally intended. Such as are received will be cancelled and returned, if possible, by July 1. They may be presented in sheets or in books, and will be returned in the same condition. Blanks which have been compressed into blocks or pads must be separated before presentation. The cancelled stamps will be designated by the imprinted words, "Stamps Redeemed." Requests for cancellation in any other form or at any place except the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue will not be considered. Claims should be made on form 81, copies of which will be furnished upon application. Cases will be taken up in the order of their receipt. If the claim in any case is complete, the stamps accompanying it will be cancelled at once. If the claim is not complete the stamps will be laid aside until additional and satisfactory evidence is received.

Union & Middlesex Counties' Fair.

The new Board of Directors of the "Union & Middlesex Counties' Mutual Agricultural Association" met at Miller's Hotel, this city, Saturday evening, June 9th, and organized by electing the following named gentlemen officers for the ensuing year:

President—John I. Holly.
1st Vice President—Nat. Robbins.
2d " " —O. T. Waring.
3d " " —J. S. Vosseller.
Treasurer—J. W. Johnson.
Secretary—C. W. Leveridge.

The advisability of holding a Fair on the grounds the coming Fall was thoroughly discussed, and it was finally decided to have the Fair at some date not yet decided on, probably immediately after the close of the State Fair. The manner of conducting the Fair, will be materially changed from that of predecessors, so as to warrant it a paying affair to the stockholders. It is proposed to award 1st and 2d diplomas to exhibitors instead of cash premiums, while the free list at the entrance gate will be abolished, and other expenses reduced so that instead of a loosing venture with a large attendance as has been the case, there will be a dividend left at the close of the Fair. As there is quite an amount due exhibitors at the last Fair for premiums, a number of the Directors themselves subscribed $900 at the meeting Saturday evening to liquidate the indebtedness. The meeting adjourned to Saturday evening next, when further arrangements for holding the Fair will be made. The Board of Directors are composed of gentlemen with push and vim, and the public may rest assured that the last paying Fair has not been given by the Association. It will lay with the public to make the next Fair a success financially. Enjoyable it will no doubt be.

Five million young shad are to be placed in the Delaware next month by the Fish Commission of Pennsylvania.

Fine Strawberries.

The finest, largest, sweetest strawberries we have seen this season, came from the farm of Mr. Michael Kreiger, at New Market. They are of the Sharpley's Seedling variety. Mr. K. has had great success in growing these berries to a large size, while they retain their sweetness and delicate flavor.

An Attractive Spot.

Woodbridge Beach is just now again attracting fishing parties and those driving from this City for boating or bathing; and the Sewaren House is once more open for the reception of guests or transient patrons. Under the same excellent management as last year, this hotel offers every comfort and convenience that could be desired. The drive from Plainfield is beautiful and brings you to one of the most attractive spots on the coast. Read the advertisement on the first page.

New Jersey Editorial Association.

The twenty-seventh annual reunion will take place at Newport, Rhode Island, commencing on Monday, June 25th, and ending on Saturday, June 30th. The party will leave New York on one of the magnificent Sound boats of the Fall River Line, from Pier 28, North River, foot of Murray street, on Monday at 5 p. m., arriving at Newport early next morning, where quarters have been engaged at the Ocean House, the largest hotel in that city. During the week an excursion to Boston has been arranged, giving all an opportunity to visit that celebrated city. The price of tickets has been fixed at $17, which will cover all expenses of the trip, except state rooms, transportation to or from steamboat wharf, or dinner at Boston on day of excursion. The Executive Committee desire that early application for tickets should be made; not later than the 14th of June, as the committee will meet on the 15th and assign the number to each locality. Application should be made to Lewis S. Hyer, Rahway, from the counties of Union, Essex and Hudson.

Driven Wells.

Numerous subscribers to the Record in New Jersey have asked for information with regard to a recent Western decision against the Green patent or driven wells. These inquirers are generally persons who have paid the royalty demanded by Green's representatives. It will, therefore, be of no present pecuniary benefit to them to know that the decision referred to has completely overthrown the patent claimed by Nelson W. Green. This decision was rendered by United States Judge Shiras at Des Moines, Iowa, on May 9th last, with Judge Love and Judge Nelson, of Minnesota, as associate Judges. It was, in effect, that Green, having in 1861 devised a process by which a rod was driven into the ground until water was reached, which might be pumped to the surface after the rod was withdrawn, did really abandon this invention to the public by failing to apply for a patent until May, 1865; that the reissued patent of 1871 is void because it embraces the application of a principle not covered by the original invention, namely, the substitution of a driven pipe, which remained in the ground, for a driven rod, which was afterward pulled out to allow the insertion of a pump; that there was produced in the Court an abundance of testimony showing that E. W. Purdy had in 1849 and 1850 put down driven wells in Milwaukee, by a process substantially the same as that employed by Green; and, also, that in the summer of 1861, several months before Green put down his first well on the campground of his regiment, at Cortland, N. Y., there was successfully constructed at Independence, Iowa, a driven well which was a tube driven down to the water-bearing stratum, with a pump attached to the top of the tube. The Court for those reasons, held that the original patent was void for want of novelty. Even had the claim of novelty been sustained the patent would have been void, because of the practical surrender to the use of the public. The elaborate legal machinery set up under the bogus patent to wring money from owners of driven wells is still in successful operation, but no man who is cognizant of this Des Moines decision need hesitate to resist all attempts at extortion. The patent is absolutely worthless. The United Pipe Lines own more than a thousand driven wells, but they are said to have never been asked to pay royalty on them.—Philadelphia Record.

FIRE MATTERS.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department met in regular meeting, Tuesday evening. All present excepting Messrs Van Winkle and Depew—Mr. Jones acting as chairman. The usual routine of business was transacted, including the payment of a number of bills. On motion of Mr. Morris it was ordered that the Board meet in the Council room July 17th between 4 and 6 p. m., to hear appeals in cases of taxation. Some discussion was had over a suggestion to build a new house for Warren Eng. Co., and the Board adjourned.

About one o'clock Thursday morning, night watchman Benj. Wright discovered flames issuing from the rear of a small tenement house situated in Cutter's alley, near Second street. The alarm was given to which the fire companies promptly responded. No. 1 Engine located on the fire well corner of Second street and Park avenue, and soon had a stream on the flames, followed by No's 2 and 3 Engines. The small structure was however, consumed, although adjacent buildings were saved through the exertions of the firemen. The building belonged to Mulford Cole, and had been rented the day previous to a poor colored woman named Eliza Johnson, who paid a month's rent in advance and moved all her worldly possessions into the structure, which were destroyed. Wash. Reamer also lost a number of carpenter's tools left in the building. The building adjoining, occupied by Wm. Doyle, was damaged by fire and water, as well as his household goods. Cause of fire—undoubtedly incendiarism.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

A PIGEON shooting match between four of the crack shots of this city for a purse of $100, will come off at Campbell's Club House on Saturday afternoon, after which there will be a sweepstake shooting and a match for $50 a side between W. S. Canon, the champion one arm shooter of New Jersey, and a noted shot from Evona.

Fred Mather, the well known fish culturist, is opposed to sunfish. He says that they consume a great deal of food and furnish nothing—not even food for valuable food fishes. On the other hand, they devour many small fish that would grow to be valuable. He put 3,500 land-locked salmon into one of the large ponds on the Jones estate at Cold Spring, L. I., and caught a sunfish on the following day, opened him and found within him thirty-five land-locked salmon. That's 1 per cent. of the whole number put into the pond. At that rate it would require only 100 pumpkin seeds to knock out the land-locked salmon. And if there were 100 of them in the pond there were 100,000. When they can't get salmon they live on flies and worms. He suggested that they might be exterminated by dropping a small piece of quick-lime into their nests just after their spawning.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

NIGHT-SHIRTS THE CAUSE OF BALDNESS AMONG MEN.

We cannot cure baldness, as a bald head is beyond help; but if those who have hair and desire to retain it, will follow our advice, they need never show a clearing on top of their heads. The cause of their baldness is the habit men have of pulling their shirts and night-shirts over their heads. There are some who will laugh at this idea, but it is not intended that they should, as this is not a funny article. This is business. The pulling of a night-shirt off over the head causes friction on the scalp, which in time sears the roots of the hair, and leaves a barren plain, a Sahara ever after. Suppose the night-shirt comes to a man's feet there are five or six feet of tail to be drawn over the tender hair, which, kept up for a series of years, would wear out any head of hair. Add to this the friction from taking off the shirt, and then the natural scratching of the head for ideas, etc., and the hair has no rest, and the wonder is that there is a man left who has a spear of hair on his head.

Now the preventive is for men to walk out of their night-shirts the front way. Women are never bald, and some sneering men account for the fact by claiming that women do not have brain enough to become bald. This is a campaign lie. Women have more brain and a better quality than any bald-headed man on earth. But they do not wear their hair off by pulling their garments over their heads. They open the storm door of their garments and walk out into the light of day and never disturb a hair. This we state upon information and belief, and if we are wrong we can easily be corrected. It is alleged that they get out of their dry goods different from men, and thereby make a great saving in hair. Taking all the facts, there is only one sensible way for men who desire to retain their hair, and that is to quit the habit of pulling the garments off over their heads. They may have to be instructed in the best manner of getting out of a night-shirt without using the head for a pivot, but that can be arranged. Let societies be formed, classes, if you please, and secure a teacher whose business shall be to illustrate how to take off a night-shirt the front way. If our discovery is acted upon, bald-headed men will be unknown in the next generation.—Burlington Hawkeye.

A GIRL'S WAY.

I was the youngest daughter of a Western farmer, and twenty five years ago, such earned their own spending money. I had received a fairly good common education, yet had no inclination for teaching. For a few years I worked out, doing housework.

My father had planted apple-seeds for the commencement of a nursery, and now they were ready for grafting. He thought he would have to hire a man to help, but I coaxed him to let me try the work, and he finally let me set one thousand scions.

Father went out one day, the next summer to see how they had grown, and he came in and said—

"Well, Rosa, your scions have all grown but three. You have had much better success than your old father. Well, well! it all comes of having good eye-sight. I can't see as I once did."

So after this I was left to graft in the nursery all by myself.

One of the agents of a great nursery at Rochester, had made his home at our house, when in that vicinity, and we, thinking of him as a dear friend, would never take pay for his being there.

But one day he said to me—

"As you will take nothing for all your trouble, I am going to teach you to do all the niceties of grafting, from an orange tree down to an apple root. I usually charge any one from three to five dollars for each separate branch. But you I shall charge nothing.

Thus I learned the nursery business. I made a contract with an Eastern nurseryman to set scions for him at two and one-half cents per scion. I have set one hundred and fifty scions per day.

I took some of the worthless apple-trees we had on our place, and set pear scions in them, and in two years they were loaded with fruit.

I next learned budding.

The budding of trees is a work woman can do as well, and sometimes, I fancy, better than men, as their hands are more soft and pliant.

I found both grafting and budding pleasant and profitable employments.

SHE ACCEPTED.

He had a new silk umbrella over his head as he walked up Woodward Ave. It was snowing damply, and all at once his heart gave a bound as he discovered a female ahead of him without any protection from the storm.

'Ah—ah—excuse me, ah!' he stammered as he reached her side, 'but would you accept my umbrella and save your hat.'

'You bet!' she replied, as she reached out and took it. 'This hat cost $3.50, and as I am out of a place I don't know when I can afford another! Thank ye! I'll consider it a Christmas present!'

WHY HE DIDN'T.

'Didn't I tell you I wanted those boots for the grand reception last night?' he indignantly demanded of the placid shoemaker.

'I pelief you didt.'

'And didn't you promise to have them done?'

'I oxpect so.'

'Then why didn't you?'

'Because I vhas bresent at dot grand reception minseelf! How can I make boots und swell aroundt at grand receptions too?'

NONE NOW.

'Have you evaporated apples?' she asked of the grocer.

'Not any on hand just now, ma'am,' he replied.

'Don't you keep them?'

'Well, I set out to, but I got discouraged. I rolled a barrel of Baldwins out in front one morning, and before noon half of the lot had evaporated and disappeared. I prefer to deal in the solid fruit.'

The best remedy for eyes weakened by night use, is a fine stream of cold water frequently applied to them.

Children and young people should be made to hold their head up and shoulders back, while standing, sitting or working.

From one to one pound and a half of solid food is sufficient for a person in the ordinary vocation of business. Persons in sedentary employments should drop one-third of their food, and they will escape dyspepsia.—London Lancet.

HOW TO FORETELL THE WEATHER.

Vennor and Wiggins have proved such gigantic failures that weather predictions are now looked upon as jokes rather than probabilities. Every one can, however, become a weather prophet himself by a careful study of the following table which was constructed by the celebrated Dr. Herschell, upon a philosophic consideration of the attraction of the sun and moon. It is confirmed according to the Scientific American by the experience of many years' observation, and will suggest to the observer what kind of weather will probably follow the moon's entrance into any of her quarters. As a general rule it will be found wonderfully correct:

If the moon changes at 12 o'clock, noon, the weather immediately after will be very rainy, if in summer, and there will be snow or rain in winter.

If between 2 and 4 o'clock, p. m., changeable in summer—fair and mild in winter.

Between 4 and 6 o'clock, p. m., fair both winter and summer.

Between 6 and 10 o'clock, p. m. in summer, fair, if the wind is northwest; rainy, if south or southwest. In winter, fair and frosty, if the wind is north or northwest; rainy, if south or southwest.

Between 10 and 12 o'clock, p. m., rainy in summer and fair and frosty in winter.

Between 12 at night and 2 o'clock, a. m., fair in summer and frosty in winter, unless the wind is from the south or southwest.

Between 2 and 4 o'clock, a. m., cold and very showery in the summer, and snow and storm in winter.

Between 4 and 6 o,clock, a. m., rainy, both in winter and in summer.

Between 6 and 8 o'clock, a. m., wind and rain in summer and stormy in winter.

Between 8 and 10 o'clock, a. m., showery in summer and cold in winter.

Between 10 and 12 o'clock, a. m., showery in summer and cold and wintery in winter.

LAWS OF HEALTH.

Reading aloud is conducive to health.

Coarse bread is much better for children than fine.

Children should sleep in separate beds, and should not wear night caps.

The best beds for children are of hair, or in the winter, hair and cotton.

Young people and others cannot study much by lamplight with impunity.

The more clothing we wear, other things being equal, the less food we need.

Children should be taught to use their left hand as much and as well as their right.

Sleeping rooms should have a fire place or some mode of ventilation besides the windows.

AN ENGAGEMENT OFF.

'So the engagement is broken off?' queried the first young lady as they sat down in the car.

'Yes.'

'And you have sent back all his letters?'

'Every one.'

'And the locket?'

'Yes.'

'And the diamond ring?'

'Yes.'

'Wouldn't have done it. I'd have kept the ring, anyhow.'

'Well, I did intend to, but the jeweler said the stones were only glass, and I didn't want to be at the trouble of rubbing them up with alcohol two orthree times a day.'

FASHION NOTES.

Double faced ribbons are again in style.

Even mantles are made of plaid stuffs.

Cashmere is a popular early dress fabric.

Rose of Egypt is one of the rafest shades.

China patterns in dress goods are in great favor.

Gay colors in costumes are worn only in the house.

Poppies or lilies are the accepted corsage bouquets.

Bottle green velvet trims ecru cashmere admirably.

Brides' dresses are made with elegant simplicity this season.

All elegant street dresses are stylish, dark or neutral tinted.

Plush boots, foxed with kid, are a not very pretty novelty.

Summer dress goods are exceedingly beautiful in nearly all materials.

Enormous brass candlesticks are now used on fashionable dinner-tables.

Gold thistles and gold burrs are the latest millinery and hair ornaments.

Amber, topaz, and all yellow stones are in vogue for ornamental jewelry.

Chicken down—the color of the newly hatched—is the latest shade of yellow.

Jerseys, composed of both silk and wool, are much worn over skirts of muslin, silk, foulard, sateen and other materials.

The requisite dash of yellow in a white toilet is sometimes given by wearing an amber necklace and amber bracelets, or with yellow topaz jewelry.

New slippers are made in short bead embroidered toes, cut high at the heel with straps around the ankle and tied upon the instep with wide ribbon, in a neat bow.

A quaint little head-dress is of black lace, quite full; two rows, one falling front, one back; full loops of geranium red ribbon on the top, and two each side, with quillings of the lace.

Outlining in fancy work is now very popular for shams, tidies and bibs, bureaus covers and splashers. It is greatly favored because of the rapidity with which it can be executed.

Deep bunting collars wrought in striking designs of lace work, are chosen as a becoming completion to some toilettes. They are worn long enough to answer the purpose of a small cape.

Tennis suits are made of all sorts of gay woolen material, in stripes and plaids. A combined tennis suit of bright blue and red, trimmed with Russian embroidery, and a hat to match, is very effective.

The prediction that satin would go out of use was an error, for while gros-grains are leading for street wear, satins are found as acceptable as ever for the rich and dressy costumes worn in-doors.

The natural hues of flowers have never been more admirably depicted than they now are in the new brocaded silks; at a distance many of these silk designs would be mistaken for hand-painting.

WHAT A MAN LIKES.

What men love are comforts of the married state, not the person who provides them—wifely duties rather than the wife. A man enjoys his home. He likes the cheery fireside, the dressing-gown and slippers, the bright tea-urn, and the eyes behind it. He likes to see the boys and girls growing up around him, bearing his name and inheriting his qualities. He likes to have his clothes laid ready to his hand, stockings in their integrity, buttons firm in their places, meals pleasant, prompt, yet frugal. He likes a friend such as money cannot hire—attentive, affectionate, spontaneous, devoted and trustworthy. He likes very much the greatest comforts for the smallest outlay; and certainly he likes to beloved. His loves run in the current of his likings, and he is speedily indistinguished from them.

LITERARY NOTES.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine. For delightful, edifying and instructive reading this magazine is not excelled by any of its contemporaries, and the June number, in this respect, we think could scarcely be surpassed. The following admirable articles are profusely illustrated: "What is the Baptist Church?" by Rev. Dr. Chambliss, being a continuation of "Religious Denominations in the United States"; Among the natives of the North," [No. 11,] by Lieutenant Schwatka; "The Other Side of Greek History, Ancient and Modern," by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, "Sacred Musicians of the Nineteenth Century," by Alfreton Hervey; "The American Pilgrim in Palestine," by E De Leon, etc. There are articles by the editor, Dr. Talmage, on the late Alexander H. Stephens and Peter Cooper, and a sermon in the Home Pulpit, "The Cloudless Morning." There are also articles, essays, stories and poems by Adelaide Stout, Ida Hervey, Oliver M. Birrell, Rev. W. W. DeHart, S. T. B., Mrs. W. Fawcett, Rev. E. Payson Hammond, etc., etc., and a most interesting miscellany. Price 25 cents, or $3 a year, postpaid. Address, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher. 53, 55, and 57 Park Place, New York.

The June number of the North American Review opens with an article by Joseph Nimmo, Jr., Chief of the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, on "American Manufacturing Interests". Should this author's advocacy of protective legislation prove distasteful, the reader finds the needed corrective in an article by the Hon. Wm. M. Springer, on "Incidental Taxation", which is an argument for Free Trade. D. C. Gilman, President of Johns Hopkins University, writes of the "Present Aspects of College Training". Edward Self presents some weighty considerations on the "Abuse of Citizenship". Prof. Isaac L. Rice criticises some of "Herbert Spencer's Facts and Inferences" in social and political science, and Christine Nilsson contributes "A Few Words about Public Singing". Finally, there is a symposium on "The Moral Influence of the Drama", the participants being, on the one side, the Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley, well known as an opponent of the stage, and on the other, John Gilbert, the actor; A. M. Palmer, theatrical manager; and William Winter, dramatic critic. 50 cents a number; $5 a year. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York.

The Magazine of American History for June will interest all readers in every part of the country. It is profusely illustrated. Mrs. Lamb's second paper in the series "Wall Street in History," covers the exciting period of the Revolution, together with the six memorable years while Wall street was the seat of the national government. Theodore F. Dwight, Librarian of State Department, Washington, contributes an able and authoritative article of a dozen or more pages, describing the recently purchased Franklin papers. George Carey Eggleston discusses the Historical Status of the Indian Territory in a charmingly readable essay. Dr. David Murray, Secretary of the Board of Regents, contributes a timely and important paper on the University of the State of New York. The Honorable Geo. Bancroft, in a letter to the editor, settles some notably interesting mooted points in relation to the early voyages; and Alexander Brown, of Virginia, contributes a communication from the Honorable L. S. Sackville West. The Notes, Queries, Replies, Societies, and Book Notices are exceptionally good. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The essence of true nobility is neglect of self. Let the thought of self pass in, and the beauty of a great action is gone, like the bloom of a soiled flower.

Each heart is a world. You find all within yourself that you find without. The world that surrounds you is the magic glass of the world within you.

It is impossible to live pleasurably without living prudently, honorably and justly, or to live prudently, honorably and justly without living pleasurably.

Men who think for themselves do not believe quite so much as those do who take what they have from hearsay; but it is very apt to be a better quality of faith.

What unthankfulness it is to forget our consolations, and to look upon matter of grievances; to think so much upon two or three crosses as to forget a hundred blessings.

HERE AT LAST.

AFTER LONG AND WEARY WAITING RELIEF IS BROUGHT TO THOSE WHO NEED IT.

"Well, Pat," said an Orange county Physician to a complaining Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when its too late for me to see it."

When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, the rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days, for all affections in which a plaster is ever applicable. Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

POETRY.

WOULD YOU KISS ME AGAIN.

BY JOSEPHINE S. HUNT.

You kissed me! my head
Dropped low on your breast,
With a feeling of shelter
And infinite rest.
While the holy emotions
My tongue dare not speak
Flashed up in a flame
From my heart to my cheek,
Your arms held me fast—
Oh, your arms were so bold!
Heart beats against heart
In your passionate fold.
Your glances seemed drawing
My soul through my eyes,
As the sun draws the mist
From the sear to the skies.
Your lips clung to mine
Till I prayed in bliss
They might never unclasp
From the rapturous kiss.

You kissed me! my heart
And my breath and my will,
In delirious joy
For a moment stood still.
Life had for me then
No temptations, no charms,
No vision of happiness
Outside of your arms.
And were I this instant
An angel! possessed
Of the peace and the joy
That are given the blest,
I would fling my white robes
Unrepentingly down,
I would tear from my forehead
Its beautiful crown,
To nestle once more
In that haven of rest,
Your lips upon mine,
My head on your breast.

You kissed me! my soul,
In a bliss so divine,
Reeled and swooned like a drunken man,
Foolish with wine,
And I thought 'twere delicious
To die there if death
Would but come while my lips
Were yet moist with your breath;
If my heart might grow cold
While your arms clasp me round
In their passionate fold.
And these are the questions
I ask day and night;
Must my lips taste no more
Such exquisite delight?
Would you care if your breast
Were my shelter as then,
And if you were here,
Would you kiss me again?

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

A FATAL MISTAKE.

Marian Fellows tossed her head in a pretty little way she had, and curled her red lips in a manner intended to convey her uttermost indifference, if not actual contempt.

'No, I do not think I will go.'

'Why not?'

'I don't care very much for picnics, anyhow.'

Sybil Conyers, a tall, stately girl, with grave, straightforward dark eyes, looked wonderingly at her.

'I thought you always cared very much for picnics, Marian?'

'I am sure you always seem to enjoy yourself,

'Do go—it's a lovely day.

'And Tom Lester will be there, too, Marian.'

And dimpled-cheeked little Amy Proctor looked saucily over the fence at Marian's now slowly flushing cheeks.

'Tom Lester!

'As if I care a straw where he goes, or whether he goes at all.'

See flashed the words out angrily, yet with a certain coquettish suggestiveness in her tone that made Sybil laugh.

'Of course, we forgot that a remarkable good looking gentleman is boarding with your mother, Marian.

'The foreman of the workmen who are doing repairs and alterations up at the Grange, isn't he?'

'Foreman!'

'Sybil, you're too bad.'

'Mr. Alter is no more a foreman, or anything of that sort than you are'—

She hesitated, smiling and frowning, and flushed mysterously.

'Why, yes he is,' retorted Amy vigorously, 'for I saw him with my own eyes directing the workmen at the Grange.'

Marian nodded her head slowly several time.

'That is true.'

'Mr. Alter does not direct the workmen, in the capacity of superintendent, when really he is the owner and master of the Grange himself—Mr. Clifton.'

A little duet of exclamations greeted her astonishing revelation.

'Mamma made the discovery,' Marian went on in suppressed, excited tones, 'and you musn't whisper it for the world; for he would be so vexed if he thought it was known; but mama discovered, very accidently, that Mr. Clifton preferred to oversee his own renovation, incog., and so he came here as Mr. Alter. Isn't it charmingly romantic?'

'How did she find it out, Marian?' Amy asked in awe-stricken tones.

'By his linen, for one thing, every piece of which is marked in full, F. Clifton, and by other little incidents.'

Sybil looked gravely at Marian's pretty flushed face.

'And you have quarreled with Tom Lester, because you have another admirer who is worth more in houses and lands?'

'I broke our engagement because I'd rather be mistress of the Grange than a farmer's wife, any day.'

'It's too bad,' Amy flashed out.

'Tom Lester is worth a dozen of your high-toned aristocrats like Mr. Clifton.'

Marian smiled sneeringly.

'Of course, if you think so. Perhaps you can console him, Amy.'

'I will if I can,' was Amy's ready answer.

'Come Sybil, if Marian's not going, let us be off ourselves.'

'Won't you reconsider your decision?' Sybil asked pleasantly as they made ready to start.

But Marion bowed in a queenly way she had affected of late.

'Thanks, no, I really don't care to go, and besides, I am engaged for a drive this afternoon with Mr. Alter.'

'It's shameful in Marion,' Amy exclaimed, when they were out of ear shot.

'Well, she always was ambitious.'

And nothing more was said about her until an hour or so later, Tom Lester strolled up to Amy, sitting on the grass weaving wreaths.

'So Miss Fellows isn't here to-day?' he remarked casually, as he threw himself beside her—a tall, stalwart young fellow, with bright, honest blue eyes and a bonny face, that had made many a girl—Amy included—not a little jealous of Marian Fellows in the days before Mr. Alter came.

Amy went on weaving industriously.

'No; she couldn't come in consequence of a previous engagement.'

'I suppose you miss her dreadfully?' said Amy.

'Not at all.'

'A month ago I should have missed her, but to day—I would not turn my hand over to bring her here—nor any other girl who had jilted an honest man because he could not compete with another with more money.'

There was a healthy contempt in his voice that made Amy feel that Marian Fellows had been dethroned most effectually in this man's heart.

She swept him a charming, sympathetic glance from her pretty gray eyes.

'I think you are a very sensible man not to make yourself miserable because one girl out of all the world proved herself unworthy of your trust.'

She spoke lightly, but somehow it seemed to stir Tom's interest very much.

'That sounds delightful.'

'Amy, what would you advise me to do about it?'

'About it?'

'Yes.'

'What?'

'Marian.'

Another lovely glance and a slight dimpled laugh.

'Oh—I don't know, I am sure,' she went on, cresting her bright brown hair to one side like a bird, while she critically surveyed her wreath—'unless you revenged yourself by engaging yourself to the prettiest girl you know.'

'A good idea.'

'I wonder if the prettiest girl I know would say no?'

A delicious little laugh from Amy, as she jumped up scattering the refuse grasses and leaves.

'There's only one way to find out, Mr. Lester.'

'And how is that?'

'Ask her.'

And then Tom sprang up, a pale, eager look on his face, and caught Amy's hand in his.

'Will she say no?'

'Amy, will you take what Marian didn't think good enough?'

'If you will, I will be thankful she has jilted me.'

There was no gainsaying the earnestness of what he said, and Amy flushed and trembled, and then laughed.

'Let go my hands, Tom—somebody will see us.'

'They may see, and—welcome!'

'I shan't let go until you promise you will have me—until you tell me you love me dear.'

"But I won't.'

'Then you can't go!'

A saucy little dimpling of the crimson cheeks.

'Tom, please let me go.'

'I'll say—yes—but I don't mean it a bit.'

'I'll take the risk.'

And then he leaned over and said something that made her cheeks crimson even deeper.

While at the self-same moment, Mr. Alter, three miles off, asked Marion if she would marry him.

'I said yes, of course, mamma,' she said later, when she rehearsed the scene for her mother's benefit.

'Certainly you said yes!'

'Marion, I think I have nothing left to wish for, now that I shall see you mistress of such a magnificent home as the Grange.'

'You have done splendidly with yourself.'

'And he never dreams that we have discovered his charming little romance, mamma!'

And an hour or so afterward the picnic came home and Maran watched them with a faint little sneer on her pretty face, that deepened into a positive mocking triumph when she saw Tom Lester and Amy Proctor going by in Farmer Hetwyn's lumbering wagonnette—and thought that she would ride in her own carriage before long.

'I will cut every one of them,' she decided.

And then something in Sybil Conyers' grave, haughty eyes, as she and a tall handsome young fellow dashed by in a lovely little phæton, made her wonder very much at it,

She turned to Mr. Alter who had been standing at the other side of the window, idly looking out on the merry little cavalcade.

'Miss Conyes is with a strange gentleman, and he seems to know you Earnest,' she said.

'Who is he?'

Mr. Alter looked up.

'That?'

'It is Mr. Clifton!'

'Why, what can have brought him so unexpectedly?'

'Clifton! Clifton!

Then Mr. Earnest Alter was nobody in disguise after all; and all the charming romance had not an atom of foundation.

Mr. Alter was only Mr. Alter, and she—

A sudden rush of rebellious tears clouded her eyes as she tried to realize it—she was not engaged to the master of the Grange, who was driving with pretty haughty Sybil Conyers, and apparently very much smitten, for all he was a stranger, but to Mr. Clifton's servant and overseer.

And Tom Lester and Amy looked so comfortable and cosy together—while she—

Poor Marion could hardly bring herself to believe it.

Was it true that she made such an awful mistake, blinded by her pride and ambition?

And, in the midst of her self-tormenting thoughts, she did not see the chagrin and alarm that was on her lover's face, or the uneasiness in his manner, as he excused himself.

And—'made himself scarce,' or rather—'vanished that same day,' with a big bill unpaid, not to mention the quality of stolen underlinen he had borrowed from the wardrobe of the Grange.

Poor Marian!

She had nobody but herself to blame, but all the same her worst enemy would have pitied her could they have seen her all forlorn and disconsolate, her face red and swoolen with hours of crying, as she watched the double procession of carriages, the day Tom Lester and Amy, and handsome young Mr. Clifton, the master of the Grange, and Miss Sybil Conyers were married.

DO NOT LIVE BEYOND YOUR MEANS.

'This is pleasant,' exclaimed a young husband, taking his seat in the rocking chair as the supper things were removed. The fire glowing in the grate revealed a pretty and neatly furnished sitting room, with all the appliances of comfort. The fatiguing business of the day was over, and he sat enjoying what he had all day been anticipating, the delights of his own fireside. His pretty wife, Esther, took her work and sat down by the table.

'It is pleasant to have a home of one's own,' he again said, taking a satisfactory survey of his little quarters. The cold rain beat against the windows and he thought he felt really grateful for all his present comforts.

'Now if we only had a piano,' exclaimed his wife.

'Give me the music of your own sweet voice before all the pianos in creation,' he observed complimentarily; but he felt a certain secret disappointment that his wife's thankfulness did not chime with his own.

'Well, but we want one for our friends,' said Esther.

'Let our friends come to see us, and not to hear a piano,' exclaimed the husband.

'But George, everybody has a piano now-a-days—we don't go anywhere without seeing a piano,' persisted the wife.

'And yet, I don't know what we want one for—you will have no time to play on one, and I don't want to hear it.'

'Why, they are fashionable—I think our room looks nearly naked without it.'

'I think it looks just right.'

'I think it looks very naked—we want a piano shockingly,' protested Esther emphatically.

The husband looked violently.

'Your lamp smokes, my dear,' said he after a long pause.

'When are you going to get a chandelier? I have told you a dozen times how much we need one,' said Esther pettishly.

'These are pretty lamps—we don't need any chandeliers,' said her husband. 'These lamps are the prettiest of the kind I ever saw.'

'But, George, I don't think our room is complete without a chandelier,' said Esther, sharply. 'They are so fashionable? Why the Morgans and Millers, and many others I might mention, all have them; I am sure we ought to.'

'We ought to if we take pattern by other people's expenses, and I don't see any reason in that.'

The husband moved uneasily in his seat.

'We want to live within our means, Esther,' exclaimed George.

'I am sure we can afford it as well as the Morgans and Millers; we do not wish to appear mean.'

George's cheeks crimsoned.

'Mean! I am not mean!' he cried angrily.

'Then we do not wish to appear so," said the wife. 'To complete this room and make it look like other people's we want a piano and a chandelier.'

'We want—we want!' muttered the husband. 'there's no satisfying woman's wants, do what you may,' and he abruptly left the room.

How many more husbands are in a similiar dilemma! How many more husbands are rendered uncomfortable by the constant dissatisfaction of a wife with present comforts and present povisions. How many bright prospects for business have ended in bankruptcy and ruin in order to satisfy this secret hankering after fashionable necessaries! Could the real cause of so many failures be known, it would be found to result from useless expenditures at home—expense to answer the demands of fashion and "what will people think?'

'My wife has made my fortune,' said a gentleman of great possessions, 'by her thrift and prudence, and cheerfulness, when I was just beginning.'

'And mine has lost mine,' answered his companion, 'by useless extravagance, and repining when I was doing well.'

What a world does this open to the influence which a wife possesses over the future prosperity of her family! Let the wife know her influence and try to use it wisely and well.

The Poland newspapers have a story, not in the funny columns either, of a woman who eloped from that city with a young man. Her husband took it calmly, and did not try to find her. On Monday he received a letter from her, dated at Boston, in which she said, "So far God has blessed us with health, but John has not regular work yet."

UNITY.

Every patriotic heart must exult in the known fact that we are a united people, that the bitter memories of armed internal strife have almost faded away, and that never before in the history of our country was sectionalism nearer dead, and the Constitution and Union more firmly established and sincerely reverenced throughout the entire land than now.

There may be some irrationalists still alive, evil spirited marplots, who would willingly fan the embers of prejudice and hate, but, happily, they number few and are powerless, because popular sentiment, North and South, is unmistakably determined to quench discord in the brightness of national fraternity.

It is a glorious decree, decking as it does the future with the Heaven born hues of peace and prosperity.

Who can set bounds to the material advancement and moral influence of the United States, if the people keep strong and untarnished the bands of brotherhood, preserve unimpaired the principles and intent of free representative government, thrust out of existence every vestige of class favoritism, unholy ambition and political corruption, and sedulously cultivate the blessed fruits of virtue, justice, integrity, industry and intelligence?

United for such a purpose, the capabilities of our country's future and her example for the good of mankind are beyond the power of estimate.

Ere many years the starry flag of sovereignty will waive over a hundred million of freemen, the owners and occupiers of a realm stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific and of unsurpassed natural grandeur and wealth.

With no King but God, no aim other than the equal rights and perfect happiness of all the people, and no riches dearer than those wrought by honest enterprise and labor, the day surely approaches when the proposed statue in the harbor of New York of "Liberty Enlightening the World" will stand a truthful symbol of the Republic of Washington—

"America! 'Tis of thee—Sweet land of Liberty."

THE VERDICT.

After long months of formal trial, the outlay of an immense sum of money for the employment of high priced lawyers to prosecute on behalf of the Government, when that duty should have been mainly discharged by a salaried Attorney General, the evidence of guilt, brought to light, and the clear and impartial charge of the Judge, the notorious Star Route conspirators were declared innocent and set at liberty.

Such a verdict by such a jury is not surprising, and while it certainly lowers the dignity of justice, it does not in the least change public sentiment as to alleged committed crime.

There is no doubt that hundreds of thousands of dollars were stolen from the treasury of the people to cover fraudulent mail transportation contracts and that some of the parties engaged in the thieving work were prominent officials.

Why should they go free and enjoy ill-gotten wealth, when so many poor fellows languish behind prison bars and bear lasting disgrace for comparatively trivial crimes?

Why!

It is an inexcusable outrage upon the name of Justice.

It is an insult to Honesty.

The treasury was robbed, not by professional cracksmen, but by corrupt politicians commissioned to protect it.

Such are the facts of the case, and a score of tipsy jurymen cannot make decent and intelligent citizens believe the contrary.

It is an expressed opinion that a Star Route conviction was not really desired, for the reason that it might possibly have disclosed unpleasant relationship with gentlemen who live in glass houses.

Be that as it may, this we do know and unhesitatingly avow, that official are not a whit better than other thieves, and whether politically great or small, the State Prison should be their designated abode for a term of years.

The code that inflicts swift and severe punishment on a hungry wretch who steals a piece of meat or loaf of bread, and honors with freedom the miscreant who grows rich through public plunder, is radically wrong and hostile to the sacred cause of equal and exact justice.

That is the verdict of sober truth.

The terrible calamity at Victoria Hall, Sunderland, England, in which 202 poor little mortals were crushed to death through a winding stair-way only five or six feet wide and a narrow door, again shows the imperative necessity of proper means of egress from all public buildings.

The cost of the piper in the Star Route dance is worth putting on record. The total cost of the abortive prosecutions of Brady, Dorsey and their associates is nearly as great as the amount that the defendants are alleged to have stolen from the government. The New York Sun's Washington correspondent estimates that the cost of the trials to the government will be little short of one million two hundred thousand dollars.

The Grove street bridge question has at last been satisfactorily settled, by the Somerset County Board of Freeholders resolving to concur in the action taken by the Union County Board, to replace the present unfinished iron bridge at that point with another one the entire width of the street. Although last year's Board of Freeholders of Somerset Co. refused to entertain the resolution made by the Union County Board, the new members from Somerset, with one exception, being possessed of more public spiritedness, have agreed to build a suitable bridge over the stream at Grove street. Freeholder Schenck, of North Plainfield, should receive the thanks of his constituents for the earnest manner in which he has argued and pleaded with his colleagues for this new bridge, and his convincing arguments no doubt have had much to do with the final result of the meeting last Monday.

The Lehigh Valley is not as yet leased to the Pennsylvania Road. Rumors to that effect were plentiful in Philadelphia last week, but about half-supplemented with the assertion that the terms of the lease were eight per cent upon the common stock for the first year and ten per cent for the second year. The latter sum, report said, was to be the maximum, unless there were extraordinary increases in the earnings, and in that event it might perhaps be increased to twelve per cent at some time in the future. At both the Philadelphia and New York offices of the Lehigh all knowledge of a negotiation was denied, but it is known that the relations between the Lehigh and the Central are not friendly and that naturally the Lehigh would gravitate in the other direction. It is also thought probable that the Pennsylvania road would like to control a coal road and become a coal carrier to the West.

Some time ago the U. S. Circuit Court at Trenton issued a mandamus directing the Board of Assessors of Elizabeth, N. J., to insert in the coming year's tax levy an appropriation of over $6,000, to meet a judgment secured against the city by the Ætna Insurance Company. There was promise of more serious complications, arising from the failure of the 50 per cent. compromise, and the prospect of a mandamus from the Singer Sewing Machine Company, requiring the insertion of over $1,000,000 in the ensuing tax levy, was good. The Board of Assessors consists of eight members, and, with the evident purpose of defeating the mandamus creditors, four of the Board resigned. On Monday the four Assessors who yet hold office made return to the court's order. They say the levy has not been made because it can only be made by the full board, and that the resignation of the four leaves the board without a quorum. The action of the Assessors adds a new complication to the situation. The vacancies can be filled only by appointment, and the court may be compelled to force the appointee to accept office. At the same time, a question is likely to arise as to the regularity of the appointments, and a new litigation, that may defeat the collection of the claims for an indefinite time, is not improbable.

IRISH CABLE NEWS.

Through the courtesy of the Irish Nation we are enabled to give the latest cable news per the Special Irish News Agency, forwarded to that journal:

LONDON, June 19, 1883.

All eyes are now turned towards Monaghan, where everything seems to promise a victory for the party of Irish Self-government. Mr. Healy, M. P., was today adopted as their candidate by an overwhelming majority of a county convention composed of Catholics and Presbyterians, despite the strenuous efforts of the Government party led by Mr. Dickson, one of the members for Tyrone.

ULSTER RALLYING.

The action of the convention has caused dismay in the Whig ranks as it is clear that Ulster is rallying to the National cause.

THE FRUITS OF COERCION.

The present condition of Ireland is deplorable. The "yeoman terror" is in full swing. Secret investigations are in progress in the Kings County, Kerry, Mayo, and Galway. The liberty and life of every man are at the mercy of hireling scoundrels whose testimony is accepted by the representatives of English power without any reference to their past records. Gladstone's Government have plagiarized the worst practices of the Inquisition; evictions are progressing at a fearful rate, and emigration has set in with renewed vigor.

JOHN BRIGHT SAVAGE.

Mr. Bright's attack on the Irish "rebel" party was caused by Radical anger at the damage inflicted on Government by the tactics of the Parnellites in obstructing the execution of its legislative programme. Parliament is, in fact, completely blocked by the persistent activity of Irish criticisms.

CHAMBERLAIN AND THE RADICALS.

Mr. Chamberlain feels that the Cabinet is going to pieces, and bids boldly for the Birmingham Radical Revolutionary leadership, with a programme of manhood suffrage, equal electoral divisions, and payment of members of Parliament. This means revolution without violence, and the practical substitution of democratic republican principles for the aristocratic influences which have been hitherto really supreme in public affairs.

ROME REPENTANT.

The Vatican is beginning to recognize the blunder it committed in issuing the Errington Circular, and Cardinal Simeoni is in disgrace. No bishop or priest has withdrawn from the Parnell Committee or any of the five hundred branches of the National League.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

Though not officially announced, it is expected that Mauch Chunk, instead of Phillipsburg, will be the end of the Main Line Division of the P. & R. R. R. both for coal and passenger trains, and that the changing of engines on all Philadelphia trains at Bound Brook will be done away with.

NEW JERSEY FAIR ASSOCIATION.

NEWARK, N. J., June 20.—The Board of Directors of the New Jersey State Fair Association held its semi-annual meeting at the Board of Trade rooms to-day. The Executive Committee was authorized to make extensive improvements in the grounds and buildings at Waverly prior to the holding of the fair in September. The annual press dinner was fixed for September 4th, and other business preparatory to the fair was transacted. Treasurer Samuel Manning was given a two months' leave of absence. A dinner to the board and members of the press followed the meeting.

A TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

A shocking disaster, resulting in the death of 202 children, occurred in the town of Sunderland, England, on Saturday evening. At an entertainment given by a conjurer a large audience had gathered in Victoria Hall. The children, to the number of 1,200, occupied the gallery, and at the close of the entertainment came rushing down the stairs. At the top of the first flight there was a door which opened only twenty inches, thus permitting only one child to pass at a time. Just here one child fell and was unable to rise again, owing to the others falling on it. In a moment there was a panic and nothing could stop the rush of the frightened children, and soon there were nearly 300 piled up in the stair-way. As soon as the terrible news became known many hands commenced the work of extrication and relief, but before the dread passage could be cleared the lives of 202 little ones, ranging from four to fourteen years, had been sacrificed, to the culpable carelessness of those who had permitted such an atrocious death trap to exist in their building. The most heart-rending scenes were witnessed as the bodies were laid out in the hall. Some families had lost all their little ones, in several cases to the number of five. The greatest excitement occurred in the town and it was necessary to order out the military to preserve order.

The "High License" bill has been finally passed by the Illinois Legislature and been signed by the Governor.

President Gowen emphatically denies that Mr. Vanderbilt has made him a proposition to lease the Reading property.

The Ohio Democratic State Convention will be held to-day (Thursday) and the indications are that Judge Hoadley will receive the nomination for Governor.

President Franklin B. Gowen, of the P. & R. R., has reappointed S. M. Williams to the office of Auditor of the C. R. R. of N. J. and its leased lines.

The Sussex Co. Agricultural Society offer prizes amounting to $425, to be trotted for on their grounds at Newton, July 4th. The races will be for the 2:50, 2:40 and 2:28 classes, and the amount of the premium for each class will be $75, $150 and $200 respectively.

Two Arabs, who claim to have been in Arabi Pasha's army, are confined in the Essex County (N. J.) Jail on a charge of vagrancy. They gave their names as Pecharn and Dispo Trable. They were born in Jerusalem, and were exiled to this country after Arabi's defeat.

Charles Backus, of the San Francisco Minstrels, is lying unconscious at his house, No. 246 West Forty-fourth St., New York city. Mr. Backus has been attacked by pneumonia twice within the last three months, and this disease has gradually turned into lung troubles, from the effects of which the doctors have no hope of saving Mr. Backus' life.

Attorney General Brewster's special attorney and protege, Bliss, is said to have received $50,000 from the government for assisting in the trial which ended in the acquittal of the Star Routers. It is not stated whether he received a testimonial of gratitude from the defendants. He and Dorsey and Brady are all members of the Republican party of "grand moral ideas."

LOCAL ANNEX.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Boy's prayer meeting this (Friday) afternoon at 4 o'clock. Every boy of the Branch is expected to attend.

The young men's meeting will be continued during the summer months, and it is hoped that every young man who has an interest in the welfare of young men and the growth of the association, will use his every effort to help sustain it. New attractions will be added. Young men remember the meeting.

Concert at Dunellen.

Mr. T. B. Brown's Dunellen Concert gave great pleasure to all that attended, and was another proof of Mr. Brown's musical abilities. The artists were finished scholars possessed of rare musical talents and power. Mrs. Lockwood's recitations formed a pleasing and artistic interlude. Miss Abell's voice is remarkable for one so young and she has a brilliant career before her. The church was filled, and taking it altogether the concert was a success that reflected great credit on the management and the artists that so generously gave their services.

Summer Schooling.

It will be noticed in his advertisement on our first page, that Prof. James Lyon intends to open Summer classes for the study of English and Commercial branches, commencing July 9th, with hours from 8:30 to 10:30 a. m. During the long summer months, children lose much they have learned during the year, but the worst effect of the long summer vacation is the loss of school habits. A short daily session as is proposed by Prof. Lyon, will not only keep the boys in trim, but will afford them the opportunity of acquiring much valuable knowledge and may save them a year's time in their studies; while it will relieve parents of the vexed question what to do with the boys. The finely ventilated school building of the Plainfield Academy is as cool and pleasant a place as can well be found in Summer.

SCOTCH PLAINS PARAGRAPHS.

Excelsior H. & L. Co. No. 1 elected Mr. Thomas Nicholl foreman at their annual meeting last Monday evening.

The public school closed at noon on Tuesday in order that the Principal could attend the funeral of the son of Mr. Pease, County Superintendent.

The members of Fanwood Engine and Bucket Co. No. 1, held an informal meeting last Saturday evening for the purpose of being measured for their uniform. Hereafter the company will meet in the K. of P. Lodge room.

The members of Good Will Lodge No. 101, K. of P. were somewhat taken by surprise at their last regular convention. Ladies are not always welcome at the Lodge, nevertheless, the brethren are proud of the very handsome bookmark and altar cover that was presented them by Mrs. J. Flannery last Friday evening. Resolutions, etc., etc., finished a short but delightful meeting.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

July 1st falls on Sunday this year, therefore woodcock cannot legally be shot before the second of that month.

Every lover of the law should now be on the lookout for violators of the game laws. There are plenty of sneaks who will shoot woodcock before the law is up —July 1st—if they can get the chance.

Weak fish have commenced to bite. Several fine catches are reported from the vicinity of Woodbridge. At the Sewaren House, near the R. R. station, boats, bait and lines may be procured on very reasonable terms.

A match for $1,000 was shot at the Long Branch Gun Club grounds, at Deal Beach, June 20th, between E. G. Murphy and George Work, 100 birds each. The match resulted in the following score: Murphy, 85 killed, 15 missed; Work, 61 killed, 39 missed.

One result of the moon being full or nearly so is to stop the weak fish from biting. Good piscatorial authority on such matters says the full moon causes high tides, which militate against good fishing. Weak fish have stopped biting almost entirely, but Lafayettes are running large, and are biting sharply.

There was a large gathering of sportsmen at Campbell's Club House, on Park avenue, on Saturday last to witness contests at pigeons and clay pigeons. The first match was between "Neph" Apgar, of Evona and W. S. Cannon, of Newark, the well-known one-arm shooter. The match was at thirty clay pigeons each, twenty-one yards rise, $25 a side. Apgar won by breaking twenty-two to Cannon's nineteen. Following came a pigeon shooting match between Isaac and Warren Squiers on one side and Leb. Ayers and Dan Terry on the other, for $25 a side, thirty birds a side, twenty-one yards rise, trap and handle for one another. Messrs. Ayers and Terry won by killing seventeen to the Squiers' Bros., sixteen. Ayers and W. Squiers each killed eleven of their 15 birds. Sweepstakes at clay pigeons were subsequently indulged in, and it is not improbable that other matches will be the outcome of the afternoon's sport, between some of the contestants.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Art Amateur for June contains the usual handsome profusion of charming designs for china painting, including pansies for a plaque, cherry blossoms for a panel, honeysuckle for a vase and columbine for a dessert plate. Some South Kensington borders and a quaint chasuble ornament are provided for needle-workers; there are over twenty monograms, about forty designs for jewellers' use, and a page of capital borders from the Cincinnati School of Design to accompany the second of the lessons in "Wood Carving for Amateurs." Special attractive articles are those on "Etretat," with eight pleasing illustrations by Henry Bacon, and on "John La Farge, Artist and Decorator," with illustrations of his work in mural painting and stained glass, the latter from the Vanderbilt houses. Other important topics, interestingly treated, are the Paris Salon, recent London exhibitions, modern pottery at Bethnal Green, sketching from nature in oil, flower painting, and chalk and crayon drawing with striking illustrations by Millet and others. J. C. Beckwith has a clever charcoal sketch of a pretty and piquant damsel, and there are some pleasing designs of cupids and children, and eight interesting examples of last-century miniatures by Cosway and others. The correspondence columns and "My Note-Book" are specially full and valuable, and the number in general is a worthy beginning of The Art Amateur's fifth year. Price, 35 cents; per annum, $4. OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

FARMERS are already cutting their hay.

THE fire cracker nuisance approaches.

ARE we to have a Fourth of July celebration? Guess not.

IT is in violation of a State law to sell toy pistols to minors.

THE law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes goes into effect on July 4th.

STRAWBERRIES will soon be things of the past. Then comes the black-cap raspberries.

HAD Noah sent the English sparrow to find land that bird would now boss the earth.

DID it rain any on Tuesday morning last about three o'clock? Well, we rather think it did.

As the Fourth of July draws nigh, we would remind dealers in fireworks, of the toy pistol act.

NOTHING positive has as yet been announced regarding trotting on the fair grounds on July 4th.

TO-MORROW, on its grounds in this city, the Crescents will play a return game with the Roselle nine.

PHILIP ZIMMER, a brother to Chas. Zimmer, of this city, died at New Brunswick last week from typhoid fever.

VANDERBEEK, on Park avenue, has a fine assortment of fishing tackle to which he invites the attention of the angler.

THE list of property to be advertised for sale to pay taxes, is almost ready and will probably be published next week.

MUSIC from New York will be in attendance Tuesday afternoon and evening at the Grove Party near the Park House.

A FULL line of bicycle shirts in all colors, with the patent laced front, is offered by Bachmann Bros., of West Front street.

THE rage for highly-colored stockings has reached men. Silk half hose is now the fashionable thing, and all sorts of fancy patterns are in vogue.

THE editorial excursion takes place next week. The party leaves New York on Monday next for Newport, and will return on the following Saturday.

WE are favored daily with a large piece of pure spring water ice by Morton & Bodeshime. To appreciate the same you should try some of it. It is very fine.

NOT having a suitable place in which to hold such, the North Plainfield Public School will close this year without the customary Commencement exercises.

THE members of St. Joseph's parish, North Plainfield, and their friends, will have a picnic at Wooden's Grove, during the afternoon and evening of the 4th of July.

THE residence of Ezekiel M. Paterson, on Livingston avenue, New Brunswick, was robbed of $12,000 in bonds and gold on Wednesday last, during the absence of the family.

THE currant worm appears to be doing as much damage as in any previous season. Sprinkling the bushes with hellebore is the most effectual method of destroying the pests.

THE assessors are on the war path again and now is the time to pull out your bonds and notes and other taxable goods, and show the world how much or how little you are worth.

THE excursion of the Plainfield Saengerbund, to Oscawana Island on the Hudson, Thursday, July 12th, will be—as the excursions of that society always are—a most enjoyable affair.

REV. Frank Smith, S. J., of St. Peter's College, Jersey City, instituted the Sodality of the Children of Mary, last Sunday evening, at St. Mary's Catholic Church. About 75 members were enrolled.

THE guests of the Park House will get a benefit Tuesday next. Of course they will reciprocate by lending their presence within the inclosure and indulging in the good things provided at the Grove Party.

A LAD by the name of Dooley, of East Second street, who in spite of many warnings would get in the way of a ball player, was accidentally struck in the head with a bat last Saturday, and very seriously injured.

SEVERAL Middletown lads have been sent to Goshen jail for robbing birds' nests. This should be a warning to certain boys in Plainfield who make a practice every Summer to rob birds' nests of their eggs.

To preserve fruit, stuff the skin of a cat until it looks life-like, then set it on the limb of a cherry tree or in some natural position on the strawberry bed. If the position is changed every day it will effectually frighten away birds.

THERE was no quorum present at the adjourned meeting of the Board of Directors of the Union and Middlesex Counties' Agricultural Association last Saturday evening. Consequently no further news regarding the Fair next Fall.

THE new postal law now makes the taking of a newspaper and the refusal to pay for it, theft, and any person guilty of such an action is liable to criminal proceedings, the same as if he had stolen goods to the amount of his subscription.

DECIDED improvements have recently been made in the interior of the Somerset House, North Plainfield, by the proprietor, John Hughes, who has caused a handsome and durable hard wood flooring to be laid in the bar room. Mr. H. is an enterprising landlord and keeps a good house.

JUSTICE NASH caused the arrest of ten young lads who made it a practice to jump off and on passing trains last Saturday. Three of them, Frank Frazee, Jas. Daley and John Carney were fined two dollars each. It is earnestly hoped that the Justice may break up this pernicious and dangerous practice.

ACCORDING to an exchange, a self-acting sofa, just large enough for two, has been invented. If properly wound up it will begin to ring a warning bell just before ten o'clock. At one minute after ten it splits apart, and while one-half carries the daughter of the house up stairs, the other half kicks her young man out of doors.

AMONG the latest new tints which delight fashionables are "dusty dun," "huckleberry haze," "watermelon mauve" and one shade of yellow which promises to become a special favorite is "boiled cabbage." The latter is described as being a delightful tint somewhere between that of a yellow tea rose and an undone pancake.

OUR old friend Merwin Hughson, has shown us a revolutionary relic which is valuable for its historic associations. It is a sabre, once the property of General Smith, of Waterloo, Sussex county, and was worn by him during the revolutionary war. It has passed from one family to another, until recently it was put up at auction among a lot of household goods, and purchased by Mr. Hughson.

THE funeral of Mr. Philip Zimmer, brother of Chas. Zimmer of this city, took place from his late residence, on the corner of Somerset street and Easton avenue, New Brunswick, at three o'clock Sunday afternoon. The funeral services were under the direction of Palestine Lodge, No. 111, Free and Accepted Masons; Helvetia Lodge, No. 15, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Aurora Singing Society. Both of the latter were composed exclusively of Germans, who were out with well-filled ranks.

THE crossing of Park avenue at Front street, is a disgrace to the city.

THE Warren Mission Sunday School will re-open Sunday, July 1st, instead of June 24th, as announced.

MANAGER Stearns has refused the recent petition of Plainfield commuters for an express train leaving New York at 5:15 p. m.

TO-DAY (Thursday) will be the longest day of the year, there being sixteen hours and thirty-six minutes between the rising and setting of the sun.

THE County is building a much needed and substantial culvert across Park ave., at Fifth street. The city will now have to grade the avenue in conformity therewith.

THE announcement having been made that silk ribbons are to be largely used by the ladies next season, consequently most of the mills are preparing to engage to an unusual extent in the manufacture of such.

MESSRS Green & Co., the furniture dealers of No. 18 West Front street, are selling the "roll-up" spring beds at $6.50 each, and have a full stock always on hand. Our public will consequently find it a great saving in price to patronize this house, rather than traveling agents offering the same article for more money.

Seven Burglaries.

Housebreakers worked actively at their profession, in the town of Dunellen, Tuesday night. The residences of Messrs. Coriell, Apgar, Giddes, Churchill and Van Middlesworth were entered and a quantity of movable property, including some silverware, was stolen.

Hurt by a Dog.

Wednesday evening last, Harry Ruttmann, a young son of Mr. Ferdinand Ruttmann of Broadway, was bitten in the hand by a neighbor's dog and also knocked down. The lad received a slight scalp wound as a result of his fall, but under the care of Dr. J. B. Probasco, is steadily recovering from both injuries.

Railroad Changes.

A new time table for the C. R. R. of N. J., with the usual Summer changes and other additional ones, is to be issued Sunday. The most important outcome of the new management, is to be the running of more Sunday trains. It is rumored that between this city and New York there will be ten trains each way; between Elizabeth and Newark, four each way; from New York to Long Branch, three each way, and to Newark, twelve each way.

A Chance for Investment.

According to assays made by State Geologist Smock, the Plainfield Transportation and Clay Mining and Manufacturing Company, has secured one of the most valuable clay deposits in the country by its recent purchase of the Daily Farm of 140 acres on the Raritan river in Middlesex county. Capitalists desiring to investigate the prospects of the plant, may secure a printed copy of the official analyses, and secure other general information upon application to Mr. E. C. Mulford at his office in the Railroad station.

Fatal Accident.

John Callahan, an employe of Mr. Geo. Lessignolo, on Front street, died from injuries received by the kick of a horse *on Saturday last. About a week previ*ous he was leading a horse to a pasture field, when the animal became frightened at a calf, and turning quickly around kicked Callahan in the head, from which injuries he died as above stated. Deceased was a steady, honest and industrious man, and had many friends in this city. He was in the employ of Mr. B. R. Haines for a number of years. His funeral on Monday was largely attended.

The North Plainfield Children's School.

Mrs. Austin's Craig Place School for little ones, closed yesterday with the customary exercises by the scholars, in the presence of a large attendance of parents and friends. The ability shown by the scholars in their several parts, reflected great credit on their teacher who can look with pride at the advancement made each year by the little ones under her care. An increased number of applicants is assured for the Fall opening, but as only a certain number can be accommodated, those only who early announce a desire to join the classes can be accepted.

A Warm Reception.

Wednesday night about 12:30 o'clock, Mr. Fred. Craft, residing on Kensington avenue, was awakened by other inmates of the house who heard some one outside endeavoring to force an entrance. Going to a front window he saw standing in the roadway a covered wagon, and drawing his revolver fired into it. It was immediately driven rapidly away. The presence of the wagon undoubtedly shows an intentional raid in general throughout the neighborhood, and following upon the Dunellen robberies of the night before, seems to identify the burglars as belonging to the same gang. They will not visit Kensington avenue again.

A Bridge Over the Kills.

It has been urged recently that the Lehigh Valley Railroad might obtain a convenient and ample entrance to New York by way of Staten Island. Its eastern terminus is at Perth Amboy, opposite Tottenville, the western terminus of the Staten Island Railroad. A bridge could be built over the narrow kills to connect the two railways. Erastus Wiman and his friends now control the Staten Island Railway, with the ferries and landings in New York. The railway is to be extended by the Staten Island Rapid Transit Company to a point on the island nearer New York, reducing the length of ferriage, and the trips are to be increased in frequency until they run at intervals of only a few minutes.—Elizabeth Journal.

Personalia.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Clark of First place, are at Caldwell, Crosby side, Lake George.

Ex-Postmaster General James has engaged rooms at the Hotel Netherwood for himself, wife, daughter and servants.

We received a call yesterday from our old friend Abraham Kilsheimer, who is connected with No. 6 Truck, New York Fire Department.

William Clark, one of the old citizens of Westfield, and know as "Preacher Clark," died Wednesday last. The funeral will take place to-morrow. Mr. Clark was over eighty years of age.

At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Samuel Q. Lawson, on the corner of Seventh street and Grant avenue, will be married next Tuesday afternoon at three o'clock, Miss Estelle Amanda Lawson and Charles P. Sebring.

County Clerk Vosseller has been confined to his home the past few days in consequence of indisposition. His many friends desire him to take a relaxation from business for his health. He will probably take a trip to Minnesota in July.

City Judge Good has returned from Washington with pleasing recollections of many enjoyable moments spent in that city. While there he was presented by Mr. Norris Peters, the photo-lithographer of the Patent Office, with fac-simile copies of the original documents, including the Declaration of Independence, 1776, Warrant to execute Mary Stuart, Queen of Scots, 1587, and the Warrant to execute King Charles the First, 1648.

Exit Baldwin.

H. P. Baldwin, who for the past 20 years, has acted as General Passenger agent of the Central Railroad of N. J., has been relieved of his position in consequence of the road being merged with the Phila. & Reading R. R., and C. H. Hancock appointed in his stead.

"How To Get There."

Mr. George Wotherspoon, Jr., of this city, is the publisher of an instantaneous guide of New York city, which tells at a glance how to get to any desired point in the shortest and easiest manner. A diagram is spread before you, and upon placing your finger on the number and street you wish to reach, at a glance is seen the nearest elevated station, stage or car route. It also contains a list of the locations of all public buildings, club houses, theatres, &c.

The Rahway Mandamus.

On Saturday last, Judge Nixon, in the United States Circuit Court, signed the order for a peremptory mandamus com*pelling the city of Rahway to include in* its next tax levy the amount of the undisturbed judgment obtained against the city by the Grocers' Bank of New York city. The judgment was for $40,000 and interest, that being the amount of the bank's loan to the city, but the sum due was reduced to $30,000 by the sale of certain city bonds which the bank has held as collateral security for its loan.

Another Grove Party.

This time time under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the Park avenue church is announced for next Tuesday afternoon and evening, if pleasant, otherwise on Thursday, in the private grounds corner of Park avenue and Eighth street, adjoining the Park House. Arrangements have been made *to illuminate the scene with a large num*ber of Japanese and other lanterns. Compton's ice cream and other refreshments will be served by the ladies and a real good time generally is assured. An admission fee of ten cents will be charged —the proceeds for a good cause.

Public Opening of the Netherwood.

Next Monday is to see the reopening of the Hotel Netherwood after two seasons of vacancy, and in such a manner that all its friends, and everyone interested *in its success, may take part in the oc*casion. Mr. S. V. Woodruff, its courteous and genial proprietor, intends that evening to throw open his house to all, and authorizes us to extend the public of this city and its vicinity, his cordial invitation to be present. A fine band of music will be at the service of those who may desire to dance in the spacious parlors, or promenade along the moonlighted piazza, and all will be welcome to avail themselves of any privileges the Hotel can afford. A number of guests are expected on the opening day—including Postmaster H. G. Pearson and family of N. Y. city—and others that have already selected and engaged their rooms, *will soon follow. Undoubtedly the pros*pects are remarkably favorable for the successful season the courageous proprietor deserves.

Citizens' Meeting.

The Citizens' Tax-payers Meeting held in Warren Engine House last Saturday evening was largely attended. James Mc Gee was made Chairman and Lewis E. Barkalew, Secretary. The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, The present unfinished bridge over Green Brook at Grove street is not, in the judgment of the citizens and taxpayers of North Plainfield, suitable to the location, nor to the requirements of public travel, and

WHEREAS, The Board of Freeholders of Union county having acknowledged that they were the cause of the bridge being erected in its present shape under the apprehension that the damages in their county from the freshets last Fall were so great, the Board would not be justified in building a wider bridge, and having in March last passed a resolution to correct that error, and to erect a wider bridge, and one more suitable to the public want, and

WHEREAS, The cost of the change would be comparatively small, and the request, in the judgment of this meeting, is unanimous for a change by all tax*payers in North Plainfield, therefore*

Resolved, That we, citizens' tax-payers of North Plainfield, in this meeting assembled, respectfully ask the Board of Freeholders of our county to erect a bridge on Grove street of the full width of the street, that the road or drive-way be about 36 feet wide, and the foot passage-ways be about 10 feet wide on each side, and that such bridge be erected as soon as it can be, consistent with the judgment of the two Boards of Freeholders.

Resolved, That a Committee of 10 be appointed by this meeting to confer with the Freeholders of our county, who meet on such bridge Monday morning next at 10 o'clock, and that such Committee be authorized and empowered to approve such plans as it may think best, if called upon by the Freeholders to do so, and *that a copy of these preambles and reso*lutions be presented to the Chairman of the Somerset Co. Board of Freeholders.

The following named persons were appointed a Committee to confer with the Board of Freeholders:

John W. Moore, Gen. Eli Long, David Weaver, Wm Sanford, Chas. Matthews, Jos. N. Randolph, John Thickstun, Thos. Worth, Jacob Long, Thos J. Young.

The meeting then adjourned to meet Saturday evening, June 23d.

Grove Street Bridge.

On Monday last the Somerset County Board of Freeholders met a Committee from the Union County Board, consisting of Messrs Director C. W. L. Martine, Wm. Oliver, John Donahue, J. F. Hubbard and A. Vanderbeek, and proceeded to the site of the Grove street bridge to view that structure. Here they were met by the Committee appointed at the Citizens' meeting held in North Plainfield on Saturday evening last, who presented the board with a series of resolutions passed at the meeting, relative to the bridge. After a careful examination of the structure, the Freeholders proceeded to Water street to view the bridge there, returning to partake of an excellent dinner at Millers' Hotel. At 10 o'clock the Somerset Board went into executive session. After a long and tedious discussion, it was finally resolved, upon motion of Freeholder Schenck, of North Plainfield, to remove the present unfinished structure at Grove street, and erect in its stead an iron truss bridge the full width of the street. When completed as now ordered the bridge will have a 36 feet roadway, instead of 22 as now built, with 10 feet sidewalks on each side. The span across the brook is 40 feet. The contract was awarded to the Pennsylvania Bridge Company, the agent, Mr. Hutchinson, who was present agreeing to re-build the bridge for $2,200 additional expense, half of which will be borne by each of the two counties. This, with the original cost of the present unfinished bridge, $4,240, will make the total cost of the new structure, $6,440, while the two counties will own the iron bridge to be taken down, and will store the materials until such time as occasion may demand a new line bridge over the stream at some other point. The vote of the Somerset Freeholders stood 8 to 1 in favor of the bridge, Freeholder Wyckoff, of Hillsborough, being the one member who stood out against the eight other obstinate (!) members, who were in favor of granting their constituents what they wanted. The Union County Committee and the Citizen's Committee at once acquiesced in the decision of the Somerset Board, and as soon as the iron work can be made, the bridge will be erected. Thus ends the Grove street bridge question.

Class Reception.

The Public High School Classes of '81 and '82 will tender a reception to the Class of '83, at the mansion corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, this (Thursday) evening, from ten to one o'clock. About 250 invitations have been issued.

Base Ball.

During Saturday afternoon last, the *Crescents added another to their succes*sive victories of this season. Not a defect has been experienced as yet by this nine, and the ease with which other organizations have been vanquished, proves the ability of the Crescents to conquer the strongest amateur teams in the State. The contest of Saturday was against the Potter nine, which scored six runs (the last three being given them) against twenty-one by the Crescents.

A Big Success.

One of the largest picnics ever held in this vicinity, was that given in Wooden's Grove, during Thursday of last week, by the members of Warren Hose Co. No. 3. The weather was just right, the music was charming, and the hundreds that attended comprised the best classes of this city and North Plainfield. Each lady was presented with a boquet, and the managers of the affair did everything in their power to insure the gratification of all. The occasion was a grand success, as it deserved to be.

Fined for Cruelty.

A vender of berries from Piscataway was arranged before Mayor Maxson, last Friday morning, charged by Captain Chase with driving a horse unfit to work, and thereby causing such animal pain. John H. Jackson, Esq., counsel for accused, made a strong appeal to His Honor for mercy, which was approved by the Corporation Counsel and acquiesced in by the Court. A fine of $10 and costs was imposed, and the Mayor gave warning that the next one brought before him on the charge of unhuman treatment to dumb animals, would pay $100.

Picnic and Show Turning.

Next Thursday afternoon and evening, in Wooden's Grove, the Plainfield Turn Verein will hold its annual picnic and show-turning, in which about 400 invited members of other societies will *take part. The grounds will be illumi*nated in the evening with calcium lights. Dancing will commence at 2:30 p. m., with music by Prof. Voss. Turning will commence at half-past three o'clock. Stages will run from the corner of Front and Somerset streets, to and from the grounds. If the day should be stormy, the affair will be postponed until July 3d. During the evening the Plainfield Saengerbund will favor the gathering with their singing.

Trim the Trees.

In the Spring, before the sap started, the trees should all have been trimmed, particularly so that the lower branches would not be in anybody's way. But in a great many instances they have been neglected, and now, on some of the streets, it is almost impossible to carry a parasol or umbrella without having it torn or broken, and tall people are sometimes unable to keep their hats on, because of the low hanging limbs of the untrimmed trees. One of these days the Street Commissioner will come along and trim off these limbs, probably not in a way to suit the owner of them; so the best way to avoid it all is to trim them yourself or get some one to trim them nicely for you.

Royal Arcanum Reunion.

Unique Council, No. 434, Royal Arcanum, entertained last Friday evening, Plainfield Council, No. 711, and Fire*side Council, No. 715, of Westfield, N.* J., at its rooms, No. 690, Communipaw pavenue, Jersey City Heights. The address of welcome of F. B. Pratt, Vice-Regent, was well received. Representatives from visiting councils were called upon. Speeches were made by Vice Regent Brown and Past Regent Westbrook, of Westfield; Deputy Grand Regent Lyon, and Messrs Anthony and Baker, of Plainfield. The orator of Unique Council, J. W. Pangborn, brother of the editor of the Jersey City Journal, made an interesting address in behalf of the order. The entertainment closed with a bountiful feast.

A Pastor's Farewell.

Last Friday evening the spacious parlors of St. Mary's Rectory were filled by the parishioners to bid good bye to Rev. Father Gillen, who had been ordered by his bishop to take charge of St. Joseph's Church, Paterson, during the absence of the pastor. Father Gillen came here last October, from Elizabethport to assist Rev. H. De Burgh, and since his resignation has had the entire management of the affairs of the congregation, with what success can be seen from the fact that during the past eight months the debt of the church has been reduced nearly $3,000. Quiet and unassuming *in his manner, his steady at*tention to the wants of his flock won their love and respect and many an eye was moistened as the good-bye's were said. The gathering was a complete surprise to the reverend gentleman and Mr. S. O. A. Murphy, the spokesman of the occasion, in presenting a purse, thus expressed the feelings of the congregation:

"Reverend and beloved Father, the parishioners of St. Mary's cannot allow the occasion of your transfer to another sphere of usefulness to pass, without expressing to you, however inadequately, the feelings of heartfelt regret with which we view your departure from among us, and the severance of the ties that have bound us together so many months. The announcement that you were to be transferred elsewhere by your ecclesiastical superiors came upon us so suddenly that we have been scarcely able fully to realize the fact that you are about to part from us. Though your stay here has not been very long, it has been long enough to enable us to know your sterling worth and to love and respect the virtues that have made your temporary mission at St. Mary's ever to be gratefully remembered from our heart of hearts. Believe us, you will carry with you to your new station our sincerest and kindliest wishes for your welfare and the assurance that our poor prayers will not fail to be offered for your success and happiness. We indulge to, the hope that we will be remembered in the more efficacious prayers of yourself. This little memento of the occasion which we beg to present you, we know will be prized by you not for its intrinsic worth, but as a simple testimonial of the sorrow that fills our hearts that we must say good-bye. May God ever protect and bless you."

Father Gillen deeply moved, replied that he was entirely unprepared for such a demonstration but heartily pleased at the approbation shown of his administration; he could have done nothing without the cordial support of the people. He had only tried to do his duty to all, never thinking of individuals. He had not publicly announced his transfer because of the sadness he felt at leaving those who had become so endeared to him during his brief mission in this city. He would remember their request and not forget them in his prayers. He also reminded the congregation of his congratulations on the appointment of Father Smyth as Rector, and predicted a happy and prosperous future under his paternal guidance.

Thirteenth Annual—Order of Exercises—

Seven Lady Graduates.

This (Thursday) evening, in the Park Avenue Baptist Church, will occur the Thirteenth Annual Commencement of the Plainfield Public School. It is needless to state that the church will be over crowded and that many will be unable to get in; but as such consequence will be owing to the size of the building, no one can be blamed. Only just a sufficient number of tickets have been issued, and seats reserved, to accommodate the graduates, their parents, the teachers and the Board of Education—the rest of the church and main entrances will be thrown open to the public. Not even the Clergy or our Common Councilmen will be more favored than the community at large; so those who cannot get in must blame themselves for not arriving earlier, and shout "Oh! for an Opera House."

THE GRADUATING CLASS

for 1883 consists of seven young ladies, while not a young gentleman appears for the honor of his sex. The seven include—

Miss ELEANOR SHERWIN, Valedictorian,
" MARY E. CLEM,
" JENNIE VOSSELLER,
" ROBERTA LEE BASS,
" ALICE M. THOMPSON,
" FRANCESCA ESCOSURA,
" M. LILLIAN NEWMAN.

Their customary essays will be on the following subjects:

Longfellow, the Poet of Sunshine,	Mary E. Clem.
The Woman and the Queen, -	Jennie Vosseller.
"Among the Hills," - -	Roberta Lee Bass.
Florence and Jetsam, -	Alice M. Thompson.
The Realm of Mist, -	Francesca Escosura.
Pictures from Life of Beethoven,	M. L. Newman.
The Dove of Peace, with Valedictory,	E. Sherwin.

Following these will come the awarding of prizes offered by:

1st, 2d & 3d Prize in Penmanship,	Mr J. Kirkner.
1st & 2d Prize—Mathematics,	Mrs. C. H. Stillman.
Prize for U. S. History, -	Mr. J. W. Murray.
1st & 2d Prize—Composition,	Mr. G. H. Babcock.
Prize for Spelling, -	Mr. Mason W. Tyler.
1st & 2d Prize for Botany, -	Mrs. C. A. Rutter.

ADDRESS, - - GEN. WAGER SWAYNE.

CONFERRING OF DIPLOMAS.

During the progress of the programme as above, the Seventh Regiment Band will play the following selections:

Grand March—"Athalie," - - -	Mendelssohn.
"Merry War," - - -	Strauss.
Selections, "Lohengrin," - - -	Wagner.
"Moonlight Sonata," - - -	Beethoven.
"Walt till the Clouds Roll By," -	Fulmore.
"La Paloma," - - -	Tradier.
Gavotte, "Stephanie," - - -	Gibulka.

The ability to be displayed by the graduates is of course due the untiring efforts in their behalf exerted by the principal, Miss Julia E. Bulkley, and her unceasing endeavors to perfect their education. In all of this she has been effectively assisted by Mr. T. J. Miller, the teacher of the Senior class, and during the past few weeks of Miss Bulkley's recent illness, the entire work has fallen on that gentleman's shoulders. That the graduates will acquit themselves in an admirable manner is assur*ed, and great credit will reflect* upon their trainers and teachers.

Sunday at Netherwood.

Rev. Edward Locke of the Protestant Episcopal church of New York, will oc*cupy the pulpit of the Netherwood* Union Chapel, next Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

Rahway Settles.

At a meeting of the creditors of the city of Rahway, held in Newark, Tuesday evening last, $82,000 worth of the dishonored bonds were surrendered and exchanged for new adjustment bonds, on the basis of the 25 per cent. settlement. The Mutual Benefit Insurance Company will to-day exchange $112,000 of old bonds for new.

To Ocean Grove.

The Baptists are the first in the field, this year, with an excursion to Ocean Grove, Long Branch and Asbury Park. It will take place on Friday, July 13th, under the auspices of the First Baptist church.

Perseverence Lodge No. 74, K. of P., of this city will take its Second Annual Excursion in the same direction, two weeks later; leaving here Friday morning, July 27th.

Notice.

On Thursday the 28th inst., there will be a meeting of the State Board of Education at Trenton, at which a County Superintendent will be appointed for Union County. Prof. Pease, the present incumbent, has long filled the office with entire satisfaction, and it is our opinion, as well as that of all those connected with educational matters in this County, or interested therein, that his reappointment will meet with universal approval.

District Messenger Service.

The projectors of the District Messenger police, fire and other calls, feel encouraged at the prospects of receiving a sufficient number of subscribers to warrant the introduction of the service.

Each subscriber is required to register at the district office *the name of his doc*tor, livery stable, grocer, plumber, &c., so that when a signal comes in, the manager in charge knows with whom the subscriber does business, and a messenger is at once dispatched to notify whoever is signalled for to go to the house of the subscriber, thus saving considerable time and expense in not visiting the subscriber first to ascertain what is wanted.

The company will commence operations when 250 subscribers are obtained.

Firemen's Relief Association.

The annual meeting of the new board of directors of the above Association was held at the house of No. 2 engine company on Wednesday evening, 20th inst. An election of officers resulted as follows: President, Wm. H. Voorhees; Vice President, T. O. Doane; Secretary, H. J. Martin; Treasurer, A. D. Mallinson; Relief Committee—F. Whiteley, D. Rogers, J. Shepherd. Finance Com.—J. A. Hubbard, W. Krausse, Wm. R. Cook. Previous to the meeting of the new board, the old board met and closed its affairs. The Finance Committee presented the following detailed statement, which was received and placed on file.

Charles H. Biller's Brave Act.

Charles H. Biller, a young man of Newark, N. J., rescued a gentleman and his two daughters from the surf at Coney Island, Wednesday afternoon last. The younger child wandered into the surf and was caught by the under-tow. The elder rushed in to save her, when she, too, was overpowered. The father hastened to their assistance, but, being lame, he was also overcome. At this moment Biller dashed into the water and rescued the girls, but in his struggle with the father he became unconscious and was resuscitated with difficulty. The gentleman, who is a wealthy Philadelphian, made his gallant rescuer several valuable presents, and insisted upon looking after his future welfare. Biller now has the Humane Society's medal, which was awarded to him six years ago, when he was only 13 years old, for rescuing a child.

The Courts.

BEFORE JUDGE M'CORMICK.

In the Court of Special Sessions Wednesday, the following cases came up:

The Court, due application having been made, reconsidered the sentence of Richard Howard, which was five years in State Prison, for passing a silvered dix-centime French coin for half a dollar, and reduced the sentence to two years.

Charles Bowman was sentenced to two two years in State Prison for having burglars' tools in his possession. Gen. Fay served a writ of error on the Court.

In the case of Daniel McBirnie, of Summit, who was to appear for sentence Wednesday for assault and battery, his bail was declared forfeited, and a bench warrant was issued, and Constable Cornwall instructed to take him into custody at once.

The woman who was arrested and held in jail, pending proceedings in New Providence, was released.

The case of T. W. Sloan came up, and he was on the stand and examined. The case was then adjourned for a week, in the absence of Mr. Lindabury.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ALMOST A SEPARATION.

A faint glow of a July sunrise was reddening all the east, a delicious coolness pervaded the air, and the robins, just wakened into consciousness, sang as if they would sing their little hearts out. The mowers who slept in the barn chamber were just yawning into wakefulness. Farmer Elden was up and on the way to the milking yard, and his thrifty helpmate was already breaking golden eggs into the breakfast frying pan.

"It seems as if Rosa were later and later every morning," she thought.

And hurrying to the foot of the stairs where an odd, corkscrew-shaped little flight of wooden steps twisted itself up to the second story, she called aloud, in no very musical voice:

"Rosa! Rosa, I say!"

There was no answer.

Mrs. Elden ran hastily up, and entered the bed-room, where the eastern flush was already irradiating the rough beams with the softest pink light. To her amazement, the bed was empty, a bunch of faded roses lay on the pillow, and a little cotton glove caught in the wisteria-vine that trailed luxuriantly up to the second story, betrayed in what manner the bird had flown.

"Now I am astonished!" said Mrs. Elden. "The child has got out of the window again. She is off for the county fair, where I expressly told her, last night, she was not to go. It's the second time she has run away within the month. Why, she couldn't behave worse if she was a gipsey, and I don't believe but what she is! I told Joshua that no good would ever come of adopting a child out of the Foundling Institute. And I won't stand it very long—not another day!"

Joshua Elden, coming in from the barn-yard with two pails of foaming milk, was met by his wife, whose lips were compressed, and whose brow had grown ominously dark.

"Rosa has gone again!" said she.

"Gone!" repeated Mr. Elden, setting down his pails and staring. "Gone where?"

"How am I to know?" said Mrs. Elden, sharply. "To the fair, I suppose. There never was such a wilful child."

"That wasn't right," said Mr. Elden, mildly. "Rosa knows—"

"Rosa knows quite enough to outwit two old fools like us," said Mrs. Elden. "We were fools for taking her, Joshua, and we're fools for keeping her. It's the last night she shall sleep under this roof!"

"My dear," remonstrated the farmer, "she's only a girl of seventeen!"

"She's old enough to know better," said Mrs. Elden, who had by this time placed a pan of frizzling bacon upon the fire. "I've put up with her freaks and follies long enough. I've talked and talked to her, and it does about as much good as the wind blowing over yonder field of timothy grass."

"But, Sarah," said Mr. Elden, "you never would turn little Rosa out of doors?"

"Yes, I would," said Mrs. Elden. "There! She's tried me to death with her wild ways, and I shan't put up with them no longer. Call the men in to breakfast, Joshua, and I'm goin' to fit up her little room and let it to city boarders this summer."

"Look here, wife," said good Mr. Elden, "don't be too sharp with Rosa. Remember, she's young, and p'r'haps there have been times when we held the reins pretty tight. I'd have taken her to the county fair myself if you hadn't said 'No' so positively."

"And spoiled her worse than ever," said Mrs. Elden. "No, I'm done with her—out she goes!"

"But, Sarah, think again!" urged Mr. Elden. "What is to become of her? A pretty young creetur' like that thrown adrift upon the world."

"She should have thought of that before she defied me," said Mrs. Elden.

"I won't have her treated so roughly!" said the farmer, a little curtly. "And all for a mere girlish freak. You are my wife, Sarah, and you must obey me in this matter."

"I am your wife," said Mrs. Elden, setting down the bright blue milk-pitcher with such energy that it cracked from spout to handle; "but there are some things in which I will not obey any man. I choose that Rosa May shall go."

"And I choose that she shan't," said Mr. Elden, roused into unwonted spirit. "We've brought her up from a baby, and she's just like my own child."

"You must choose between her and me," said Mrs. Elden, the hard lines around her mouth growing grimmer and more grim. "Aunt Amanda wants me to come to the Uphill Farm and take care of her. I ain't one to depend on anybody for my daily bread, and she's got money to leave."

The hired men, as they sat at the breakfast table, eating bacon and eggs, hot johnny cake and cold boiled beef, had a vague idea that something in the household machinery was wrong.

Mr. Elden was unwontedly silent; Mrs. Elden's lips were screwed up, her cheeks flushed.

"Where's Rosa?" Hugh Hardie asked, staring around, as he bit into a huge slice of bread and butter.

"We do not know," said Mrs. Elden, primly.

"We calculate likely she's gone to the county fair with Dr. Duganne's daughter," said Mr. Elden. "Girls will be girls."

And then ensued another silence, until finally Hugh and Joseph lumbered off to the hay field, and the husband and wife were left alone together once again.

"Come, Sarah—come! We've been husband and wife too long to quarrel now," said Joshua Elden, kindly. "I own little Rosa is a provoking piece, but she's our Rosa after all. S'pose we harness up old gray and go after her? It's three years now since you've been to the county fair—"

"And it'll be three years more before I go again," said Mrs. Elden. "No, I shall go to Aunt Amanda's and let you and Rosa settle things to suit yourselves."

Mr. Elden gnawed his lip. Patient soul though he was, his wife's obstinacy nettled him.

"Of all tryin' creeturs," said he, "I do believe that a woman is the worst."

"It's all Rosa's fault," said Mrs. Elden.

"No, it ain't," stoutly maintained the farmer. "Rosa has faults enough; but I won't have her falsely accused in this case."

'You're an unfeeling brute!' said Mrs. Elden.

'You're an obstinate woman!' retorted her better-half.

'Very well,' said Mrs. Elden, 'I am going up stairs now to pack my trunk. If things have got to this pass, it is high time I left the house.'

'Just as you please,' said Mr. Elden.

And his wife went away too angry to cry and indignantly questioning herself why she hadn't married Hezekiah Williams twenty years ago instead of bestowing her hand on Joshua Elden.

All day long an armed neutrality pervaded the low-roofed, cozy old farmhouse. Mr. Elden was silent. Mrs. Elden busied herself about her packing. And, just at twilight, when the spicy odor from the bed of white-and-crimson clove-pinks floated into the window, a neighbor came hurriedly along.

'There's bad news,' said he. 'Jim Cole has just come from the fair grounds. There was a runaway team there, and your Rosa was knocked down and killed.'

'Rosa!' cried Mrs. Elden, with a gasp.

'Rosa!' groaned the farmer, dropping the piece of harness which he was laboriously mending.

'They are bringing her up the street now,' said the neighbor. 'Body came down on the afternoon train. They do say she is dreadful disfigured!'

He hurried along to meet the little cortege, now scarcely visible down the darkening road. Mrs. Elden ran up to her husband and threw her arms around his neck.

'Joshua!' she cried; 'forgive me! I never meant it. I loved the poor darling all the while. Oh Rosa, my little Rosa.'

'Don't fret, wife,' huskily whispered the farmer. 'It is not your fault. You did all you could for her.'

He put his arm tenderly around his wife's waist as he spoke.

'Whatever it is, Sarah, we will bear it together,' he said bravely.

At the same instant, as it seemed a light foot-step floated, like a thistle-down, on the threshold; a little figure ran up to them, and clasped them within one embrace.

'Rosa!' they cried, with a single voice.

'Oh, I am so sorry—so ashamed!' sobbed Rosa May, looking pretty and penitent enough to melt the hardest heart. 'But Caroline Duganne over-persuaded me. We were together, and I didn't enjoy a single moment of the whole day. Mother—father—I never will disobey you again. For when those terrible wild horses rushed by like a whirlwind, and knocked over the poor feeble old lady, who was standing close beside me—'

'Then it wasn't you?' said Mrs. Elden, who had been nervously scanning her adopted daughter's face for signs of some deadly hurt.

'It would have served me right if it had been,' said the girl. 'It was old Miss Dorothy May from Newton. Look, they are carrying her by now. Oh, it is so terrible—so terrible.'

And Rosa hid her face in her hands.

Mrs. Elden took the girl tenderly into her motherly arms.

'Rosa, you are forgiven; but after this, dear, always remember how dearly we love you, and guide your conduct accordingly.'

And not another word was said about the packing of trunks. If possible, Joshua Elden's manner was more affectionate than ever toward his wife; Sarah, more tender and deferential toward her husband. And Rosa was the darling of them both.

It was through her that they had had their first quarrel; it was her unlooked for appearance that healed the deadly rift in their hearts.

And when Mr. Elden said: 'Didn't I tell you, Sarah, that little Rosa would benefit by the lesson?' his wife answered cordially.

'You are always right, Joshua.'

BEHOLD HE WAS A TRAMP.

It came to pass that a certain railroad man sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding, and they would not come.

Again he sent forth other servants, saying, tell them which are bidden, behold, I have killed the old hen and prepared the wedding dinner and opened a keg of nails and all things are ready for the blowout.

But they made light of it and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his drug store, and another to his grist-mill and the remainder took the servants and entreated them spitefully, and put a tin ear on them, and frescoed them with Michael Angelo eggs.

But when the railroad king heard of it he bounced the entire outfit and shut off their passes and raised their freight tariff and busted them up in their business and smote them sore on the gable end of their intellects and made it red hot for them.

Then he said unto his servants, the wedding is ready, but they which are bidden are not worthy.

Go ye therefore down the side tracks and into the round house and the water tank and the cabooses and the gravel trains and gather together so many as ye shall find and tell them to come over to the wedding feast and fill themselves up.

And the servants went forth and rounded up as many as they could find both good and bad and bade them to the feast.

And when the king went into the reception room he found there a man who had not a spike-tail coat and low-necked shoes and clocked socks.

And he saith to him: 'Pardner, how cometh it that thou art here without any store clothes on, and wearing instead a linen duster and jim-crow raiment generally.'

And the man was at first speechless but he answered yet again:

'Oh, railroad king! live forever. I know that I am here without a wedding garment; but behold, I am a conductor on thy line, and I have reformed, and have ceased to knock down; and behold thy servant is poor, and he is trying to live on his salary.

And the king was wroth, and told the usher to gather him in and take him by the slack of his raiment and to cast him over the outer wall, and there was weeping and gnashing of teeth.'

And while the wedding guests made merry and whooped it up, the man who was cast out did steal around and become solid with the cook, and filled himself up with the wedding feast on the sly.

And it came to pass that when he had eaten of the fatted calf and the wedding cake, and absorbed all the champagne that he could carry away, he crawled into the mow and slept till the cock crew.

And when the morning was come, he journeyed over the railroad track toward Salt Lake; for behold he was a tramp.

A really pretty style for a long, slender neck is a narrow, stiff, slightly flaring standing collar, in color, covered with lace, with a crape tulle ruche inside. A pleating of lace falls on the shoulders, and forms a full jabot front.

FASHION NOTES.

Braiding is popular.

Feather fans are fashionable.

Silk gloves are more worn than kid.

In London yellow bonnets are in favor.

Large bonnets are worn without strings.

Ungratefulness is the very poison of manhood.

The capote is still the most fashionable of bonnets.

After all there is no more popular color than black.

Garden hats are, many of them, bizarre and eccentric.

Black silk stockings are again to be worn with white dresses.

New salt-cellars are in design a minature Brooklyn bridge.

All the new shades are found in the Parisiennes with satin borders for veiling.

Basket straws and rough-and-readys in large sizes are the best hats for hard usage.

Plain ball of roman gold with filigree bands are the neatest ornament for the ears.

When thou prayest, rather let thy heart be without words than thy words without heart.

Many light cloth costumes are garnished with plain bands of ribbon velvet in darker shades.

It is quite the fashion on the other side to wear lace tabliers, tunics and flounces on day dresses.

Striped, checked, shot and repped silks are much worn; so is velveteen and velvet brocaded grenadine.

Little girl's deep collars are composed of shirred scrim with deep Irish-point. Cuffs are worn to match.

Gray foule, combined with white in small quantities, is the dress of the fashionable woman at present in Paris.

On the left side of the square neck of a beautiful evening dress of shell pink ottoman silk are six bows of black velvet ribbon placed closely together.

Viola Rosetta is the name of a new and very popular dress material which closely resembles the old-fashioned alpaca. It comes in all the newest shades.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From Com. on Line Bridge at Franklin Mills, between Union and Morris counties.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

GENTLEMEN—Your com. on Morris county line bridge over the Passaic river at Franklin Mills, would respectfully report: That by reference to the August and September minutes of our last Board we find that the Board at that time voted to build a new bridge, but as the bridge appropriation on the part of Morris county would not admit of the expenditure of so large a sum, the joint committee only expended sufficient to make the bridge safe until new appropriations should be made, and now, after an examination, the joint committee resolved to recommend that a new iron bridge and new abutment and wing walls be built, and submit the accompanying resolution. All of which is respectfully submitted.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HERE AT LAST.

AFTER LONG AND WEARY WAITING RELIEF IS BROUGHT TO THOSE WHO NEED IT.

"Well, Pat," said an Orange county Physician to a complaining Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when its too late for me to use it."

When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, the rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days, for all affections to which a plaster is ever applicable. Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

POETRY.

THE WILD BIRD'S SONG.

R. A. M. IN THE JULY CENTURY.

What is it the wild bird says?
Come listen to his song:—
"Sweet, love is of the summer time,
And summer is not long."

"The blossom fades upon the bough
Before the month of June,
And when at last the red rose comes
She tarries but a moon."

"Come while the earth is glad and green,
We'll build our nest together;
For love is of the summer time,
And cannot bide foul weather."

O sweetheart! listen, listen well,
Unto the wild bird's song:—
"Sweet, love is of the summer time
And summer is not long."

The May is white upon the hedge,
Why should we longer tarry?
When hedge-rows bloom and wild birds nest,
Then is the time to marry.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE DAUGHTER-IN-LAW.

'Are we almost there, Charles?'

'Do you see that old moss-grown roof, with the huge brick chimney, peeping up among the apple blossoms? That is the house.'

Laura's heart gave an involuntary throb. Would they welcome her as a new daughter? Would they love her? Charles Page smiled as he read the thoughts passing through her mind.

'Do not fear, Laura; I do not know who could help loving you.'

Laura smiled a little doubtfully; she could hardly expect the whole world to look at her with her young husband's eyes.

Old Mrs. Page stood at the farm-house door in her best black silk, with her 'company cap' and white ribbons, as the stage coach rolled up—a hard featured old lady, with silver-streaked hair brushed away from her wrinkled forehead, and hands on which the net work of veins stood up like knotted cord. Her welcome kiss was like the peck of a bird of prey—so cold and hard did it seem against Laura's cheek.

'Mother!' whispered Laura, softly.

'I am very glad to see you, Mrs. Charles,' said the old lady.

'So you you are Charlie's new wife, hey?' said farmer Page from the sitting room; 'and a tall, well-grown girl, too. Come in, come in! Tea's most ready, and I dare say you'd be glad of a cup.'

There was something that passed like the chilled breath of an iceberg across Laura's heart as she entered, leaning on her husband's arm. It was not the welcome she had expected and hoped for; and involuntary she felt that her mother-in-law's cold, criticising eye was upon her, and with no favorable glance.

'I s'pose you've been brought up to work?' said Mrs. Page, senior.

No, Laura could not say that she had.

'Can you wash and iron your husband's shirts?'

'No.'

'Can you make bread?'

'I have never tried.'

'Cannot cook at all?'

'I am afraid not, ma'am.'

'Humph!'

At this stage Charles, who had been watching the deepening color on Laura's cheek with some annoyance broke in:

'But she can speak two or three different languages, mother, and paint beautifully, and I wish you could read some of the poetry she has written.'

'Humph!' again enunciated the mother-in-law. 'Language, painting, and poetry stuff won't make the kettle boil, you'll find, young lady.'

'She has been taught in a seminary, mother,' the young husband interposed, 'where she had no opportunity to learn the useful things you speak of. All in good time. Rome wasn't built in a day.'

But Mrs. Page, with her thin lips set together, was busying herself about the tea table. She need not have taken the trouble—Laura's appetite was pretty effectually destroyed.

'Come, darling,' said Charles, 'I want to show you the path to the spring in the woods.'

Old Mrs. Page looked contemptuously at them.

'That's all she's worth,' she muttered, 'to look at pretty things and listen to honeyed speeches. I wonder where Hiram Page would be now if I had been cut after that pattern?'

In short, it was an infinite relief all round when the short visit came to an end, and Charles took his young wife back to his home. Laura was depressed and melancholy, and Charles, though he would not confess it even to himself, was a little prejudiced by the strong opinions expressed by both father and mother on the subject of his matrimonial choice.

Scarcely six months had passed over the horizon of their married life, however, when clouds came to darken it.

Charles Page was only a clerk in a bank, but his humble salary had proved sufficient for himself and Laura. Consequently, one night returning late from business, he slipped and broke his right ankle so badly that a severe illness followed; it brought the grim phantom poverty nearer to them than was at all pleasant.

'We won't let the old folk's at home know it, Laura,' said the young clerk, trying to speak cheerfully. 'I am afraid they're in trouble themselves about that note my father endorsed for old Millman, and I dare say we shall get along nicely with a little economy.'

Laura was sitting by her husband's bedside one dreary November twilight, when there was an unwonted bustle at the door below—a throwing down of trunks and shrill articulation of voices. She hastened to the head of the stairs—it was farmer Page and his wife.

'We've no home of our own, now,' said Mrs. Page, senior, speaking bitterly and loud, 'and we've come to stay with you and your wife, son Charles.'

'No home of your own, mother?'

'No—thanks to your father, who would indorse that note for old Millman, and he's lost every cent—just what he might have expected, I think—and we are as good as beggars in our old age! But, dear me, what's the matter Charles?'

Then followed explanation and recitals much to the relief of Farmer Page, who had instinctively slunk into the background until the violence of his wife's wrath should have subsided.

'And you're no better off than we be!' sighed Mrs. Page, glancing sadly around the room. 'Ah—h! this is what come of fine ladies for wives!'

It was not exactly a logical conclusion, but it seemed to afford wonderous consolation for the old woman, who immediately untied her bonnet strings, and prepared to make herself at home.

'Is this money in the pocketbook all you've got left, Charles?' demanded his mother, about ten days after their unexpected arrival.

'Yes, mother.'

'Only five dollars; and the rent will come due to-morrow, and there is a bill for groceries enough to make one's hair stand on end—and as for milk, I don't see how men can sleep at night, who charge ten cents a quart for milk that's half water. And nobody knows how much the doctor's bill is going to be, and Bridget's wages—but I'll discharge her to-morrow morning. If your wife can't do the housework for these rooms, I can.'

Charley Page closed his eyes wearily and pressed his hand upon his throbbing temples. It was not the best course of treatment for a feverish patent, this enumeration of domestic troubles; but old Mrs. Page had never been ill herself, and consequently made little allowance for the weak and wornout state of her son.

'I don't know what Laura is doing up in her room,' said the old lady. 'She had a gread deal better buy a wash-tub and a bar of yellow soap, and do the family washing instead of putting it out and spending her time writing poetry.'

'Laura has been the most tender and devouted of nurses to me, and I will listen to no aspersions of her conduct,' interrupted Charles Page indignantly.

Mrs. Page screwed her lips tightly together as she turned the solitary note over and over, but she ventured on no more derogatory remark down stairs. Creeping like a veritable pussy-cat up the stair-case, she entered her daughter-in-law's apartment with the stealthy movement peculiar to the quadruped.

'Painting, eh, Mrs. Charles? Let me tell you I think its your duty to attend to a little more of the housework and less to your fine amusements up her. Do you see this note? It's all we've got left in the house, and if you think it is going to support you in idleness you are mistaken.'

'Is Charles alone, mother?'

'Yes, he is alone; but as I was about saying——'

'I think we had better join him.'

Old Mrs. Page hobbled down stairs after Laura's graceful movement, grumbling as she went.

'Laura,' said her husband, with a troubled face, 'mother tells me that our funds are getting low——'

'Only a five dollar bill left,' said the old lady, clutching at it greedily, as if fearful that it would take wings unto itself and vanish into thin air.

'And,' resumed her son, 'what are we to do?'

'Might as well ask advice of the big wax doll in the shop around the corner,' grumbled Mrs. Page, sotto voice.

'See, Charles.'

Laura had opened her little portemonnaie, and was showering its contents on the bed close to Charles' hand.

'My gracious me! My dearest wife, how did you get this?'

Laura's cheek flushed high with pride and gratification.

'My little picture of 'Spring in the Wilderness' was sold this morning, Charles, and I have orders for two more at the same price!'

'A hundred dollars!—for a trumpery picture!' gasped Mrs. Page, senior, under her breath, yet looking at Laura now with deference and admeration dawning in her face. The woman who could earn a hundred dollars by a week's work was not to be dispised.

Charles Page's eyes filled with tears; he pressed his lips lovingly to the hand whose whiteness Mrs. Page had so despised.

'My dear little wife; my helpmate indeed!' he murmured, softly.

'You must not wear a serious face any longer, Charles,' she said, hiding the depth of her emotion by an assumed playfulness. 'We have plenty of money now to last us all until you get well, and mother'—she spoke it with an effort—'shall lay it out for us in the most economical fashion!'

But to Laura's astonishment, the old lady hastily jumped up, and threw her arms around her neck with a curious hysterical sob.

'Laura, I've been wrong all this time—I've been nothing but a conceited, obstinate old fool!'

'Mother!'

'I have—and there is no use making a secret of. I've scorned and despised you, and been as ugly as ca ne to you, and now——'

'Now we will forget it all and begin anew, mother,' said Laura, soothing the old woman's agitation with a tender kiss.

It was not until Mrs. Page the elder *had had her attention called to the pre*eminent necessity of an apple pudding for dinner, that she left off reproaching herself and crying on Laura's shoulder.

'For I have been such an old Witch of Endor to you,' she remarked, most truthfully, as she went into the kitchen.

And Charles Page, smiling up in his wife's face as the door closed, said:

'You have conquered her, Laura.'

PETROLEUM FIELDS OF THE WORLD.

The relative importance of the oil fields of the world succinctly stated as follows, in the July CENTURY, by E. V. Smalley, in his graphic and fully illustrated article on "Striking Oil": "Nearly all the petroleum that goes into the world's commerce is produced in a district of country about a hundred and fifty miles long, with a varying breadth of from one to twenty miles, lying mainly in the state of Pennsylvania, but lapping over a little on its northern edge into the state of New York. This region yielded, in 1881, 26,950,813 barrels, and in 1882, 31,398,750 barrels. A little petroleum is obtained in West Virginia, a little at various isolated points in Ohio, and a little in the Canadian province of Ontario. There is also a small field in Germany, a larger one, scantily developed, in Southern Russia, and one still larger, perhaps, in India. The total production of all the fields, outside of the region here described, is but a small fraction in the general account, however, and has scarcely an appreciable influence upon the market. Furthermore, the oil of these minor fields, whether in America or the Old World, is of an inferior quality, and so long as the great Pennsylvania reservoir holds out, can only supply a local demand in the vicinity of the wells."

THE MODERN PEGASUS.

A SKETCH OF THE BICYCLE AND TRICYCLE.

But mount and wheel, where nature's heart
Beats strong amid the hills.

The bicycle—an institution among us. In the simple modest language of tented literature we exclaim: 'The 'cycle, that marvelous, stupendous aggregation of consolidated skilled handiwork, that surpurlative acme of almost grace and unparallelled artistic beauty, that noiseless, soundless, silent, quiet steed, whose charm has bewitched the riders of both hemispheres, and whose brilliant achievements have crowned with glory, shooting lightnings of life and strength and health from ocean to ocean!!!!!!'

But, seriously speaking, our terrible outburst is not after all so great an exaggeration, for the pleasure and exhilaration of the open air, while astride one of these wheeled steeds, is something which only the wheelman can fully appreciate. For some dozen years the English have ridden and appreciate the conveyances, until to-day the people of 'over the water,' have become a riding people. From the member of Parliament, from the royal family, down to the common people, does one find the lovers of the 'wheel.' Along the roads of the Mother Country spin the cycles, the ladies vieing with the men in this graceful, healthful exercise. Practically the use of the bicycle in this country began with the establishment of the Pope Manufacturing company of Boston. In 1878, Col. A. A. Pope, the president of of the company, conceived the idea of manufacturing bicycles, seeing no good reason why this country should not make its own machines. The result was fully up to his most sanguine anticipations, and his keen forsight was realized. To-day this Columbia bicycle stands alongside the sewing machine, the piano and the watch, four industries which have excelled the finest of foreign manufacture. The few machines of five years ago have sent out a posterity of thousands. There is hardly a town of any size from the Atlantic to the Pacific whose streets are not traversed by these beautiful 'wheels.'

From a business point of view the bicycle is receiving great consideration, for it undoubtedly fills a place long vacant in the commercial world. To the business man who lives at the South End, the Highlands, South or East Boston, Cambridge or the other suburbs, the bicycle becomes the 'rapid transit' for him, carrying him from his home to the office in less time than the cars, at no expense, and as he enters his office he feels clear in mind and good all over, and when the day is closing he returns home to exclaim:

> No good digestion wait on appetite,
> And health on both.

For morning rides or evening spins, or for aliday runs, the bicycle furnishes the best of steeds. The bicycle requires no stable and little more care than a sewing machine. The expense of repairs is reduced to the cost of piano tuning, and a good bicycle costs less than a good horse.

A summer tramp into the country on a bicycle! What a glorious time one might have. The nooks and corners of Nature all bowing in silent welcome! The woods, the hills, the valleys, everything in holiday attire, while you wheel along in company with an endless panorama of the best from Nature's storehouse. How your blood will bound, and the chest expand, and, gracious what an appetite! No waiting for the cars, no railroad fare to pay, no being obliged to stay where you don't want too, but a grand off go-as-you-please—and—come-back-when-you-want-to sort of a vacation; every man his own horse and altogether a combination of life and health and strength and a grand good time. What does such a trip cost? Well, it costs just what you are a mind to make it cost. A good 'tramp' on wheels would not drain the pocket a great deal, say from $1 a day and upwards. You would sleep at a hotel to-night and at a farm house to-morrow. You would dance with Bacon street to-day and to-morrow bask in the sunshine of the red-cheek farmer's daughter, and eat the apple pies of your 'laddies.' And then to come home full of spirits, backed up with health, ready to work and able to work.

But shall the fair one be left out of these charmed privileges? No, ten times no!! The indisputable right of woman to go where man does lead, in this as in the pages of literature, meets with acceptance. The tricycle is for ladies as well as for gentlemen. These beautiful machines are especially adapted for our ladies. No special style of dress is necessary save the absence of hoops, and the absence of hoops is preferable, tricycle or no trycycle.

The exercise of bicycle and tricycle-riding is healthy.

Leading physicians in Europe and America are strongly recommending these machines for gentlemen and ladies. Dr. Richardson, a famous London physician, writing on the tricycle in 'Good Words,' says:

'I shall rejoice to see the time when this exercise shall be as popular among girls and women as tennis and the dance, for the more fully the physical life of our womenkind is developed the better for men as well as women.'

It is a woeful fact that the ladies of Boston and other cities are negligent in the taking of proper exercise. The carriage ride is good, but, at best is lazy exercise. The saddle is excellent, but horseback riding is not considered as good as walking, which last has been held as the best of exercises. But walking grows monotonous. Bicycling is walking astride a wheel, easier than walking, for you do not have to lift your whole weight, and one can go twice the distance in the same time with less exertion. Every muscle is brought into play and developed, the chest is expanded, a perfect circulation is given the blood, the legs and the arms are made stronger, digestion is aided; in a word, the riding of the 'wheel' gives a gentle, common-sense exercise to the body, inside and outside.

> The exercise of riding does not strain;
> One moves as softly as the rain from Heaven
> Upon the wheeled horse; he is twice blessed;
> It strengthens ev'ry part, and, as he rides,
> He's happier than the happiest; he becomes
> The wheeled monarch. Lucky is the one
> Who moves by easy pedalling power
> The attitude of ease and rapid'ty.

EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

HONEST AND JUST.

The Ohio Democracy recently in State Convention assembled declared thus—

"We favor a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of a government economically administered and so adjusted in its application as to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive interests at home and afford just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies."

That in concise language describes such a tariff as the Constitution permits and the practical welfare of the whole country demands.

It is clear of the vagaries of Free Trade and of the monopolizing spirit of Prohibition.

It would raise sufficient revenue to meet all the honest needs of government, but no surplus to fatten official robbers, and induce extravagant, useless and corrupt Congressional appropriations.

It would deny to specially favored classes the opportunity of exacting tribute from other classes of people.

It would fairly and amply encourage every legitimate home industry and afford healthy protection to every kind of labor.

It would treat with equity and open a way for personal enterprise and thereby stop the ravages of mercenary Monopoly.

It is honest.
It is just.
It is Democratic.

FOURTH OF JULY.

Nations, like individuals, have their birth-day anniversaries, mile stones along the traveled highway of time, and the thoughtful observance thereof is both proper and profitable.

We are nearing such an era in the life history of our country.

Wednesday next marks one hundred and seven years since American Independence was born.

To us the period seems long, yet, when compared with the duration of other nationalities, it is brief, and weighed in the scale of importance it outvalues them all.

To think of the infant of 1776, now the robust champion of 1883, and the events that have transpired within our own widening borders during such interval of time, is to still the patriotic mind in wonderment and clothe it with gratitude to Him whose mighty hand has wrought the marvelous work.

The same Almighty Power that stood by Washington in the dark days of struggle for national existence has guarded us as a people to the present hour, and will keep uplifted the shield of safety, if we only loyally do our part.

To meditate on the past, and resolutely determine to preserve, and perpetuate the blessings of Freedom, is to mingle duty with honor.

So may the glorious day of July be individually observed.

On Monday last Governor Ludlow received a communication from Lebbeus B. The Governor replied that he approved of the object of the resolution and authorized the appropriation of that amount of money for the purpose.—Trenton American.

The platform commends a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of the Government, condemns the reduction on wool as a discrimination against agricultural interests, favors a graded license system in regulating the liquor traffic, and protection of Americans abroad, and demands a purification of the civil service.

Those who are talking of the Brooklyn Bridge as the most wonderful work of the kind in the world should remember that China has a little affair at Langang, over an arm of the China Sea, some five miles long (the Brooklyn Bridge is hardly a mile), with 300 arches, over the pillar of each arch reclines a lion 21 feet long, made of one block of marble. The roadway is 70 feet wide, a barbarian generosity of space which bridge builders in more civilized countries would do well to imitate.

A death confession in a quiet Pennsylvania town has just revealed a very curious case, which greatly resembles the Corsican vendetta. A young Pole confessed on his death bed, that on the betrayal of his father's sister, the father and son swore to extirpate the whole family of the betrayer, and himself, his father and three brothers, one after another, fell under their deadly vengeance. Perhaps this is true, and perhaps it is the ravings of a disordered imagination.

On Saturday last a base ball match took place between the second nine of the Westfield base ball association and a nine of the young lads belonging to a recent organization known as the Laurel Club of our place. The game was played upon the grounds of the Westfield club. Considerable interest had centered upon the game, it having been the talk among the boys for weeks. The second nine supposed they had a 'soft thing' and thought they would use the young lads up in short order. The result proved very different, the score being 22 to 20 in favor of the latter club. The Laurel club with a little more practice, think they will be able to beat the first nine.

Song—My Country 'tis of Thee.

Among the many good things one could scarcely say which was the most enjoyable. Mention might be made of the bright little children's Operatta "Little Red Riding-Hood," which was rendered by pupils of the Primary Dep't, so pleasantly and effectively, and great credit is due to Miss Spicer—teacher of the A class of this department—for her unwearied and withal successful exertions in preparing the children for their parts. The Coloquy—"Scandal Circle," by the five young misses, deserve more than a passing notice, so well were their parts taken and so true to life was the representations. Among the recitations those entitled "Old Shoes," "The Fisher's Daughter," "A Free Seat" and "The Little Witches," were so well rendered as to call forth generous applause from the delighted listeners. The Piano Solo by Miss Emma Darsh, was a choice bit of music, and the manner in which played, showed undoubted musical talent in the performer. The Piano Duett by the Misses Nellie Irving and Lizzie Arnold was so well done as to call forth encomium. The chorus singing was of an excellent quality and from the best of selections. The Medley—"Bonapo" being especially well sung. There were present the Rev. N. W. Cadwell, Rev. H. J. Neill, Rev. W. Hoagland, Rev. Jos. Greaves and the Trustees of the school, all of whom enjoyed the occasion, as was evidenced by the happy expression of their countenances. At the conclusion of the programme, Mr. Stephen S. Mapes, President of the Board of trustees, made a few well timed remarks in relation to the work of the school during the past year; congratulating the teachers on the success which had crowned their labors, and also the children on the marked advancement they had made over any preceding year, referring to the fact that many of those who would receive certificates of merit and advancement had, during the year, made up the loss sustained by them in being kept from school during a large portion of the preceding year by the ravages of Scarlet Fever. The certificates were then presented to 30 pupils of the Second Grade and 51 pupils of the Third Grade who received them with delight and pleasure. Great credit is due to the unwearied efforts of Prof. W. Henry Elston, Principal of the school for the successful conclusion of the year of labor. Taking it all in all the exercises of the Westfield Public School for 1883 was a grand success.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

FRUIT trumps!

HANG out your flags on the glorious Fourth.

THE two-cent postage law goes into effect on October 1st.

LARGE numbers of our citizens patronize the Sunday trains.

THE repeal of the fire-cracker will soon be heard in our land.

NOW the bull-frog's tuneful throat welcomes the summer boarder.

GREEN gooseberries are getting ready to put the public's teeth on edge.

PLAINFIELD will not "celebrate" on the 4th, only in the ordinary way.

AN effort to get up a first-class trotting exhibition on the Fair Grounds, July 4th, has failed.

THE arrival and departure of Sunday trains is not attended with unusual noise or blowing of locomotive whistles.

A TROT will come off at Waverly on July Fourth between Peralto and Irish Lad for a purse of $2,000. There will be several other races.

THE great water excursion of the year is that of the Saengerbund to Oscawana Island, on the Hudson, Thursday, July 12th.

PERSEVERANCE LODGE, K. of P., and the friends of its members, will visit Long Branch, Ocean Grove and Asbury Park, Friday, July 27th.

FARMERS and others should remember that there is to be a Fair the coming Fall, given by the Union and Middlesex Counties' Agricultural Association.

OCEAN GROVE, Asbury Park and Long Branch, Friday, July 13th, by the First Baptists and their friends. The first excursion to these places, of the year.

NEXT Friday the contract will be awarded to the lowest bidder at Miller's Hotel, for paving the bed of the stream beneath of the Somerset street bridge.

A PETITION is receiving a host of signatures praying the Common Council to lay a suitable stone cross-walk at the intersection of Front street and Park avenue.

THE summer farmers will offer special boarding rates to dudes, as several of those creatures will make it unnecessary for the farmers to make and set up scare-crows.

MESSRS. Wm. Potter and L. Austin were awarded the contract for furnishing the wood work of the Clinton avenue line bridge last Tuesday by the Freeholder's Committee.

THE elegant floral designs displayed at the wedding of Mr. Charles P. Sebring and Miss Estelle A. Lawson last Tuesday, were from the conservatory of Mrs. Haines on Park avenue.

THE Turn Verein and a large delegation from other societies of the State, are having an annual picnic and shooting in Wooden's Grove, this (Thursday) afternoon and evening.

IT is stated that Mr. Albert Hedden, the liveryman, has purchased a lot on Fourth street, opposite the depot, and contemplates the erection of a brick livery exchange on the site shortly.

FIVE dollars was the fine imposed by the City Judge upon an intoxicated citizen who so far forgot the respect due as to lie drunk on the sidewalk near the Mayor's residence. Saturday evening.

A TOO-TOO glove of yellow hue; a stove pipe hat; a toothpick shoe; a stylish coat; a languid drawl; a watch so big; a cane so small; a "sweet" moustach; a pompadour; a "dude" is this and nothing more.

MESSRS. Lutkins & Hummer of Park avenue and Second street, have purchased the stock and trade of Taylor's market, and the latter closed its establishment on North avenue, Wednesday, after a brief existence.

A FOURTH street resident who for some time past has so ruled his household as to drive his daughter to seek shelter elsewhere, was arrested last week by Captain Chase, and "sent below" by Judge Good, for thirty days.

THE ladies of the M. E. church of Dunellen, N. J., have arranged for a lawn festival to be held on the grounds adjoining the church, during the afternoon and evening of the Fourth of July. By attending all will aid in a good cause.

SUMMER fans are enormous and more bizarre than ever. Red is still the favorite color for both sunshades and fans, especially for the country and seaside. Bright scarlet, however, is less in favor than such shade as fire, copper, nasturtium, terra cotta and crushed strawberries.

THE Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company have just issued a handsome railroad advertisement on account of the coming re-union of the Grand Army of the Republic at Denver, July 24th to 28th. It represents Sheridan's cavalry charge at Winchester, with that gallant officer at the head of the command.

A TEAM of horses, attached to a family coach, the property of Mr. L. Myers, on Front street, became frightened last Sunday morning, after conveying the family to church, and ran through Front street toward home at a terrific pace. The coachman pluckily held on to the reins and kept the animals in the middle of the street, which at that hour was fortunately not crowded with vehicles, and finally succeeded in stopping them. The event created no little stir on the street for the time being.

MR. Daniel Smalley, of North Plainfield met with an accident on Thursday afternoon last, which for a time seriously alarmed his friends as to his ultimate recovery. He was assisting to hang up a side beef in the slaughter house of Adam Fritz, when he was observed to slip and fall over the animal. When picked up he was unconscious and remained so for several hours. It was thought at the time that his head and spine were injured by the fall, but Dr. Fritz, who attended him pronounced it a case of apoplectic fit. Mr. Smalley was able to be about again on Saturday.

THE Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company on Sunday last, inaugurated the running of Sunday trains on all the branches of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. The church people of Newark regard this innovation with apprehension, and none more so than the attendants of the First Presbyterian church of Newark, alongside of whose grounds the road runs and the depot is located. Besides the dozen trains each way from Newark and New York, eleven will be run to and from Elizabeth, three to and from Trenton and Philadelphia, and three on the Perth Amboy division. The worshippers of the First Presbyterian church think that the noise of these trains will interfere with their services. They claim that much difficulty has been experienced by them on week-day evening services, when the church windows were open. The general feeling among them, too, is that, as the Newark and New York branch is a purely local road and not a through route, Sunday trains are not only unnecessary, but are clearly violative of the law under which the Newark and New York road was originally chartered. Some go so far as to intimate that an injunction may be applied for, with the view of ascertaining whether the railroad company can with impunity interfere with religious worship in New Jersey.

AFTER July 1st, no check stamps will be necessary.

OVERCOATS were not uncomfortable on Wednesday last.

ON our second page will be noticed Swain's new advertisement offering wall-papers at remarkably low prices.

OWING to the weather, the Park ave. Baptists were compelled to postpone their lawn party until this (Thursday) evening.

GAZELLE Engine Co's grand annual picnic will be held in Wooden's Grove, during Thursday afternoon and evening, July 19th.

MISS Butts, dressmaker, and Mrs. Fine milliner, will occupy their present quarters in the Stillman homestead property, until Aug. 1st.

MR. John Paoli, the fruit and nut merchant of North Avenue, has just leased for three years one of the stores in "Flagg's Hotel," recently occupied by Taylor's Market.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST presses were the first, and, so far, the only ones to issue a pocket time table containing all the recent changes of the Central N. J. Division of the P. & R. It was printed for Reynolds the pharmacist.

JUDGE McCormick, at Elizabeth, Wednesday, reversed the decision of the Plainfield jury that held Mr. B. A. Mumford as damaged by the shooting of a wandering dog by Col. Dietrich. No evidence was furnished that the animal belonged to anyone.

A WOMAN "old enough to know better," but so crazy with rum as to be unconscious of her action, held "high carnival" in the public streets, Saturday. Captain Chase and officer Conway captured the offender who was subsequently sent to Elizabeth to spend the ensuing month.

PLAINFIELDERS desiring to secure one of those artistic crayon portraits by Mr. Sidney E. Flower, must leave their orders at his studio or Estil's stationery store within the next ten days. This is imperative, as Mr. Flower has arranged to leave this city in a short time.

CHARLES PETERSON, the florist, having renewed a lease on the premises occupied by him on Peace street, next to the Friend's Meeting House, for a term of ten years, will make decided improvements in the way of buildings, etc., to accommodate his increasing business.

A VALUABLE Jersey that had escaped from its pasture, and suffering from a possible sun-stroke, endeavored to enter Rockfellow's grocery Friday afternoon, but was gallantly repulsed by Deputy Sheriff Neighbor. A veterinary surgeon afterwards bled it "under the railroad bridge," but was unable to save its life.

THE citizen's meeting called to confer with the Fire Board, in Zephyr's house, Wednesday evening, was adjourned until this evening (Friday) at 8 o'clock, in the same place. It is desired that a large attendance be present, that some emphatic action may be taken towards the arrest and conviction of past and future incendiaries.

Attention, Health Board.

Back of the Zephyr Hook & Ladder Co. house, and adjoining the pool room of Mr. G. P. Smith on Second street, is an overflowing cess-pool that is exceedingly objectionable to the nostrils of the residents in its vicinity, and threatens the health of the entire neighborhood.

Good for the Colonel.

Col. Fourat, Chief of Police of New Brunswick, by his skill and shrewdness has succeeded in running to earth a clever railroad thief, one of a gang that have recently been diligently plying their avocation of robbing freight trains on the Pennsylvania Railroad. The Col. is well fitted for the position he holds as Chief of the New Brunswick police, and should receive the credit due him for his recent clever capture.

The New Time Table.

The issue of the 24th inst., of a new time table by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Co., Central New Jersey Division, added a number of Sunday trains as stated by us last week, and designated Netherwood as an additional stopping place for many of the regular trains. Reynolds the druggist, was the first and only one to issue a convenient pocket table for the use of our citizens at Netherwood, giving them the time of trains between that place and both New York and this city.

Quite A Crowd.

The New York Commercial Advertiser of Tuesday says: "The Hotel Netherwood, Netherwood, New Jersey, last evening was the scene of a brilliant ovation to Mr. S. V. Woodruff, in honor of the opening of this well-known hotel under his management. There were over 1,000 guests present, representing many well-known residents of New York, Brooklyn, Staten Island, as well as Plainfield and the vicinity of Netherwood. The grounds were brilliantly lighted, the hotel handsomely decorated with bunting, while the large parlors and broad piazzas were all life and gayety. The festivities were kept up until a late hour."

People Wonder

Whether Plainfield will ever have electric light.

When the Public School building will be completed.

When the City Hotel will again be leased and to whom.

When the construction of the Opera House will be commenced.

Whether their names will appear in the printed list of delinquent tax-payers.

When arrangements for the next Fair of Union and Middlesex counties will be perfected and announced.

Whether the District Messenger Service will become an assured fact in Plainfield, and hope that it will.

Whether or no there will not be another time table issued by the P. & R. Railroad for the Central Division very soon.

Why it is that the street sprinkler appears late in the afternoon to wet down the dust which has been blowing about during the day. It were better that the dust was laid earlier in the day.

Personalia.

Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Curtiss are spending a few weeks at Norfolk, Conn.

Robert L. Livingston, Esq., President of the Common Council, and family, have left for Montauk Point.

County Collector Sheridan has taken the contract for a new Roman Catholic Church at Port Richmond, Staten Island.

The Rev. Wm. Manchee of the Congregational church, lies dangerously ill, at his residence, of congestion of the brain.

The Syracuse University, last Wednesday afternoon, conferred the honorary degree of D. D. upon the Rev. J. L. Hurlbut of this city.

Rev. F. Fullerton, S. J., son of Judge Fullerton, Washington, D. C., was the guest of Father Smyth last Sunday, and preached at both Masses.

Rev. P. E. Smyth, of St. Mary's church, is absent this week, attending the annual retreat of the Catholic clergy at Seton Hall College. Father O'Hanlon, of North Plainfield, takes charge during his absence.

"Robbie" Manning, one of Plainfield's ex-firemen, but now holding a position in the New York Fire Department as driver for Battalion Chief Prescott, is spending his vacation of eight days among former friends in Plainfield.

Out-Door Festivities.

Next Wednesday afternoon and evening, the Glorious Fourth of July, the members of St. Joseph's parish and all who desire to enjoy themselves, will hold a picnic in Wooden's Grove. Cahill's music will be furnished. If stormy the affair will be postponed until the next day.

Also the Opinion of Others.

The report of the Committee on English Composition was a matter beyond criticism so long as it remained in the hands of that Committee or the Board of Education, but when it was made common property in so public a manner as by its reading before eight hundred people in the Park avenue Baptist Church, Thursday evening of last week, we feel justified in rising to remark that such report was abusive and such publicity offensive.

A Result of Patent Insides.

A warrant was issued Tuesday morning by Justice Davis against H. C. Page, editor of the Bayonne Herald, charging him with libel. The complainants are "The." Allen, his mother, and his brother John. The libelous article is a clipping from the Indianapolis Journal, which says that the mother of the Allen boys taught them to steal, and rewarded the one which brought home the greatest amount of booty each week. Civil suits will also be entered against Page.

Base Ball.

The Crescents, last Saturday, added another to their successive list of victories, by defeating for the second time this season the Roselle nine by a score exactly the same as that made during the previous game. The visitors came here with an imported catcher and otherwise prepared to achieve a glorious victory, but in spite of the many glaring errors perpetrated by the Crescents the Roselles were unsuccessful. At one time the score stood 10 to 5 in favor of the latter, but the game ultimately closed with the Crescents 21, Roselles 14. Features of the game especially admirable were the work of Stone the Crescent's pitcher and Jarvis the umpire.

High School Reception.

About three hundred invited friends of the past graduates of the Plainfield High School, were present at the reception given by the classes of '81 and '82 to that of '83, in the mansion at the corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, during Thursday evening of last week. The rooms were handsomely decorated and the balconies and porches were illuminated with colored lanterns. Refreshments were served above, while below—as morning approached, and the elders retired—dancing was universally indulged in. The same admirable orchestra that favored the audience at the Commencement, marked time for the dancers with sweet strains from "Merry War," "Queen's Lace Handkerchief" and other popular compositions of the day.

A Display of Ignorance.

It is decidedly amusing to read or hear the comments of would-be critics upon the merits of classical and the demerits of modern music. Those ignorant of harmony or incapable of recognizing melody, are of course incessant in their expressed admiration of fugues, nocturnes and other disconnected constructions beyond the appreciation of any but professional musicians.

The most laughable incident in this relation is the sarcastic (!) reference by a self-imagined judge to the playing of "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By," by the band at the late Commencement of the Plainfield High School. Such style of reference by such a connoisseur is the more laughable when it is remembered that in the same article attention is called to the appropriateness of the rendition of Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata,"—a composition that was entirely omitted from the programme.

Plainfield Academy.

The closing exercises of the Plainfield Academy for Boys, Seventh street, took place Friday, June 22, 1883, in the new school building. The large well ventilated school room was filled with the boys and their friends. The exercises consisted of recitations by the members of the school and the award of medals. The following young gentlemen received medals. Joseph Sandford, Herbert Peck, Charles Graves, Clarence Murphy, Theo. Reissig, William Moore, Max Mayer, J. Polak, Joseph Darby, Alex. Thompson, W. Marsh, D. Adams, E. French. To the Primary Department—W. Darling, Geo. Rockfellow, Willie Tyler, Eddie Finch, Gerald Lowe, Seymour Marsh. One young gentleman, D. S. Adams, finished the course and will enter Columbia College in the Fall. The school closed with the following corps of instructors. James Lyon, C. A. Bleu, Ph. Gumprich; Mrs. Mark Stimson, Drawings; Prof. Abel, Piano. The next school year will begin September 10th, with an efficient corps of teachers.

The P. H. S. Commencement.

Many years of experience had shown the Board of Education that the issuing of tickets of admission to the High School Commencement was not productive of any satisfactory results, and this year the Park avenue Baptist church was thrown open to the public, high and low, first come, best served. It is needless to remark that the auditorium was jammed full, Thursday evening of last week, and it was almost impossible to reserve enough seats in the front for the graduates, their parents, the prize winners, the teachers and the Board of Education. Not only was every square inch of room occupied inside, but the windows were filled with the eyes and ears of innumerable outsiders.

The programme as given in our last issue, was carried out in a most gratifying manner to the audience and with great credit to those who took part. The graduating class was small, but it averaged remarkably brilliant in beauty, and ability. The essays were all admirable, and one or two were unusually praiseworthy. The floral offerings were impartially distributed and particularly profuse.

The music was, as in past years, excellently rendered and thoroughly enjoyed except in one or two parts where the selection were too ultra classical to be appreciated by more than a decidedly small handfull of its hearers.

The prizes were awarded by ex-Mayor Harper, as follows:

First, second and third prizes in Penmanship, offered by Mr. J. Kirkner.

1st prize, Lizzie Darling; 2d prize, Belle Clem; 3d prize, Anna F. Ten Broeck.

Honorable Mention—Maude Bowers, Arthur Mulford, Kittie Newell, Lizzie M. Stewart, Katie Mullen.

First and second prizes for Mathematics, offered by Mrs. C. H. Stillman:

1st prize, Eleanor Sherwin; 2d prize, Fannie Ecceours.

Prize for United States History, offered by Mr. John W. Murray:

Prize, Kitty L. Clem. Honorable Mention, Edward F. Low.

First, second and third prizes for English Composition, offered by Mr. Geo. H. Babcock:

1st prize, Maud A. Bowers; 2d prize, Fannie Ecceours; 3d prize, Alice Holmes.

Prize of Spelling, offered by Mr. Mason W. Tyler.

Prize, Clara M. Burt. Honorable Mention, Alice Manchee, Emma Coriell.

First and second prize for Botany offered by Mrs. C. A. Rutler:

1st prize, Eustace D. Manchee; 2d prize, Annie A. Moore.

Publish Their Names.

We expect next week to publish a list of those delinquent for taxes on real estate, with the amount of each for 1881 and the property to be sold to pay such.

Fire at Dunellen.

A dwelling house belonging to the Central Land Improvement Company, at Dunellen, was burned to the ground early Wednesday morning last. The building was known as the "Tower House." The occupants for the past few weeks had moved away from the house the day before. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Grub Grabbers.

The inmates of an encampment of tramps, down in the swamp land near the old homestead of the late Wm. B. T. Lane, were on the forage again last Saturday evening. The refrigerators cleaned out this time were those of Mr. Edward S. Lamberton and Charles E. Harris, located on East Fifth and West Fifth streets, respectively. The "boys" undoubtedly entertain their friends in a bountiful manner Sundays.

Sudden Death.

Mr. John Edgar Corlies died suddenly of heart disease at his residence, just beyond the city limits in Piscataway township, last Friday morning. The deceased, who for some time past had been a great sufferer from rheumatism, was just beginning to enjoy again his usual health, when his death occurred without the slightest premonition. Friday morning his wife was unable to rouse him from what seemed a sound sleep, and subsequently sent a friend of the deceased to his room to wake him. He spoke to him and receiving no reply, shook him once or twice. A slight gasp was the only evidence of life apparent, and death immediately followed.

The deceased leaves a wife and children—the former being the daughter of J. Howard Wright Esq., of New York city, from whose residence the funeral took place, Monday last.

Read the Law.

Serious accidents resulting from the use of toy pistols have been noted frequently. To avoid such lamentable occurrences in our own city, dealers, police, and the public should take heed of the following law of 1882:

An act to prevent vending, using or exploding of guns, pistols, toy pistols or other fire-arms to or by persons under the age of fifteen years in this State.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to sell, barter or exchange, or to offer or exhibit for sale, barter or exchange, any gun, pistol or fire-arms in this State to any person under the age of fifteen years.

2. And be it enacted, That it shall not be lawful for any person to sell, hire or loan to any person under the age of fifteen years, any gun, pistol, toy pistol or other firearms, or for any person under the age of fifteen years to purchase, barter or exchange, to carry, fire or use any gun, pistol, toy pistol or other fire-arms in this State.

3. And be it enacted, That any person offending against the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on being thereof convicted shall be punished by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars or imprisonment at hard labor for any term not exceeding three months or both, at the discretion of the court.

Music followed later in the evening, and until midnight the main parlor was filled with dancers—twelve sets at a time occupying the floor during the square dances. Mr. S. V. Woodruff, the proprietor, was untiring in his courteous efforts to entertain and contribute to the gratification of the three hundred guests present—and his efforts in such direction were completely successful. Deserved praise was accorded him by all, and his generosity will long be remembered.

Among those present were—Mr. and Mrs. Milliken, Mr. and Mrs. Froment, Mr. and Mrs. Bowers, Mr. and Mrs. Brewster, Mr. and Mrs. Roome, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Weaver, Dr. and Mrs. Conover, Mr. and Mrs. Polak, Mr. and Mrs. Van Zandt, Mr. and Mrs. Knowland.

Miss Depew, Miss Knowland, the Miss De Forests, the Miss Hicklings, Miss Grace, Miss Anthony, Miss Pinkerton, the Misses Holmes, Miss Weeks, the Miss Van Zandts, Miss Murray, Miss Underhill, the Miss Demarests, Miss Foster, Miss Marsh, Miss King, Miss Dunn, Miss Van Name, Miss Mathews.

Messrs. Bass, Murray, Montgomery, Derby, Foster, Hyde, Curtis, Thomas, Stover, Mulford, Yerkes, Hickling, Gavett, Underhill, Pearsall, Fox, Reynell, Anthony, Brigham, Bleeker, Graham, Groendyke, King, Dunn, Van Emburgh, Jackson, Shaw, Armstrong, Halleck, Harberger, Smith, Plummer, Dr. Field, VanName, Everitt, Hegeman.

We Are Told

That President Gowen has gone into retrenching with a vengeance on the New Jersey Central Road. He has cut off hundreds of passes, pays his own fare and compels his own family to do likewise. On a recent trip between New York and Philadelphia, in company with several associates, his friends "flashed" their passes for parlor car seats and Mr. Gowen paid his twenty-five cents.

A Service of Song.

The Devotion Com. of the Y. M. C. A., on Monday night, decided to hold on Saturday evenings for a time, a service of song, to which everybody is invited. This meeting will be especially for song. Good music will be furnished. The meeting will be free, and any person can come and go as he pleases. A programme for this week Saturday evening, will be arranged soon. People on the street are invited to step in the Lecture Hall of the Y. M. C. A. Saturday evening and help in this service. It can be made a great success if all lend their aid.

Warren Mission.

The Warren Mission Sunday School will re-open with appropriate exercises on Sunday, July 1st, at 2½ o'clock, p. m. and 7:45 in the evening. Rev. Mr. Tuttle will address the school in the afternoon and Rev. J. B. Allen, of Elizabeth, will preach in the evening. In consequence of more improvements being made in the building than was anticipated when the work was commenced, there is a debt of about $500 more than was subscribed to complete the work, but no fears are entertained but that this amount will be raised without difficulty in the near future.

That Opera House.

All arrangements insuring the speedy construction of the Music Hall on Front street, are progressing favorably and rapidly. The deed of the property on which it is to be erected is already drawn up, and the title will be given the Association in a few days. The first assessment called for is being largely paid in, although the date set is yet two weeks off. The Building Committee has been authorized by the Board of Directors to engage Mr. Eben L. Roberts to draw up the plans and specifications for the building; and that able architect, in connection with the Committee, will have entire supervision of the design and erection of the Hall. The building Committee, as already published by us, is composed of Messrs A. Berry, C. Tweedy W. R. Potts, A. Gilbert, M. W. Tyler.

Sebring—Lawson.

There was a large gathering of friends and invited guests at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Q. Lawson, corner of Seventh Street and Grant Avenue, this city, Tuesday afternoon last, to witness the marriage ceremony between their daughter Estella Amanda and Mr. Chas. P. Sebring. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. J. Yerkes. Messrs. Barton Kline and Elmer Runyon of this city, Mr. Manning of Trenton and Mr. Lemon of New York, officiated as ushers. The wedding gifts were numerous and costly, among them being a check for a handsome amount to the bride from her father. The floral decorations were handsome and unique in design. An elegant wedding feast was served, while fine music rendered by Prof. Frazee gave all so desiring the opportunity to indulge in the pleasures of the dance. The happy pair started for an extended wedding trip on the 6:33 p. m. train, followed by hands-full of rice, old shoes, etc., thrown after them by their many friends and well wishers.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS EDITORS—Has your Westfield correspondent gone a fishing or were there no "Wisps" last week to gather up? Since the departure of the late unlamented Monitor, our Westfield community has had no voice in the public press, aside from stray items that find their way into New York papers and the "Wisps" and fragmentary notes published by the Plainfield press. In spite of this we still live, progress, and are happy. The business interests were not paralyzed by the crushing valedictory of that sheet.

An engrossing topic during the past few days has been the new railroad management.

What is to be the outcome of it? What does it mean that the time table is changed on Sunday? Are our quiet Sundays which have been so restful to mind and body, to be disturbed by the rush and roar of frequent trains? Are our devotions within sacred walls to be interrupted by reminders of Sabbath desecration? Many of our people have been attracted to our town by its delightful Sabbaths, which have been like the Sabbaths of early memories, dreamy, peaceful and serene. Is the charm to be broken? We hope not.

One of the growing institutions among us is Fireside Council, No. 715, Royal Arcanum. But eight months have elapsed since its organization, which was effected with about twenty charter members. It has now a membership of fifty, with several applications on file.

To any one desiring to make provision for his family at his decease, the method of insurance provided by this organization is worthy of commendation. The cost of insurance is small and being met by frequent small assessments is scarcely felt; and the fraternal spirit which is developed by the business and social meetings forms a strong bond of union between its members. The Council is honored by having in the Regent's chair R. R. Sinclair, Esq.

Past Regent Edward Harbison has recently been made Deputy Grand Regent, an honor which he fully merits. Though this Council is young, it is said by those who have the latest statistics, to lead the State in rapid growth. The Order numbers over 40,000 members in the United States.

The Commencement exercises of Mrs. Ladd's school have usually been very enjoyable. Held in Lyceum Hall or the Methodist church as has been the custom heretofore, invitations could be sent out without stint. But this year it was thought best to hold the exercises in the school room, and so to meet the conditions of limited space but few invitations were given out; only to those whose children were members of the school. The exercises passed off pleasantly and the proficiency shown by the pupils was very creditable to themselves and their teachers.

The Anniversary exercises of the Presbyterian Sabbath School were held last Sunday afternoon, commencing at four o'clock. The church was well filled in every part. The school and visitors listened attentively to addresses delivered by Dr. Gillespie and A. D. F. Randolph, Esq. Mr. Edward Beebe conducted the musical exercises, which consisted of singing by the school, supported by organ and cornets. The audience room was tastefully decorated. The pulpit was banked each side with masses of ferns and lilies, while the pulpit itself was ornamented with floral designs.

The school shows a remarkable growth during the year, there being 250 on the roll at the beginning of the year and 316 at its close. It would appear that the percentage of attendants is larger now than heretofore.

The great revival last Fall and Winter under the new pastor, Rev. N. W. Cadwell, has no doubt largely benefited the school, which has now been several years under the management of its present superintendent, Mr. W. Henry Riston, who is also principal of our public school. W.

A LITTLE OF EVERYTHING.

The Great Northwest. The great increase in travel to the Northwest, has forced the "Famous Albert Lea Route" to put upon its line magnificent Dining Cars, in which passengers will be served meals second in quality to no first-class hotel for the small sum of seventy-five cents each. The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway, which controls this route, has always maintained a reputation for giving travelers first-class meals on its Dining Cars, and in putting on this line the same class of cars, it fills a want that the traveling public will appreciate. "The Albert Lea Route" is carrying a very large share of the Northwestern travel, and, although early in the season, has commenced to sell tourists' tickets to the various pleasure resorts in a volume sufficiently large to guarantee an immense summer traffic.

The Doctor's endorsement.—Dr. W. D. Wright, Cincinnati, O., sends the subjoined professional endorsement: "I have prescribed Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs in a great number of cases and always with success. One case in particular was given up by several physicians who had been called in for consultation with myself. The patient had all the symptoms of confirmed consumption—cold night sweats, hectic fever, harassing cough, etc. He commenced immediately to get better and was soon restored to his usual health. I have also found Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs the most valuable expectorant for breaking up distressing coughs and colds that I have ever used."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

ROSES DE GUERRE.

Lauderdale, a little Virginia town, lying between the Blue Ridge and Alleghany Mountains, was astir early one June day of 1864, for the soldier boys were coming—the ones in gray—and they would of course be very hungry, a condition that had become chronic with Confederate soldiers by that time. They were to march rapidly through the town, and whatever hospitality was to be shown them must be in a sort of passover form. So the town-folk were making busy preparations to waylay the regiments on the street with bread, and meat, and coffee—rye coffee—and buttermilk, and sorghum molasses ginger cakes, and blackberry wine and home-brewed ale.

You would have taken it for market day in some Old World village, so animated was the thronged street and with people in such queer costumes. The dignified matron and the doucest maid wore complacently furniture calico of the most startling pattern; gray and blue 'domestic' was made to fit slender waists whose ante-bellum silk and velvet had given out; hats and bonnets were all shapes and no shapes, all home-plaited of wheat straw; old silk stocking-legs figured as well-fitting gauntlets, and the more stylish wore shapely gloves of chamois skin which had known the good effects of soap and water, since it used to rub the family silver. Trim feet were covered with hand-knit stockings, the cotton having been spun in the winter evenings when reading was scarce for the want of new books, and letter-writing scanty because of ten-cent stamps, and sociabilities few because there were no beaux and no refreshments to be had. Stout leather shoes of village manufacture were laced over those primitive hose, with heels the farthest possible removed from French. Men were conspicuously absent, only old men and boys representing the sex, except where some sleek publican managed to put a Government officer between himself and hot bullets.

This was the picture presented by the long straggling main street as Lauderdale awaited the soldiers that bright summer day.

Cary Brook, however, was not lending herself to this good work of catering; she seemed to be devoting herself to the æsthetic interests of the soldiers, for the adornment of her dainty self occupied an unusual time. And yet Col. Bird, of the 101st Mississippi, was not in the division which was to pass through Lauderdale that day; but when does not a pretty girl think that her lover may 'happen along.' Oh, if you knew what funny clothes we wore in those days! And if you could believe how serenely fine we felt in the queer duds! Cary's dress on that particular morning was of homespun cotton—that is, woven in the country, fifteen dollars a yard, ten yards to a dress; total, one hundred and fifty dollars. It was new and fresh, fitting her 'slim elegance,' as Howells says, 'as the sheath of the flower.' Brown lengths of hair ornamented her head with lavish beauty, but no girl is satisfied with nature's adorning, and the long blockade had brought Cary's stock of pretty things to the lowest ebb. The white frills were freshly crimped, and throat and wrists responded to their becoming effect; 'but oh for a touch of color!' sighed the girl with true instinct, for the sombreish dress needed it.

Why there, to be sure, were the Greville roses, climbing right against her window. Long clusters of small flowers, white shaded with many varieties of pink, all in one bunch, and so sweet.

Half an hour later, Cary stood at the front gate with the Greville roses in her hair and at her throat, as intent upon rationing those dear, dirty fellows as a chief of commissary. But they were tremendously hungry, and after the last bite that could be found in the house had been given out, a straggler came up and asked for breakfast.

'Oh, I'm so sorry,' said the girl. 'We shall have to keep a fast-day as it is, but I would keep two at a time if I only had a nice breakfast for you.'

The soldier took off his old slouch hat and made such a low bow that Cary turned again to look at him.

'To what regiment do you belong?' she asked.

'I am just from the Lynchburg Hospital,' he replied, 'and am on my way to join the 101st Mississippi.'

The roses suddenly bloomed in Cary Brook's cheeks and she came out into the road.

'Then I must shake hands with you,' she said. 'I love every man in the 101st Mississippi.'

'Ah!' said the soldier, with a quick perception of the facts of the case, 'so much the better for the 101st Mississippi.'

'And I'm sorrier than ever not to have a breakfast for you,' cried the girl.

'If you would give me your roses,' he said, with a gallant grace, 'I should not miss the breakfast.'

She unfastened them quickly, both clusters, saying archly, 'With one condition—that when you reach the regiment, you will present them to Colonel Bird with my compliments.'

'On my honor as a rebel,' replied the soldier, again bowing low, and carrying off Cary's bright flowers.

'Now, I call that a skillful dodge,' he chuckled, as he hastened after the troops. 'It will not be perjury to break an oath sworn on a non est, and having no 'honor as a rebel,' I may keep the roses and a clean conscience. May the kind fates give me a chance to tell that pretty rebel some day that she gave her roses to a Yankee spy.'

The next two weeks witnessed many a rapid march and countermarch, and Lauderdale held its breath while the dust of its streets blew first upon gray coats and then upon blue. Meantime, our ravisher of the roses had gotten safely back to his own place and his own coat, and early in July entered the little mountain town with Hunter's army. The gala look it had worn two weeks before was gone, and a sullen expression marked its countenance. No women were to be seen, boys were kept carefully in-doors by anxious mothers, and the old men had a sudden access of feebleness, leaning on canes and halting in their gait, in a way very comical to one who remembered their alertness two weeks before.

Two hours after his arrival our quondam Mississippi man rang Mrs. Brook's door bell, and was answered by that matron herself, with an air of dignified defiance. After a great deal of trouble in persuading her to allow him to see her daughter for a moment only, and in her presence, Cary was summoned. Again the soldier bowed low before her, this time removing a blue cap instead of the old slouch, and returned her withered but carefully preserved roses.

'I beg leave to restore unlawful gain,' he said. 'I did not reach the 101st Mississippi, but I have never doubted that it has the ablest commander in the Confederate army—and the most fortunate?' Whereupon the soldier showed that he had practiced retreating.

There came a time when it was Col. Bird's luck to reach Lauderdale with his Mississippi regiment. The Greville roses had faded, and Cary could only find October leaves with which to crown her radiance. Colonel Bird was more than satisfied with the result; he claimed a kiss for every smile or favor given to others during his long absence, and this brought out the story of the Greville roses and the so-called Mississippi soldier.

'But there is one comfort, Edmund,' said pretty Cary, tired of her lover's uproarious hilarity, 'I didn't give the rascal any breakfast.'—Our Continent.

A LOVE-STRICKEN GEORGIA SWAIN.

When a Georgia father found out that his son John was sparking a certain farmer's daughter for a year or more without settling any question, he called him out behind the stack and said to him:

'John, do you love Susan Tinker?'

'I guess I do, dad.'

'And does she love you?'

'That's what I dunno, and I'm 'fraid to ask her.'

'Well, you'd better throw out a few hints to-night and find out. It's no use wearing out boot-leather unless you are going to marry her.'

That night, at 10 o'clock, John came home a wreck. His face was all scratched up, his ear was bleeding, his hat gone and his back was covered with mud.

'John! John! What on earth is the matter?' exclaimed the old man, laying down his paper.

'Bin over to Tinker's,' was the reply.

'And—and—'

'And I threw out a few hints to Susan.'

'What kind o' hints?'

'Why, I told her I'd been hoofing it two miles four nights of a week for the last two years to set up with her while she chawed gum and sung through her nose, and now I reckoned it was time for her to brush her teeth and darn up her stockings, cure the bile on her chin and tell the folks that we are engaged.'

'And her father bounced you?'

'No, dad, no; there's where I'm consoled. It took the whole family, including Susan, two hired men and three dogs, and then I wasn't more'n half licked. I guess we moved on 'em too soon, dad—I guess it wasn't quite time to throw out hints.'

MADE BY A SILK WORM.

Most of the many boys and girls who already own or who intend to own silk-worms will be glad to know of a way by which its silk-spinning powers may be made to produce immediate results, and the silk-worm will itself save you the time of its own own house-building and spare you the trouble of reeling and weaving. It can, in fact, be made to produce for you, under your own supervision, a piece of beautiful, golden silk. Nor is this all: it will even shape the silk and fasten it to a fan, a tambourine, or to any other similar frame; provided, of course, that the silk-yielding capacity of the worm be not overtaxed.

The method of accomplishing this result is a very simple one, though, like many other simple things, it is not commonly known. Very many Chinese ladies, however, know it, and make use of it to divert the weary hours they usually spend in idleness.

When the worm is full-grown, and has filled its reservoir with the silk-making material, it is ready to build its house or cocoon. This you must not permit it to do. It must instead be placed on a common Japanese fan, of the battledore or lawn-tennis bat shape.

Nature tells the worm that it must spin—spin a cocoon if possible, but spin anyhow. If permitted to have its own way, it will build on the flat surface of the fan; but if prevented, it will wander from side to side of the little platform, spinning all the while its wonderful silken thread, fastening it at the edges, and in the end covering the whole surface with a closely woven golden web almost as tough as parchment.

In relating this fact, however, we must, at the same time, impress upon the young silk-culturist that, if he tries this experiment, it had better be with only two or three worms, and that it would be wrong and cruel to divert many of the little creatures from their proper work of cocoon-making, for the sake of the ornamental fan-covers they might be made to supply. Though the result is, of course, interesting, it is decidedly not for this purpose that you are supposed to keep silk-worms.—J. R. Coryell, in the July St. Nicholas.

FASHION NOTES.

All dressy mantles are short.

White will be worn extensively this summer.

The emerald is the most fashionable stone worn at present.

Pompons will be fashionable all summer for the crescent hat.

Blue bows are on red dresses, and red bows on the blue ones.

Embroidered pongee pattern dresses will be much worn this summer.

Glove and mitts now contrast with instead of matching the costume.

The preference in earrings is for unassuming drops and antique hoops.

The red dotted veils now worn are extremely dowdy and unbecoming.

The Alpine hat will be revived again this summer for wear at the seaside.

Flower dog collars, and fans to match, will be a pretty feature of summer evening dress.

A tiny omnibus of gold, with diamond windows, and horses of rubies, is the latest conceit in lace point.

A stuffed owl, or a bird of Paradise, can be placed with propriety on the outside of the summer parasol.

Bright red linen cuffs and collars, with white spots, are now worn with the darker colored spring dresses.

In summer cotton a good red and blue plaid, both in zephyr and gingham, will be particularly fashionable.

Stylish handkerchiefs of black mull, to be worn as fichus, are dotted with red pale, yellow, orange, white or blue.

Silk skirts laid in wide plaits are trimmed with a strip of velvet up each pleat. The redingote is of cashmere of the same shade as the velvet.

Belts are now narrow, being only an inch and a half wide, and are fastened with two buttons with buttonhole, and are pointed at the lapped end.

A skirt with three deep flounces edged with lace or embroidery, and a short round basque, is a fashionable style of making morning dresses.

BLESSED BE NIGHT.

THE NEW FIRST READER.

LESSON I., WHICH TELLS US WHAT WAS DONE IN A SINGLE NIGHT.

It is night. A policeman awakes with a sudden start and moves around the corner, having a secret fear at his heart that he had slept through all that night, all next day and far into to-morrow night. It is night in a great city. The poker and faro rooms are in full blast, 10,000 loafers are holding down street corners, and here and there an intoxicated alderman can be seen making his way to a policy shop or a gathering of the pavement ring. Under cover of darkness, first manufactured over 6,000 years ago, the hotel-beat lowers his dude from the fourth-story window; all who have dead-head tickets start for the opera houses; hundreds of young men set out to spark; reporters fondly look forward to fires, robberies and murders, and church choirs meet to rehearse and wrangle and lay up clubs for each other.

'Tis night in the country. The stock has been fed, the squeal of the pig is hushed, and the tired horse munches at his corn and wonders why his master throws in so many cobs without a kernel on them. The watch dog sits at the gate, perfectly willing to chew up any of the neighbors for a cent, and within the farm house all is serene, or would be if John Henry could find the grease for his boots, Mary Ann could find her novel, the old man discover the hiding-place of the boot-jack, and the mother solve the mystery of how some of her neighbors managed to get a dress costing two shillings per yard while she had nothing but calico.

'Tis night on the ocean. The proud steamer sails gallantly on and on, the captain snoring in his berth, the mates playing euchre, the lookouts asleep, and everything in readiness to swear, in case of collision, that it was all the other vessel's fault. Nothing is heard but the steady beat of the propeller, the groans of the immigrants, and the voices of men and women declaring that anybody who plans an ocean voyage for pleasure ought to be shot dead with codfish balls. The sportive dolphin gambols away his hard earnings, the whale rolls over for another nap, and the business-like shark follows in the wake to pick up any opportunity which may tumble overboard.

'Tis night on the prairie. The red men gather about the camp-fire to count the scalps they have taken within the last week, and to grumble at the government for not furnishing them port wine and repeating rifles. The white hunter and trapper curls himself up to wonder where he can find old bones for breakfast, and to realize what a fool he has made of himself, and the gaunt wolf shoulders his empty stomach and sets out in search of something to make life worth living for.

Night grows apace. In the city the weary wife takes her place in the hall with club in hand. In the country the old folks fall into bed aweary with the work of the day, and the young people spark and chew pop-corn. On the ocean the sea-sickers continue to grow worse, and the songs of the mermaids fall flat. On the prairie the Indians finally decide to make war in the spring, the hunter falls asleep to dream of eating his boots for dinner, and the wolf meets a wild-cat and offers to toss up to see which shall eat the other.

Blessed be night. But for it the burglars and gas companies would fill our poor-houses, and the afternoon papers would have no morning journals to steal from.—Detroit Free Press.

Chief Justice Chase was once having an overcoat lined with fur, writes Eli Perkins, when the negro tailor suggested that it would be warmer if the fur was outside.

'My experience has convinced me,' said the chief justice, 'that fur is warmer when it is turned inside, and I can never understand why the coon don't wear his fur that way.'

'But you would understand if you was a coon,' said Sambo.

'Why, asked the chief justice.

HERE AT LAST.

AFTER LONG AND WEARY WAITING RELIEF IS BROUGHT TO THOSE WHO NEED IT.

"Well, Pat," said an Orange county Physician to a complaining Irish patient some years ago, "for that pain in your chest you had better go home and put on a mustard plaster. I can't think this minute of anything better. And by the way," added the doctor turning to a friend, "I wish somebody would invent a real good plaster—something actually helpful for such cases as Pat's. Maybe they will sometime, when its too late for me to see it."

When BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER was placed on the market about ten years ago the doctor's hope became a fact. Because of the rare medicinal virtues inherent in it, its rapid action and sure results, the Capcine is fast displacing the slow-acting plasters of former days, for all affections to which a plaster is ever applicable. Price 25 cents. In the middle of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE HEIRESS.

Adele Fayton gave a vexed little toss of her head—a gesture intended to be awfully annihilating to Mr. Harry Browne, standing on the lower step of the piazza at the Seaside house

'Very well, go of course, Mr. Browne, if you prefer; but really, I think it is too bad of you.'

'Of course it is,' added pretty Miss Hunter, with the golden locks and baby blue eyes that were considered irresistible by the generality of the sterner sex. 'Of course it is too bad, when you know that to a dozen ladies stopping at the seaside there are only such a few gentlemen. I know what the trouble is, though, don't I, Mr. Browne? You are tired of us—the same over and over—and you are reserving you forces until the much talked of and anxiously expected beauty and heiress arrives upon the scene.'

Harry turned lazily around and smiled.

'I am afraid I shall have to incur a great risk in contradicting a lady,' he said, good-humoredly.

Haughty Adele Fayton flashed him a half-indignant, half-sarcastic glance from her black eyes and said.

'And when this heiress has arrived, I daresay Mr. Browne will lose all his interest in his solitary boat rides and fishing excursions, while we poor maidens get through the day as well as we can, for lonesomeness. Mr. Browne, you are selfish.'

'Well, yes, rather, if always wanting the best of everything concerned is what you call selfish. But I will redeem my character by proving to you that which will doubtless set your hearts at rest. I don't believe in your wonderful coming beauty and heiress to begin with, and in the second place, I would commit hari-kari before I'd marry an heiress. Now am I vindicated?'

He bowed and walked off, just a little to the discomfiture of the ladies on the piazza—went off to the beach where his boat and fishing tackle awaited him, with more of a disgusted, impatient look on his face than was customary with him.

'What a lot of idiots a fellow comes across in the course of his life! Because a lot of pretty girl lose their heads when a wealthy beau comes along, they argue, with a woman's senseless persistency, that the men are as mercenary as themselves. Marry an heiress! not if she were as—as Venus, and every word she dropped was transmitted into a ko-hi-noor!'

Mr. Browne pushed off his surfboat, dashed and plunged through the breakers like a sailor, born and bred. He rowed out a mile or two to another fishing boat containing a couple of barefooted boys eight and ten, with wide brimmed hats, and bright, tanned faces and brown eyes. A tall lad of sixteen, worried and anxious looking who was evidently dismayed at the increasing swell of the sea, and the freshening south wind, was of this company, and also a young girl with lovely dark grey eyes, grave and thoughtful, yet bright and flashing as she looked at Harry while he rowed nearer and nearer in response to the hallo of the boys.

A decidedly nice-looking girl, hardly what one would call handsome, and yet the pure, fair complexion, ever so lightly sustained, the scarlet mouth so tightly closed, the waving, deep gold-colored hair, thickly braided and hanging down to her waist, and the glorious gray eyes made a whole that Harry Brown quite thoroughly admired as he pulled along side and spoke to her.

'You seem to be in some difficulty," he remarked, touching his hat courteously.

She bowed.

'Joe is rather demoralized, I think. There is no danger, is there?' Harry glanced at Joe's scarlet face, and the restless antics of the boys in the boat.

'If you had a man in charge who knew his business there would be no danger. As it is this young man has no excuse for venturing so far out.'

'We were fishing,' she said in a pleasant, apologetic way, 'and didn't realize how far we had gone. 'Well,' with a troubled look that was more anxiety than fear, 'we must do the best we can. Perhaps you would tell Joe what to do with the boat.'

Harry replied: 'If you will allow me to exchange places with your pilot I will row you ashore. I am Harry Brown, of ——, brokers, —— street, at present stopping at the Seaside house.'

'You are very kind, Mr. Browne, and I will thankfully accept your offer. My name is May Harper.'

She laughed as if the oddness of the mutual introduction amused her, and Harry made up his mind that she was the nicest girl he had met in many a day.

'Well, then Joe, you jump in here and row yourself to shore. You won't have any trouble to take yourself only, will you?'

The alacrity with which the lad changed from the Bella to the Sadie was sufficient answer, and neither Harry nor Miss Harper could help smiling as Joe put for the shore.

'I dare say he thought he was all right,' May said apologetically.

'He'd no business to think so, though. Shall I take you straight back, Miss Harper, or would you rather fish awhile longer?'

'If you please, I will go back. Aunt Jane will be worried about me.'

She leaned against the side of the boat, trailing her hand in the water, while the two children sat quiet as mice, watching Harry with awe and admiration as he pulled long, steady strokes that sent them spinning along, while Harry thought:

'She is the most sensible girl I ever came across. Pretty, modest, dignified, pleasant, with no sham reserved about her, any more than too much freedom. And what a thorough lady she is! I know it as well as if I had met her a thousand times.'

And May, sitting opposite him, watching the water as it danced and sparkled, thought if ever there was a true gentleman in manner, speech and action, it was this handsome stranger who was rowing her to shore.

'Will you tell me opposite to which hotel I am to row you?' he said, as, after a most delightful hour's conversation, he rested on his oars and waited her commands.

She laughed.

'Oh, no, not at any hotel. I am stopping at one of the fisherman's cottages, about two miles further down, on your left.'

Harry was delighted with the prospect of continuing with her.

'Yes, I know where you mean. The place we call Sandy Beach.'

'Yes; and you can't imagine how lovely it is there—old fashioned, rather crowded quarters, to be sure, but with not the faintest vestige of anything like fun or style.'

'And you are actually boarding there, Miss Harper? Why didn't you come to one of the hotels—the Seaside, for instance? It's a nice house, and pleasant company is there.'

May smiled.

'Not I. I came to the seashore to enjoy myself and get away from fashion and dress and tiresome people.'

'And you have succeeded in enjoying yourself at Sandy Beach?'

'Admirably, these four weeks. You are the first devotee of the world that I seem since I came here.'

Her dark gray eyes sparkled mischievously as she gave a glance across at him.

'Is that really so? I hope then, you will not condemn yourself to such isolation any longer—at least from me. May I join in your solitary amusement, Miss Harper?'

A faint flush crept over her rare pale face as she said:

'I am not sure Will and Ben will agree to such an arrangement. They are my inseparable companions in my rambles,' and she looked at the two litte lads.

Harry gravely produced a handful of pennies which he gave them.

'Now, young gentlemen, may I escort you and Miss Harper on a charming excursion I know of to-morrow?'

'I must make it conditional, then,' said May laughing. 'Promise me you won't tell any one there is anybody down at Sandy Beach, will you? Occasionally fishing parties come to arrange with Uncle John—I call them Uncle John and Aunt Jane Jackson—horrible, isn't it?—but I always contrive so that no one sees me, for I am determined not to be drawn into society this summer, if I can help it. I don't want to see company.'

'But you don't regard me as company?'

'No,' she replied, 'I don't regard you as company?'

After that it was all up with Harry Browne, and he went back to the Seaside house acknowledging that he was in love at last, and with an unknown, obscure, who, doubtless for other reasons than her dislike for society, perhaps for pecuniary reasons, was staying at Sandy Beach. He liked her all the better for it; he honored her good sense, and he fell over head and ears in love.

The next three weeks were the most blessed ones he had ever spent in his life. He disgusted Adele Fayton and her friends daily by his persistent neglect of them. He continued his solitary excursions—solitary till he came to Sandy Beach, where May was already ready to accompany him, or entertain him, or bewitch him, until one day he told her he loved her dearly, and that it was the one wish of his life to have her for his wife.

And May, with her soft eyes shaded with the tenderness of love and trust unspeakable, looked in his handsome face and told him she had loved him from the moment he had rowed up beside her that summer day.

As he took her in his arms and imprinted a lover's kiss on her red lips and put his arm around her slim waist, his heart gave great throbs of thanksgiving for this blessing on him.

* * * * * * * *

The piazza of the Seaside house was a bewildering, bright scene, with the gayly-dressed girls standing in earnest conversation as Harry Browne came up to the house.

Adele Fayton tossed her pretty dark head saucily.

'There! Didn't I say Mr. Browne would be on hand to greet the heiress? You men can't withstand such a golden temptation. Mr. Browne, she has arrived at last.'

'She? Who?'

Adele laughed sarcastically.

'There isn't the least use in your pretending you don't know what I mean. You know I mean the heiress.'

Harry smiled—a sort of pity coming over him as he remembered how much happier he was than the one who should be fortunate with this wonderful newcomer.

'Yes, I really had forgotten. Arrived, has she?'

Bertha Hunter went up to him in her gushing manner.

'I prophesy you will be the very first to go wild over her. She is just what I imagine you will like. Great, dark-gray eyes and the goldenest hair; and so romantic; I wonder you never came across her in your solitary rambles. She has been staying down at old Jackson's cottage all Summer; but then May Harper always had curious ideas. At all events, she is here now, and I am dying to introduce you, Mr. Browne."

He stood confounded for a moment while he tried to realize it.

May, his darling, the heiress whom he had declared he would rather commit suicide than marry? May, in her cheap, blue flannel suits, with no gloves or veil on her hands or face, she the great heiress whose movements and sayings were chronicled in the daily papers—whose dresses were copied by less favored mortals, whose presence was as welcome as the sunshine?

'And she is pretty, too,' Adele Fayton said, a little venomously, as if it were quite a shame. 'I saw her as she went to her room.'

Harry glanced composedly up at the array of faces and said:

'I am glad you think May is pretty. I think she is the loveliest girl living. So you did not know that I was engaged to her?'

There followed a lull in the merry chatter that eloquently expressed the dumbfounded astonishment of Harry's announcement.

RAPID TRANSIT.

Uncle Mose owns several small shanties on Galveston avenue, which he rents out, but one of the tenants is rather slow in coming up with his rent, so old Mose had to make him a pastoral visit. Just as he was coming from the house old Mose met Jim Webster.

'Jim,' said the old man, 'which am de fastest trabbler you ebber heerd tell about?'

'Dey say dat de ray of light trabbles more den 200,000 miles a second, but I nebber timed it myself,' replied Jim.

'Dar's a man in Galveston what can gib de ray of light fifty yards start and beat it de wust kind.'

'O'way, ole man. Lyin' is ketching and I hain't been vaccinated since de wah.'

'Hit am jes as I told yer. Gabe Snodgrass, what owes me for four munfs back rent, can outtrabble de light.'

'Did you see him doin' it?'

'I went to de front doah, and jess as his wife opened de front doah, I seed Gabe slide out de back doah. 'Is Gabe home?' says I. 'He's done gone to Houston,' says she. Hit am fifty miles to Houston, and he must hab made de trip while I was lookin' at him slide out de back doah. Just fetch on your ray ob light, and ef it don't hab to hump itself to catch up wid Gabe Snodgrass when I comes fer de back rent, den I's a fool—dat's all.'

DOOFLICKER AS A SAILOR.

HOW HE WAS CONVERTED IN THE PACIFIC OCEAN—A TOUGH YARN.

"Yes, my son," said Dooflicker, as he and Theopholus stood on the Randolph street viaduct, looking out on the restless waters of the lake, "I was once a sailor on the broad, broad ocean, and I had some terrible experiences there. Once I was wrecked in the—"

"Is that what Mr. Dusenbury meant, paw, when he said you were a total wreck?"

"No, my son, Dusenbury is no friend of our family. But I was going to tell you of the time our ship was blown to pieces in the Pacific Ocean. We had sailed from San Francisco for Honolulu, and had been at sea for some four weeks when one night a tremendous storm struck us, and in a jiffy tore away every stitch of canvass on the boat. Everybody supposed his day had come. I wouldn't have given ten shillings for every life on the boat. And the worst of it was, the storm kept increasing after the first shock. Pretty soon it began to take away the masts and the out-rigging, and when morning came there we were, being tossed about on the resistless waves like so many bugs on a chip. I tell you, my son, those were the hours in which men thought of their Maker. Men who had never prayed before fell to their knees and sought shelter for their souls in the divine harbor. Men who had braved battles on land and on sea stood pale and motionless with fear. That night made me a Christian. I thought of the many things I had done to merit providential vengeance, and I prayed to Heaven that my good resolutions for the future be accepted as atonement for the past. I thought of the little deceits I had practiced, of the little untruths that had on one or two occasions escaped my lips, and I said to my Maker: 'Oh, if I may be forgiven for the past my future shall be spotless.' I shall always think the object of that storm was the conversion of that ship's crew, for just as soon as we had acknowledged the power of the Almighty and the godliness of his crucified son, the sky put on a bright face and the turbulent waves fell into a sweet little rippling as of laughter, and all was peace and tranquility."

"What did you do then, paw?"

"Why, we just set sail and went on our course as happy as a set of jolly sailors newly converted could be."

"Did God stick up some new masts and throw down some more sails to you?"

Dooflicker saw a man over on the government pier motioning to him. He gave Theopholus a nickel and told him to take the street car for home.

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL.

A colored man was hanging around one of the opera house doors the other evening, in a manner to show that he was deeply interested in what was going on inside, and a gentleman said to him:

'Why don't you go in? Under the civil rights bill you can take a seat in the parquet circle.'

'Yes, sah, I know all 'bout dat sah,' was the reply. 'Under de cibil rights bill I ken take any seat in de house; but under de present strain of my finances I couldn't buy two shingles if hull opera houses war' sellin' for ten cents apiece, sah!'

BOTH SIDES OF A BRIDGE.

'Say, mister, are we on this side of the bridge or the other?' asked a placid old lady on a Court street car.

'We are on this side,' responded the gentleman, gravely.

'Laws me! Then we ain't anywhere near Greenwood cemetery yet?'

'Yes, madam, we are within a few squares of it.'

'Sakes a massy! I thought Greenwood was on the other side of the bridge!'

'No, madam; it is on this side.'

'Well, that pesky old conductor told me it was on the other side when we started.'

'It was, madam, on the other side then, but we have crossed the bridge.'

'Then we are on the other side.'

'No, madam, we are on this side of the bridge. We've passed it.'

'And is Greenwood on the other side?' she asked, starting up in some alarm.

'No, it's on this side.'

'Don't try to fool me with your nonsense!' exclaimed the old lady indignantly. 'Don't try to make me think that Greenwood is on this side of the bridge when I know better, and don't try to make me believe I'm on this side of the bridge when I know I'm on the other! Don't ye do it.'

BAD FOR THE CROPS.

There are old men in Detroit who couldn't, if put upon the witness stand, swear to within thirty days of the time when corn and potatoes should be planted, when grass is ready for mowing, what weather is favorable for wheat, or indeed any point about farming, and yet these are the men most solicitous about the weather and the farm. On the Woodward avenue car yesterday was a pair, and they began:

'Awful storm, wasn't it?'

'Yes, terrible.'

'They say it has ruined the wheat.'

'Don't doubt it, sir. Wheat was just in the right state to be ruined.'

And it has killed all the fruit, I presume?'

'It probably has. I don't expect to see an apple or peach this season.'

'Must have rotted the corn?'

'Oh, of course. Corn was just in the susceptible state. We shan't have any corn this year.'

'The farmers must be discouraged?'

'Entirely so. My hostler was telling me that the milkman told him that the owner of the dairy had seen a farmer who said he would plow up his orchard and try to raise a crop of late potatoes.'

'Indeed! Still, if we have a late Fall, so that wheat can hold on to October, it may ripen.'

'Barely possible. I understand that the hay crop has been frozen up.'

'Do tell! Seems to me that our live stock could be taught to relish frozen hay, but I dunno. I think we may confidently expect a drought.'

'And a famine.'

'And those will probably be followed by an epidemic which will sweep the country.'

'With this they settled back to enjoy themselves, and neither one betrayed the least interest when a passenger rose up and inquired:

'Won't one of you gentlemen please arrange for judgment day to come between this and the first day day of August? I don't want to live in this vain world over six weeks longer?'

THE very best thing for you to do is to do the very best thing you know how. This is a hard rule to follow, but a safe one.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Be silent and safe; silence never betrays you.

Affliction, like the iron smith, shapes as it strikes.

It is a crime to consider any wickedness a sign of ability.

If you boast of a contempt for the world, avoid getting into debt. It is giving to gnats the fangs of vipers.

The temperate are the most truly luxurious. By abstaining from most things, it is surprising how many things we enjoy.

A loving act does more good than a fiery exhortation. What mankind needs is not more good talkers, but more good Samaritans.

Aim high. You may not touch the mark, but by a high aim you will come nearer to it than by not trying at all. Then by making the effort many persons have come nearer to it than at first anticipated.

It is undeniable that the more fully we come to know the average man or woman, the more unexpected good we find in them, and the greater allowance we ought to be made for their defects. One good rule, then, for securing justice in this matter would be to speak no ill, and, as far as possible, to think no ill, of strangers or enemies, simply because in the one case we have no adequate means of judging, and in the other we are disqualified from doing so by our feelings.

A MEAN TRICK.

A man who probably hailed from Buffalo played a powerful mean trick on a Detroit bridal couple at Niagara Falls the other evening. They went to a hotel and registered, had supper, and then started out for a sight view of the Mighty Roarer. They had not gone far when a man called to them and said:

"Have you just been married?"

"We-h-have," answered the groom.

"Going to stay here a day or two?"

"Yes."

"Having registered at my hotel, you probably intend to remain there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I want to say a word to you. I don't want any ducky-deary nonsense around my house. I want no popsy-wopsy business on the verandas. I want no squeezing hands on the balconies, or feeding each other at the table."

The groom let his arm fall from his bride's waist in a slow and painful manner, and the stranger continued:

"The first time you call her peaches and cream, or she calls you darling, out you go!"

"Y-yes, sir."

"She's no sweeter than 10,000 other girls, and you are no more of a darling than I am, and I won't stand love-sick nonsense."

He walked away with that, and people at the falls who knew the bridal couple were amused to see them address each other as Mr. and Mrs. and to see what precautions they took to prevent touching hands or betraying any symptoms of love. They put in two wretched days, and it was only as they were upon the point of leaving that they discovered how a base villain had duped them.

REAL EDUCATION.

At the closing exercises of one of the New York public schools last week, Rev. Mr. Taylor, of the Broadway Tabernacle, delivered an address which abounded with excellent and practical advice.

He emphasized the fact that it is what young men do in their leisure hours that determines their character. "Tell me," said he, "what a young man does with his leisure time, and I will tell you what sort of a man he will become."

He warned them against taking short cuts to wealth and eminence and losing everything by so doing.

He bade them beware of considering the acquisition of wealth the main end of their lives, coupled with the remark —"It is not what a man has, but what he is, that is of importance."

There is golden worth in that concluding sentence.

It is the essence of true education.

It should be an engraven motto in every class room.

Purity of character is the standard to which, more than in any other age, the earnest efforts of the youth of America ought now to be directed.

It would elevate right above might, deaden the corrupting power of mercenary wealth, and remove one of the greatest dangers threatening the vitality of free government.

It is not what a man has, but what he is, that makes him worthy of honor and esteem.

THE TRUTH.

The Republicans of Minnesota came nigh getting on a Democratic platform at their State Convention held the other day, when resolving—

"We believe in a system of duties upon imports so applied as to provide revenue for the necessary expenses of the Government, and so adjusted as to encourage the development of the manufacturing and labor interests of the whole country."

The Democratic doctrine relative to that question reads thus—

"We favor a tariff for revenue limited to the necessities of a government economically administered, and so adjusted in its application as to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive interests at home and afford just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies."

The Minnesota Republicans are inferentially correct, the Ohio Democrats are so positively.

The Democratic plan is just and proper. It is in harmony with the Constitution and calculated to advance the welfare of all sections and all legitimate interests.

It would

Re inaugurate that good old virtue—public economy.

Give to labor permanent employ and honest reward.

Afford every business pursuit a chance to prosper.

Lay with stern equity the burden of taxation.

Overthrow the enemy of freedom and right—monopoly.

Investigate as you may and argue as you please, the truth will arise above all controversy and prove that Democracy remains to be the steadfast friend of the People.

At an auction sale of American coins in New York recently the naked bust Washington cent of 1792, uncirculated and with proof surface, brought $14.60. The half dollar of the same date was sold for $72, and another specimen of the 1792 cent, of which there are several varieties, was knocked down at $65. For the Washington trial piece $45 was paid, and several other coins and tokens of the same series realized good prices. The Confederate cent, one of the original specimens struck in nickel, went for $10.25.

THE NEW REPUBLICAN ISSUE.

The Republicans of Iowa have adopted a platform at their State Convention which declares positively for absolute Prohibition—for the prohibition both of the manufacture and sale of beer or liquor in the State—by an ironclad provision in the constitution.

We are entirely in sympathy with legislation calculated to check intemperance and placing the licensed liquor traffic under proper police regulations. People will be found in all places who make the use of liquor an abuse. Drunkenness leads to crime, and unfortunately crime nowadays too frequently escapes punishment. A man who deals in intoxicating liquors has no more right to sell them to a drunken man than a dealer in arms has to sell a loaded pistol to a child or a lunatic. No doubt a moderate license fee should be paid by a business which is supposed to add to the expense of pauperism and crime.

But remedial and restrictive legislation is one thing, and extreme, sumptuary, despotic legislation is another. Because ever so many men get intoxicated and commit offenses while in that condition, is it right, is it Democratic, is it Republican to put the chains of law on those who are good citizens and have perfect self-control? Because one man cannot control his own appetite, is the law to undertake to regulate the appetites of an entire community? Because negroes have a habit of cutting and slashing people with razors when they get into a fight, ought we to prohibit the trade in razors and compel every one to go unshaved?

It is a greater crime to attempt to interfere with the habits, tastes and amusements of a free people through intolerant, oppressive and unequal laws, than to distill liquor and to brew beer even though some people will occasionally get intoxicated. It is preposterous that a great Republican State should seek to incorporate in its constitution penal provisions against the sale of a glass of beer; that it should say in the constitution, supposed to be the bulwark of popular freedom, to the farmer, "You shall not use or sell your grain for this or that purpose," and to the owners of distilleries and breweries, "You must not pursue your business, and you must submit to the confiscation of your property." Such acts are wrong and absurd. They are the intemperance of intolerance, the despotism of fanaticism.

Undoubtedly the cause of this position of the Republican party in the West is to be found in the absolute absence of other issues on which it can appeal to the country. The Democrats have the living issue caused by the profligacy, vice and dishonesty of Republican misrule; by the necessity of restoring purity and honesty to the Government by "turning the rascals out." It is awkward for the Republicans to meet this with a counter-appeal to the people to "keep the rascals in." So they are compelled to look for an aggressive issue. Their original mission is ended. They have outlived their usefulness. The war, in which they did well, is a thing of the past. Slavery, against which they fought steadily, is abolished. Resumption, a true Democratic doctrine, is ancient history. All the old Republican cement has crumbled to pieces. The Republican politicians, with a still powerful organization behind them and an earnest and patriotic desire to retain office, seek to make the same political capital out of the temperance question they once made out of the question of slavery. But they will fail.—New York World.

John W. Brooks, Wednesday of last week, in the New York Supreme Court, received a verdict for $8,000 against the New York and Greenwood Lake Railway Company as damages for injuries sustained by him while riding on one of the company's trains. The train ran off an open draw-bridge over the Hackensack River one cold Winter day, and Mr. Brooks was taken out of a car through a hole cut in the top, in a half frozen and drowned condition. On the first trial Mr. Brooks recovered a verdict for $10,000.

EX-COLLECTOR JARRARD'S DEFICIT.

The Board of Freeholders of Middlesex county met at New Brunswick June 20th, when the report of the expert appointed to examine ex-Collector Jarrard's accounts was read, showing a deficiency of thirty-nine thousand three hundred and seven dollars and thirty-three cents, and not nine thousand dollars, as Jarrard had reported before absconding. Mr. Staats made a motion that the report of the expert to the Finance Committee be spread upon the minutes of the Board.

Motion adopted.

Mr. Streitwolf made a motion that 500 copies of the report be printed and circulated throughout the county.

Adopted.

Mr. Streitwolf then presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That a reward of 300 dollars is hereby offered by the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Middlesex county for the detection, arrest and conviction of Levi D. Jarrard, late Collector of Middlesex county, charged with embezzling and unlawfully retaining in his hands moneys of the said county. The said reward to be payable immediately after his trial and conviction upon the said charge.

Which was adopted.

THE CENTRAL'S LEASE.

The terms of the recently executed lease of the Central Railroad of New Jersey to the Philadelphia and Reading Company are substantially as follows: The Reading binds itself to pay quarterly, beginning September 1, 1883, sufficient rent to enable the Jersey Central to meet its interest, 6 per cent. dividends, and other fixed charges, amounting in all, to $4,405,000. The Reading must also pay rent on the Toms River and Watertown, West End, and Lehigh and Susquehanna Railroads; also $18,000 annually to maintain the organization of the Jersey Central Company, $1,000 to maintain the organization of the Ogden Mine and Dover and Rockaway Roads, and 6 per cent interest each year on $2,082,000 Jersey Central floating debt, provision being made for a reduction of the interest as fast as the debt is paid off. It is stipulated in the lease that the Jersey Central shall issue at the option of the Philadelphia and Reading, bonds or Jersey Central stock to cover the cost of any extensions, additions or improvements which the Reading Company may make for the leased road; also that the Jersey Central shall pay off, as soon as possible, the principal of the adjustment and income bonds, or agree with the holders of said obligations to reduce the interest thereon to 5 per cent. on condition that the principal shall not be paid before maturity.

The Commissioner of Railroad Taxation has filed his annual report in the office of the State Controller at Trenton. It shows an increase in the value of railroad property in this State since the last report of $3,000,000. The total value of the railroad property in the State is placed at $200,000,000. Of this amount $20,000,000 pays a municipal tax at the rate of 1 per cent. There is a tax of ½ per cent. collected on the cost of construction and equipment, the proceeds of which go into the State Treasury.

AN order from the Post Office Department dated May 31st, states that money orders may be issued on and after July 2nd, for any amount from one cent to $100 inclusive. The fees have also been changed and are as follows: Orders not exceeding $10, 8 cents, over $10 and not exceeding $15, 10 cents, over $15 and not exceeding $30, 15 cents; over $30 and not exceeding $40, 20 cents; over $40 and not exceeding $50, 25 cents; over $50 and not exceeding $60, 30 cents; over $60 and not exceeding $70, 35 cents; over $70 and not exceeding $80, 40 cents; over $80 and not exceeding $100, 45 cents. This new arrangement applies to domestic orders only.

The Trade Dollar.

Last week a war was begun on the trade dollar in the city of New York, with such earnestness that it bids fair to drive the objectionable coin out of circulation in a short time. As soon as the New York papers announced that the trade dollar was being refused by business firms in that city, and only bought up by brokers at 85 cents, tradesmen in this city also refused to receive them, unless the discount of 15 cents was allowed. There was considerable grumbling by those who were so fortunate (?) as to have these pieces, but the excitement soon died out, and in a few days more probably the trade dollar will be a scarce article. When trade dollars first came to New York from the Pacific coast their market value was about 86 87 cents. The number of trade dollars in existence is about 30,000,000.

Several of our sporting gentlemen bagged quite a number of Woodcock on the morning of the Fourth. They report the birds very scarce.

The Regular monthly meeting of Empire Engine Co. was held on Thursday evening last at the Truck house. Considerable business of importance was transacted.

The Second nine of the Westfield base ball club played the Pale Faces on the grounds of the former club, on the Fourth. The second nine were out-fielded and out-batted from the start. Score, 25 to 14 in favor of the Pale Faces.

J. Henry Manning, our ice merchant, lost one of his team of mules on the 4th. It died of meningetius which is a surprise to everybody, as mules very seldom get sick and die.

The father-in-law of the Rev. N. W. Cadwell, residing in Shippensburg, Penn., died suddenly on Saturday last. Mr. Cadwell and wife left Westfield on Sunday to attend the funeral.

Hackman Urmston has two of his horses sick with the cerebro spinal meningetis, a disease which has affected many horses around our section and of which very few have ever recovered.

The regular monthly meeting of the Bucket and Engine Co. No. 1, was held on Monday evening last at the Town Rooms. The company now numbers 73 and is still increasing in number at every meeting.

Charles H. French, agent for the Champion Mower and Reaper, has had a very successful season in the sale of the machine. It has far exceeded his expectations. He could not get the machines fast enough to fill his orders.

What has become of the organization known as the Westfield Fire Department? Have the parties who were so anxious to organize the same, given it up as a bad job? We need such an organization and it ought to be done according to law.

The New Commercial nine played the Westfield base ball club on the afternoon of the Fourth. The Westfield club had the game all their own way from the start. Only five innings were played and resulted in a score of 41 to 8 in favor of the Westfield club.

On Monday night after a meeting had been held in the Presbyterian church Lecture rooms, the lamps were left burning nearly all night with windows and doors open, which ought not to be allowed, as a sudden gust of wind might cause an explosion of the lamps and cause a serious conflagration.

Clarence Wilcox, a young son of John N. W. Wilcox, aged 14 years left home on Saturday last for parts unknown. He tried to coax a young lad, son of Mr. Curran to go with him. His father has made considerable search for him but as yet has no track of him, except he was seen walking down the railroad track below Cranford.

On Thursday, June 28th, 1883, Justice Jaques held court at the Hotel with a jury of twelve intelligent men. It was a suit for debt, between Mr. Carr of Hilton, N. J., and James Radin of Scotch Plains, demand $50. Walter L. Hetfield, Esq., of Plainfield, represented the defendant. The jury returned a verdict of seven dollars and twelve cents for plaintiff. Defendant immediately appealed the case to the higher courts. It is a case which a court and jury should never be called upon to decide. Mrs. Carr sued her nephew for services rendered in nursing her own sister during her illness last spring.

The old One Horn Cannon is gone and everybody is glad, except probably a very few boys. It has been laying in the Hotel yard entirely neglected for a year. Two of the small boys, last year, took the wheels off the carriage and stored them in the Hotel sheds, which the Plainfielders can have and welcome, if they will come for them. It was a brilliant, stragetic movement in coming after it on Monday night last with a truck load of Plainfielders. They need not have delayed until night to come for it, they might have arrived here in the day time and would have plenty of help to load it and been treated in the bargain. There was not patriotism enough in Westfield to fire the brass piece on the Fourth.

The Westfield Base Ball Association had arranged a return game with the Roselle Club to be played on the Westfield club's ground on Saturday last. Owing to the rain prevailing in New York city on that day, the captain of the Westfield Club telegraphed Roselle that the game would not be played. However the Roselle club came to Westfield at 4:30 p. m., it not having rained so as to prevent a game being played. The Westfield club got a nine together to play a practice game. They were minus their regular pitcher Major Douglas. Agustus Alpers of Westfield Association was agreed upon as umpire. The game was called at 5 p. m. and was well played by both clubs up to the beginning of the sixth inning when the Westfielders were two runs ahead. On a foul ball passing third base, which the umpire decided was a fair ball, a home-run was made by one of the Westfield club. One of the Roselle club took umbrage at the decision of the umpire and found fault in a very ungentlemanly manner and refused to play any more, and broke up the game. The umpire gave the game to the Westfield club. Score 6 to 5.

OF ANOTHER AGE.
GRADUALLY SUPPLANTED BY A BETTER ARTICLE CERTAIN OLD THINGS ARE DONE AWAY.
In the general reception room of the Western Union Telegraph building on Broadway, New York, are exhibited the coarse, crude and clumsy instruments of the infancy of the telegraph. They are only relics now. More perfect machinery has superseded them.
Years ago what is now styled the old-fashioned porous plaster did some good service. There was then nothing better of the kind. Now all that is changed. Science and study has gone deeper into the secrets of medicine and produced BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which embodies all the excellencies thus far possible in an external remedy. The old plasters were slow—the Capcine is rapid; they were uncertain—the Capcine is sure. Cheaper articles bear similar names. Be careful, therefore, that some thrifty druggist does not deceive you. In the centre of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Price 25 cents.

The street sprinkler's horses are undoubtedly afraid of fireworks. The much needed presence of the watering cart, Wednesday, was noticed on account of its absence.

It is said that the Plainfield incendiaries are "shadowed," but as the citizens show no desire to meet and offer a reward for their capture, it is reasonable to suppose that their 'shadow' will grow less.

After the usual spell of weather with which Providence favors them, and a consequent postponement, the Park ave., Baptists held a very ambitious and satisfying Lawn Party, during Thursday evening of last week.

At "The Netherwood."

The friends in this city of the Hotel Netherwood were again entertained by the proprietor, last Saturday evening, with a stereoscopic exhibition, followed by dancing, and also during the evening of July Fourth, when music was available to all who desired to enjoy an informal ball in the elegant parlors. Mr. Woodruff has certainly chosen a most generous and effective way to make his hotel an attractive place and we are glad to record that guests are daily arriving.

The Desire Shown to Catch Them.

The meeting of citizens called to confer with the Board of Commissioners of the Fire Department to consider the advisability of offering a reward for the arrest and conviction of incendiaries, was again adjourned, last Friday evening, without action and without date. A few more of our citizens will have to be burned out before the community will "enthuse" sufficiently to create a universal feeling of necessity for any action to "hunt the rascals down."

Fired by a Tramp.

The barn attached to the property known as the Smith Homestead, situate on Plainfield avenue, just outside the city limits, was entirely destroyed by fire last Friday morning early. The alarm brought both No's. 1 and 2 steamers to the spot and water was played through the hose of both, the former getting "first water" from a cistern the latter obtaining a limited supply from a small stream near by. It is supposed that the incendiary is a tramp who had been refused food by Mr. Young, the occupant of the premises the previous morning. The cattle were turned loose before the building was fired, and no live stock was consumed.

Personalia.

S. P. C. C.

A meeting of the managers and trustees of "The Plainfield Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children," incorporated under the general laws of the State of New Jersey, was held on Thursday evening, June 28, 1883, at the office of J. The following are the incorporators of the society: W. Rockhill Potts, Henry R. Opdyke, Charles Place, A. V. V. Raymond, C. Potter, Jr., Henry K. Carroll, Charles Tweedy, Isaac W. Rushmore, E. W. Smith and Jacob Kirkner.

Driven Well Royalty.

We publish elsewhere a 'Public Notice' of B. F. Green, giving what he claims are the facts regarding the legality of his driven well patents and the decision of the Courts thereon. He wishes to warn all to pay the royalty he holds is due him, and save the expense of legal suits.

Warren Mission.

Services in its enlarged and newly decorated rooms, were inaugurated by Warren Mission, on Sunday last, in a most auspicious manner. The large number assembled took an enthusiastic part in the exercises, and the successful opening gave assurance of continued interest in the work.

Robbery.

The wholesale and retail liquor store of E. P. Thorn, on Park avenue, was entered by a thief or thieves either Monday night or Tuesday morning last, and robbed of money to the amount of about $80. It is supposed access was gained to the inside of the store, through the transom over the front entrance.

Base Ball.

On Saturday last the return game between these organizations was played at the corner of Rockview and Washington avenues under the direction of Captains Miller and Moore. The mysterious movements of Captain Miller for several days had attracted attention, but the artillery he placed in the field proved that he had been working to good purposes. He was conscience stricken at the superiority of his side, and it was with the utmost difficulty that he could be persuaded to make a run. At last yielding to the entreaties of his associates and the catcher failing to catch his third strike he dashed for the third base. Those present will never forget the grace and agility displayed by him in making his memorable run, for "a thing of beauty is a joy forever." Of the other sweaters, Murray, Buckley and Hooley specially distinguished themselves. Among the Never Sweaters, Capt. Moore was the champion, but he failed to find his natural position until the last inning when he put out every striker at the second base. A little heart-burning was exhibited at such a signal defeat, but the hatchet was buried under Captain Miller's mahogany. The score was nine to thirty-four in the Sweaters favor.

Milk Without Water.

The New York Sun of Sunday last, published the following interview:

"I suppose that 240,000 quarts of milk are condensed and canned in one day at this season of the year," said the foreman of a large establishment in Westchester county when asked about the extent of the business. "The business had its origin just before the war. The army created a great demand for it, and improved methods have given it a permanent place in the family. In the early days the milk was evaporated in open pans. Then one of the most successful men in the business invented evaporation in vacum pans."

"The process is very simple. The cooled milk is brought here by the farmers in forty-quart cans. It is measured and run into open pans, where it is heated until it boils. Then it is drawn into the vacum pan. This pan is in shape like a farmer's milk can. It is about five feet in diameter. It is made of copper. A coil of steam pipe in the bottom furnishes the heat. An air pump exhausts the air inside until the pressure on the outside is about twelve pounds to the square inch. The temperature is usually kept at 140 degrees. The capacity of the pan is about 100 forty-quart cans. When the milk has been reduced to one-third or one-fourth of its original bulk it is sweetened with about a pound of sugar to a quart of milk. It is then put in the little tin cans in which you see it on the grocery shelf, and is hermetically sealed. Some of it is not sealed up but is sold in bulk on the city streets. This kind is not sweetened."

"What do dishonest condensers put in with the sugar?"

"I do not believe they adulterate. A little glucose may be used. The lumps which you find in the bottoms of your coffee cups are not adulterations. The manufacturer used stale or impure milk. Some manufacturers make two grades. They are proud of one grade. Much condensed milk is imported into this country. On the other hand, there is an immense export trade."

"Does the business pay?"

"Very fair profits are made where a man has good luck with his milk."

Driven Wells.

To The Public:—My attention has been called to articles in several papers of late relating to the late decision of Judge Shiras in the U. S. Circuit Court of Iowa, adverse to the driven well patent so calculated to mislead those interested, that I will state the facts as they exist, that all false impressions may be removed, that at present seem to pervade the community. In the cases attended to, Judge Shiras declared the patent null and void. 1st for abandonment, 2d for priority of use, 3d for want of novelty, and 4th on the reissue. All of these points had been considered and decided in favor of the patent in many test suits, and by at least ten different Judges of the U. S. Circuit Court. Among the number, Benedict, Wheeler and Blatchford of New York, Nelson of Minnesota, (who was also on the Bench with Judge Shiras, dissenting from his decision, and writing a non-concurring opinion) Dillon of Minnesota and Iowa, Gresham the present P. M. General, Shipman of Connecticut, and Nixon of New Jersey. To say that all of these eminent Judges were mistaken, after having considered and decided the above points, that they erred—is simply an insult to their intelligence and honesty. Two suits from Indiana were appealed to the United States Supreme Court at Washington, one for a driven and the other for a drilled well, and the decision of the court below confirmed and the patent sustaind on all the points considered by Judge Shiras in Iowa. Notice, you have the judgment, and decision of ten U. S. Circuit Judges, as also the confirmation of the U. S. Supreme Court vs. that of Judge Shiras, lately appointed to the place. From these facts you can judge how much importance should be attached to so unexpected and unprecedented a decision as given by Judge Shiras in Iowa. It is evident that the clamor of the people and not the law, had much to do with it. The Iowa suits were at once appealed, and as soon as reached by the Supreme Court, will be reversed. This late decision has no effect upon the patent and no efforts will be spared in the prosecution of claims for infringement. The people of New Jersey are advised—in face of the above facts—to "pay no more royalty." Judge for yourselves of the wisdom of such advice. Statements are made that the "patent is upset," etc., and nothing is farther from the truth, as any respectable lawyer will tell you and advise the infringer to pay without suit. I have thus far refrained from noticing any newspaper article vs. the Driven Well, but the articles alluded to, are so plainly designed to deceive and mislead the community, that 'tis better the facts should be known. To those interested in the state of New Jersey who have the impression that the "patent is upset," that the "driven well forces are withdrawn," I hereby call on for prompt settlement for all royalties due, as proceedings will be commenced against any one who refuses to pay.

B. F. GREEN.

Newark, June 28th, 1883.

Sunday at Netherwood.

Rev. Thomas Armitage, pastor of the Fifth avenue Baptist church of New York, will preach in the Netherwood Union Chapel next Sunday morning the 8th inst, at 11 o'clock. All are invited.

No Fires.

The Fire Department was on duty for 48 hours, from Tuesday evening, but fortunately there was no calls for its service. Early Thursday morning two false alarms were sounded, and the horses and men were given a little run by way of exercise.

Mad Dog.

A rabid dog was shot on Monday last by a son of Halsey Compton, at Evona, after the animal had bitten dogs belonging to L. M. Roesp and Jeremiah Manning. The animal was of the setter breed and belonged to a gentleman residing in New York.

Bad in Both Ways.

A game of base ball between the Crescents of this city and the Stars of Brooklyn, in which the inexcusable errors of the former were only equalled in quantity by the unfair decisions of the umpire, was played during Wednesday morning, and resulted—Stars, 16; Crescents, 9.

The Music Hall.

For the selection of Mr. E. L. Roberts as the architect of the Music Hall, as urged by us some weeks ago, the Board of Directors of the Association cannot be too "highly commended;" and, the public may rest assured that the completed building will combine both safety and beauty, at a sacrifice to neither, and that the most thorough arrangements for comfort and convenience will be provided.

One Way that the "Fourth" was Celebrated.

Wednesday afternoon and evening Wooden's Grove was again a scene of life and gayety upon the occasion of a grand picnic given under the management of the members of St. Joseph's R. C. church, North Plainfield. The music was of the very best, under the leadership of the popular Prof. Cahill, and the hundred or more dancers assembled, thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The committee that arranged the success and pleasure of the event, was Messrs. Francis Silby, Patrick Kiely, James Keegan and David Barry.

A "Cold Day" to Friese.

Mr. William Friese of North Plainfield, whose past treatment of his children has occasioned so much feeling among the sympathetic and charitable residents of Somerset county, has at last been given his deserts by the authorities of this city. Captain Chase arrested the offender for drunkenness, Saturday, and upon the "Bill" being presented before the Court, Judge Good settled it by a fine of $50 and a sentence of 30 days. While Mr. Friese "languishes," efforts will be made to place his children in some Western home where they may grow up with the country unmolested.

The Turn Verein Picnic.

In spite of some unpleasantness that was created about midnight by an outside element that was "a little under the influence," the Third Annual Picnic and Show Turning of the Plainfield Turn Verein, Thursday of last week, was as completely successful as any of past years. The Committee of Arrangements, composed of Messrs. Philip Magg, Louis D. Hagamann, Fred Becker, Conrad Scheerlein and F. Kelleher, deserve the greatest amount of credit for the enjoyableness of the affair, and the excellent music of Prof. Voss was worthy of much praise. The show-turning of the Plainfielders and their visiting friends of other cities cities, the singing of our Saengerbund and other pleasing features, were thoroughly gratifying to the hundreds who attended.

Re-Captured.

The boys of No. 2 engine company have been jubilant the past two days over an achievement performed by some of their members, which was the re-capture of the historic old "one horn" cannon from Westfield. This cannon has a history unequalled probably by any other like piece of ordnance in the State. Originally, during the war of the Revolution, this piece formed a part of a British Artillery Company, and was captured by citizens who resisted the marauding operations of the British army about Elizabethtown, Springfield and Westfield. For years past this cannon has been a "bone of contention" between the hot-headed and fiery youths of Plainfield, Westfield and Scotch Plains. Thirty years and more ago, the Plainfielders were the custodians of the relic for a long time despite efforts made by the Westfielders to recover it. It was successfully hidden from the eyes of prying Westfield scouts, by being buried on the side of the hill back of Laing's Hotel, where now stands Mrs. Austin's School House, also beneath the tan of Townsend's Tan Yard, and, one time lay immersed in the waters of Green Brook in the rear of Laing's Hotel. For years those who knew of its hiding place, dared not bring it forth to fire the customary Fourth of July salute for fear of its being re-captured by the watchful Westfielders. Finally, as vigilance relaxed, the piece was captured by them, and held for a number of years. Then Fanwood took a hand in the matter and took it from the Westfielders, then it again went back to that village, and now, after a number of years absence, it has come back to its final home, for the "2-sers" swear by the Great Horn Spoon that it shall hereafter remain in their custody. The "One Horn" derives its name from having one of its trunions knocked off, which was done years ago by Plainfield's giant athlete, Vincent Barkelew, who playfully tapped it one day with a sledge hammer. After its capture from the British the cannon was stored in a small building called the "cannon house," at Westfield, which is yet standing, and shows the draft of a cannon painted over its front door. The ammunition wagon of the piece was sold a few years since at public auction by J. M. C. Marsh. The members of No. 2 have painted the piece, mounted it on wheels and fired numerous rounds from it on the Fourth. The party who captured the cannon from Westfield last Monday night, consisted of eight persons, one of whom assisted in the same kind of an enterprise some thirty years ago. The party went to Westfield with a truck and while a portion of them visited the bar room of the Hotel to allay any suspicions, the rest were laborously struggling with the heavy piece to load it up on the truck, which was soon proceeding on its way to Plainfield with the captured prize.

Short in His Accounts.

Rumor has been rife in this city the past few days over the report that ex-Postmaster Wallace Vail's accounts to the Government had been found short and that his bondsmen had been called upon to make the deficiency good. From information gathered direct from the parties interested we learn that the situation stands as follows: Mr. Vail's bondsmen, Messrs E. R. Pope, Alfred Berry, E. P. Thorn and J. B. Coward, were notified by the Government immediately after his retirement as Postmaster, that there was a deficiency in his accounts of some $3,200, and called upon them to make it good. Mr. Vail's statement to them was that there was due him from the Government the sum of about $4,400 for clerk hire, fuel, etc., for the past four years, which he had never received. The law allows such fees, but requires that they shall be collected each year, and as such demand had not been made in accordance with the law, the Post office Department refused to allow the claim, and notified the bondsmen that they must make good the amount claimed as a deficiency, $3,200. Mr. Vail then turned over to said bondsmen his claim of $4,400 as security for the amount they were compelled to pay. Finally suit was brought by the Post office Department against the bondsmen to recover the $3,200, judgment was entered up against them, and they were compelled to pay the amount. Whether the amount claimed by Mr. Vail will ever be allowed, so that the bondsmen may be remunerated for the sum paid by them, remains to be seen.

The Affliction of Doctor Charles A. Hart.

During the past week, the news of the unfortunate illness of Dr. Charles A. Hart, and his consequent confinement in a private institution for the insane at Flushing, L. I., was learned with surprise by the community in general. The large circle of intimate friends of the patient and his family, were terribly shocked at the suddenness of the report, and saddened at its confirmation. Those who owed their life to his surgical skill, and the many whose pain had been eased and sickness cured by his judicious treatment, grieved in sympathy. But the nearly connected and those in their confidence, found in the fact the result that had been dreaded for years, and that but corroborated the verdict of the past by the most eminent specialists in such disease.

Dr. Hart came to this city in the summer of 1876, from the army of the late General Custer. He was just recovering from a dangerous illness, and only left his post because of the serious condition of his health. He had been for years and was then suffering terrible attacks of neuralgic pains in his legs, and at times was almost driven crazy. After taking up his residence here the attacks continued, and it is believed by those who watched unceasingly with him, that only their presence and the administration of anesthetics to relieve the agony suffered, hindered his taking of his own life.

His remarkable skill as a surgeon, his unceasing devotion to the comfort and cure of his patients, his true heartedness and many charms of manner and geniality of character, built up for him a large practice and drew around him hosts of friends and supporters. So universally was his wisdom and ability in his profession recognized, that upon its erection the Muhlenberg Hospital was placed in his charge, and until the late sad result he had almost sole control of its management.

So stubbornly had the nervous disorder with which he was afflicted, however, resisted all efforts to check it, the Doctor sought the advice of the great New York specialist, Dr. Seguin, and he, after a careful examination, gave the opinion that it was merely a question of time—that the inevitable result would be insanity. Upon this, Dr. H. D. Burlingham of this city, a personal friend of Dr. Seguin, wrote the latter regarding the case at the request of Dr. Hart's family, hoping there was some possibility of a misunderstanding. A reply was received, insisting upon the correctness of the diagnosis. Periods of great depression in the unfortunate man, followed by periods of great exaltation, succeeded each other for months. At one time he felt all his study, conscientious work and experience were of no avail—then again he became almost overburdened with self-appreciation of his talents and capabilities. When in such latter condition, he may have uttered many unprofessional criticisms of the work of other surgeons—blamable if he had been responsible, but entirely excusable as proven by later developments.

The progress of the disease was so rapid during the past month, that it became necessary to take steps that were irresistable. The patient was persuaded Monday of last week, to leave this city for a fishing excursion to Long Island, accompanied by his wife, but became so much worse, that he was brought to the Gilsey House, New York, Wednesday, and from there, after a consultation by Drs. Loomis, Hammond and other authorities, was removed to the Flushing asylum.

Since, he is gradually losing all remembrance of the surroundings and faces of late years, and is back amid scenes and comrades of his army days. He writes continually despatches to officers he had known, and is slowly drifting into an oblivion of mind from which his nearest relatives cannot but hope death will soon relieve him.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The premiums for the twenty-fifth annual State Fair at Waververly, which opens September 17th, amount to $15,000.

During the season ending June 10 there were caught in the Delaware river, 4,150 shad with gill nets, 13.50 with shore nets, and 520,000 herring.

Despite numerous reports to the contrary, weak fishing is not good up to the present day. Several parties from this city have been disappointed in their catches upon visiting Perth Amboy and other famous fishing grounds thus far, the fish failing to bite at the most tempting baits used. A week or so more may make the sport desired in capturing these fine members of the finny tribe.

According to the report of the Fish Warden Ore, of Camden county, as to the results of the recent shad-fishing season, the two shore nets of Gloucester City and Pavonia caught 50,000 shad, being a decrease of 16,000 from last year; and they also secured 40,000 herring. The 105 gill-nets employed obtained 49,000 shad being a decrease of 15,600 from last year. The total number of shad caught was 99,000 against 130,600 last year.

A pigeon shooting match came off at Erb's Park, Newark, N. J., July 4th, between Lebbeus Ayres and Wm. Terry against Warren Squires and Richard Elliot, all of Plainfield and vicinity, for a stake of $50 a side, at 10 birds each, 21 yards rise. The following is the score:

Ayres—0 1 1 0 1 1 0 1 1 1—7
Terry—1 0 0 1 1 1 1 1 1 1—8—15.
Elliott—1 1 0 0 0 0 0 1 1 1—5—9.

The open season for shooting woodcock in this State commenced on Monday last, and closes at the end of this month, opening again October 1st. This fine game bird was reported as plentiful on the opening day by those who sought after them, and we hear of numerous large bags being made along the Passaic river by sportsmen. The recent heavy rains had a tendency to keep the birds near their breeding grounds by making the soil in such a damp condition as to furnish them necessary food instead of their seeking more suitable grounds farther North.

Mr. Polak moved that when the Council adjourn, it be to meet in two weeks. Carried.

The rules were suspended and Mr. Ross of the License Com., reported its approval of sundry applications for pedler, truck and hack licenses. On motion granted with the exception of that of Goff Bros., which was ref'd back to Com., for futher investigation and subsequent report

Mr. J. Simpson of the Aud. Com., reported as correct the balance of the claims ref'd to it. Warrants ordered drawn.

Mr. Polak rose to remark that he hardly thought it proper that the City should pay for the special police service that is given at the request of church entertainments, etc.

A motion to such effect was offered and carried.

Help the Little Ones.

Messrs Editors:—Will you be kind enough to call the attention of the public through your paper to our society work. While so many are going to the mountains and shore for health and pleasure, many little ones are really suffering from want and sickness here at home that the Relief Association are powerless to help, for want of funds. The visitors of the Association see and know of so much which they are unable to relieve for want of means, that they feel sure many would send to the Treasurer did they know aid was so much needed, and every one would gain more benefit did they know they had done their share before leaving home, towards giving some luxury and comforts to these poor suffering ones during the heated term.

An Old-Time Letter.—Henry Brightman, of Cazenovia, Aug. 10, 1845, says: "A year ago last winter I had a cough, which steadily grew worse; so that at the end of three weeks it was exceedingly violent, and was attended with a fixed pain in the side. After five or six weeks, finding myself no better, I called on Dr. Foord for advice. He gave me a bottle of his Pectoral Syrup, and on using it my cough was immediately relieved, so that in five days I coughed very little, and in one week it was entirely cured."

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE BLIND DUELLIST.

A Major Buford was one of the champions of honor who, in the palmy days of 'the code,' enjoyed a proud eminence for his accuracy of aim, and it was his boast that on only one occasion in his popular and useful life he had failed to kill his man on the spot. On a certain day he was explaining to divers choice spirits in a hotel how it was that the one exception in his practice had occurred through a defect in a bullet when to his vast astonishment, one of the gentlemen standing within hearing suddenly advanced and slapped him in the face.

'Liar!' said the smiter, who was a gray haired man of peculiar but by no means truculent expression of countenance. 'Is the provocation sufficient, or must I repeat the blow?'

For an instant the insulted, infuriated duellist was inclined to return the seemingly inexplicable assault; but recovering self-possession quickly enough to understand that the affront was a deliberate challenge to mortal combat, he answered:

'You've done more than enough. Name your friend—I don't care what your name is—and a friend of mine shall confer with him at once.'

Such was the style in which little affairs of the kind were reduced to practical business in those honorable days. The aged face-slapper curtly introduced the gentleman beside him whom he had seen standing as the 'friend' required, and with the understanding that the 'friendly' conference should take place in an hour from thence, insulted and insulter took a temporary leave of each other. At daybreak on the following morning the inevitable 'meeting' occurred, in a retired place which had been selected for the purpose, and it was agreed by the seconds that the firing should continue until one or both the antagonists had fallen. Indignant was the flush on Major Buford's cheeks when the stranger made it a condition that both himself and his foe should be searched before fighting to make sure that neither had adopted any secret protective device; but he submitted with what grace he could summon, only muttering to his second:

'I'll kill him after this if he were my own father.'

The ground being duly measured, the men placed and the question, 'Gentlemen, are you ready?' asked and answered, the word was given—'Fire!' Noticing that his strange enemy did not seem to be even looking at him while the dread word was coming, the major had resolved to take his time about firing. His deliberation was fatal to him, for at the word the stranger's shot rang out as though it had been fired by the very utterance, and Buford, firing wildly in the air, fell writhing upon the turf.

'Lead me to him,' said the visitor to his own second, and then addressing the major's second:

'Is he dead?'

The stern answer was:

'There he lies, you can see for yourself.'

Struggling to his elbow, the wounded duellist raised himself partly from the ground and fixed a ghastly stare upon his slayer, who coolly remarked:

'I can see nothing, for I am totally blind.'

Then, while agony and astonishment kept the dying man and his second silent, the old man continued:

'You do not know me, Buford; but I have never forgotten you. My name is Morton. You persuaded my only daughter from her home, deceiving her with a sham marriage, and left her to die of a broken heart. My only remaining child, my son, you gave a meeting when he demanded it for a sister's wrongs, and killed him by your accursed skill while protecting your cowardly self with a concealed coat of mail. Their mother—my wife—was bereft of her reason by your dastardly destruction of both our children and died in a madhouse. Could I have found you then I would have given you no chance for your life; but, brave as you always pretended to be and coward as you are, you dreaded and eluded me. Yet I knew we should one day meet, and I registered a vow that when we did I would make you a sacrifice to your infernal art.

'For years I trained myself to become unerringly expert with the pistol, and my success was perfect. Then, even while I hunted for you, coward, blindness came upon me like another wrong from your hand. Instead of abandoning my purpose, I took my oath of vengeance anew, and resolved to make hearing take the place of sight. Again I was successful. I learned to take aim with the ear instead of the eye. When I heard you answer 'Ready' a moment ago, I knew as well where to point my pistol as though I could see you. Besides, I could hear you breathing. You thought to make sure of your shot by delay, and overreached yourself.'

During this curious address, which was delivered with a cool pitiless deliberation, characterized by no passion than that of contemptuous hatred, the Major's labored breathing became shorter, until, at last, he fell back and all was still.

'Dead,' whispered the avenger, as, taking his second's arm, he turned and walked leisurely off the field.

The other day a strong Butler editorial appeared in one of the many Republican weekly newspapers which Massachusetts supports. The readers of the paper were in a state of dazed wonderment until the editor aptly explained in a succeeding issue that he had been absent from town and that the devil edited the paper while he was away.

At Wilmington, Del., June 25, 1883, the steamboat Shady Side, which has been plying between there and Philadelphia, was taken by her captain and crew from her wharf before daylight and it is supposed she has gone to New York. There are claims against the vessel for several thousand dollars. She is owned by a New York company and has been running at a loss.

MILFORD, Pa., June 23.—Miss Lizzie Mott, accompanied by her younger brother, Harry, went riding in her dog cart this morning. The raising of a parasol by Miss Mott frightened the horse, which was very spirited, and it ran away. In turning a corner the wagon struck a hitching post. Miss Mott and her brother were both thrown against a building, and their skulls were fractured. Miss Mott's left arm was broken so that the bones protruded. They have been unconscious ever since the accident, and there are no hopes of their recovery. Miss Mott was one of the best-known young ladies in Milford. She was betrothed to Mr. Charles Frost, of the Boston Courier, from whom the horse and dog cart were received as a present only two weeks ago.

FOUND A WEARER.

A certain hatter in this city, says a Cincinnati paper, has for years past had hanging in his window an immense silk hat (No. 9) with a label, 'Presented to any man whose head will fit it.'

Yesterday, as Barnum's giant was taking a stroll for his health, his eyes fell upon the hat and the promise. Walking in, he inquired:

'What is the size of that hat?'

The hatter looked at the fellow's 600 pound bulk, and, as the cold sweat began to ooze out of his forehead, gasped:

'No. 9.'

'I'll take that hat,' said the giant.

It was hauled down, dusted, and given to him. He placed it on his head, a perfect fit, and walked away as proud as a lord. The huge crowd which quickly gathered to see the fun cheered lustily as he walked off with his prize.

An electric light about the size of a small bean has been constructed and used successfully in illuminating interior portions of the human body.

One letter out of every 300 sent is unclaimed in the office to which it goes. One letter in 283 sent turns up at the dead letter office. One letter out of 3,100 sent is held for postage at the office of mailing, and this amounts to nearly 300,000.

The natives of Northern India have found light woolen clothing to be far more healthy and comfortable than the cotton which has been worn from time immemorial. In consequence, the manufacture of light, cheap woolen goods has greatly increased there.

WHO OUGHT TO BE HAPPY.

This is the way in which the rejuvinated New York World, under Joe Pulitzer, talks plain English:

Everybody connected with the Star-route prosecution ought to wear the shirt of the happy man.

President Arthur ought to be happy. He has gained the credit of prosecuting rogues, has bound to his cause that meddlesome, trouble making New York politician, George Bliss, and has saved from prison a jovial companion, a good poker-player, a bon vivant, who has been his political associate for years.

George Bliss ought to be happy. He has already received from the Government in cash, for his services in the prosecution, $46,000, and expects to get probably as much more. Many a better lawyer labors at his profession in this city for ten years for less money.

Lawyer Ker ought to be happy. He has put into his astonished pockets in fourteen months for his services, $28,000. And he expects more.

Mr. Merrick ought to be happy. He has been paid for ten months' legal services up to April last $32,000. His full claim will largely swell this sum.

Dorsey ought to be supremely happy. He keeps his freedom and has his proofs of Garfield's perfidy in reserve.

Brady and his associates ought to be happy. They go clear with their plunder and can readily make up the amount of their legal disbursements.

Miner has good cause to rejoice. He keeps out of jail after one conviction and holds a new contract through which he may plunder the Government anew.

Berdell ought to be jubilant. After confessing himself a thief, he discovers by the jury's verdict that he is an honest man!

The people alone have reason to feel dissatisfaction. They have been robbed of over $2,000,000; they have already paid $120,000 to prosecuting lawyers; they will be called upon to pay at least as much more, and the thieves, big and little, go scot-free!

Which we Cordially Endorse.

An exchange says: "We want people to borrow our paper, and we hope no one will stop reading it because they can't afford to own a copy, so long as they can beg, steal, or borrow one, or the use of it. A paper that is borrowed is much like a good wheelbarrow, or a stump-puller—it must have some merit or it would not be wanted." And then it boastfully adds: "We know of one woman who borrowed the reading of this paper for three years and a half and then became converted and joined the church. On another man it had nearly the opposite effect; he has borrowed it so long that he would not rent a house in the neighborhood where that paper was not taken."

A Musician's Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mollenhauer celebrated their silver wedding last evening at their residence, No. 73 Livingston-st., Brooklyn, with a reception and musicale. Mr. Mollenhauer has been for many years well known as a musical director, and a large number of his friends assembled last evening to offer their congratulations. The Brooklyn Saengerbund sang several songs in front of the house, after which they were invited in, and sang in the garden, which was attractively decorated with flags and Chinese lanterns. The musical part of the entertainment was furnished chiefly by the Mollenhauer family, the younger members of which apparently inherit their father's musical aptitude. A serenade on the organ, piano, violin, and 'cello performed by Messrs. Louis and Henry and the Misses Ida and Johanna Mollenhauer. A quartet—piano, violin, alto and 'cello—was next rendered by Messrs. Henry, Louis and Adolph Mollenhauer and Miss Ida Mollenhauer. Mr. Frederick Steins sang, Mr. Louis Mollenhauer performed upon the violin, and Miss Ida Mollenhauer played a piano solo. Dancing followed. Among those present were Mr. Richard Mollenhauer, Mr. Edward M. Mollenhauer, Mr. Bernhard Mollenhauer, Mrs. Rens, Mr. and Mrs. Van Cleef, Mr. Frank Van Cleef, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Semler, Mr. and Mrs. Koch, Mr. and Mrs. Gross, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. Ritter, Mr. and Mrs. Daghose, Mrs. Hodges and Mrs. Hotchkiss.—N. Y. Times, June 24th.

Mr. and Mrs. Mollenhauer are well-known to the music loving people of this city. They formerly resided at Scotch Plains, occupying a handsome residence there.

Common Sense Out West.

The Methodist ministers of Chicago, at their meeting Monday expressed themselves against cure of disease by prayer. Dr. Adam Miller, in a paper on the subject, said that the bullet hole in the body of President Garfield was a gold mine to the physicians, and that all the prayers of the universe failed to cure him.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

The bass bite poorly, though there seems to be plenty of them in the streams.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. Henry Andrus of this city had the good luck to capture the largest brook trout ever taken from a stream in Connecticut. It weighed 4 pounds and 8 ounces (4½ pounds) when caught. Mr. Andrus had seen this trout, for a long time, in a certain stream toward the north part of the State, but though he has thrown out the most tempting flies and bait, he had never till now been able to capture it. Two weeks ago the fish bit at his line, but got away with the hook. When caught on Saturday a hook was firmly fastened into the upper jaw of the fish. Mr. Andrus saw the fish jump out of the water and threw in a grasshopper, at which the fish at once bit. At first it ran out one hundred feet of line, then doubled and came back. After twenty minutes struggle the big trout was landed.—Hartford Conn. Times.

"I have been married for several weeks and my husband and I cannot decide whether we should retain our old love-letters or burn them. What would you advise? Mrs. C." "Put them in a pasteboard box in the servant girl's room. A supply of old love-letters has been known to keep a girl contented in one place for three months at a time.

POETRY.

THE FALCON AND THE LILLY.

My darling rides across the sand:
The wind is warm the wind is bland;
It lifts the pony's glossy mane,
So light and proud she holds his rein:
As gayly as a leaf the dew
She wears her scarf and kirtle blue,
And on her wrist, in bells and jess,
The falcon perched for idleness.
That merry bird, oh would I were
In joy with her, in joy with her!

My darling comes not from her bower,
The lowered pennons sweep the tower;
The larches droop their tassels low
The bells are marshalled to and fro;
My heart, my heart beholds her now,
The pallid hands, the saintly brow,
The lily with chill death oppressed,
Against the summer of her breast,
The lily pale, oh would I were
In peace with her, in peace with her.

A MINING STORY.

'Eureka gold mining company.' Don't it look important on paper? I tell you boys, we've got a good thing, but we must work!' said Tim Flynn, glancing at the piece of paper in his hand.

'Yes,' replied Joe Bagly with a sleepy yawn, 'but let's go to roost now. We can't do anything more to-night.'

The men, eight in number, had been sitting around a camp fire discussing their prospects. The Eureka mine originally belonged to a party of Eastern capitalists, who, having worked it for a short time and finding it did not 'pan out' according to expectations, sold their interest to the men who had just taken possession of the property, which they firmly believed would prove an El Dorado. They were poor in purse, for they had invested their all in the new venture, but were rich in hope and courage.

'It is a well-known fact', Flynn would assert twenty times a day, 'that the Eureka is on a range with the famous Empire, which yields as high as thirty thousand per ton, and we are sure to strike the same vein. Some day we will wake up and find ourselves millionaires. It is only a question of time.'

The next morning seven of the men, who were the actual owners, began work, leaving Si Reed, whom they termed silent partner, to do the chores about the camp. Reed was pale and thin and had an anxious, expectant look upon his face. He seldom spoke to anyone, which fact had gained him the soubriquet of Silent or Si Reed. He was devotedly attached to Flynn, who had befriended him while in Sacramento, and exhibited such sincere grief when he heard of his intended departure for the mine, that Flynn invited him to join the party.

The miners worked like beavers, delving down into the earth that each felt certain held in her virgin bosom the gold which would enrich them.

They began their labors at the first streak of dawn, toiling unceasingly through the entire day, each dreaming his own dream of future greatness. Weeks sped by; pan after pan was washed the contents examined and then thrown aside.

But they were not disheartened. The gold was there. The next blow of the pick might reveal it.

One evening after supper, Joe Bagly said:

'How's the fodder, Si? Last another week, eh?'

'No, hardly enough for another week.'

'You must put us on low rations then. What d'ye say, boys?'

'Agreed,' they answered in a chorus.

The next day, when Si gave each man his portion, they laughingly declared that Flynn had received the lion's share—which was true; for Reed had robbed himself in order that his friend should have his usual supply, albeit no one suspected the bit of self sacrifice.

The week was stealing away and they had not 'struck it.' The hearts of the miners were growing heavy with dread. Yet they dared not give vent to their fears. Each felt that success depended upon his individual courage, and no one was willing to dampen the ardor of the others by expressing doubts of their ultimate triumph.

One day, while seated on the ground eating their midday meal, a little girl appeared before them.

'Hello!' cried Flynn, springing to his feet, 'where did you come from?'

'Please, sir, I've bin walking ever so far. Ma saw yer camp-fire last night, and told me how to get here. She could not come herself, 'cause Freddie's sick. May I sit down? I'm awful tired.'

She glanced timidly at the men, then at the empty pot in which the dinner of beans and bacon had been cooked.

'Where does your ma live?' Inquired Bagly.

'She doesn't live nowhere. We're a hunting for pa.'

'Did you expect to find 'im here?'

'No, sir; but we're hungry, and ma thought you'd give us something to eat.'

The men roared with laughter. Something to eat, when they had just devoured their last cut of bacon.

'Not another mouthful, boys. We must give the chick what's left,' said Bagly, scraping the remains of each dinner into his own plate. 'Here, little 'un eat this, and when you've satisfied the cravin's, you can tell us where ye come from.'

'Please, I'd rather take it to Freddie,' pleaded the child, 'cause he's little and sick.'

'Ye ain't bigger'n a pint of cider yerself,' laughed Bagly. 'Eat it, and we'll give you some for the others.'

The promise satisfied the child, who quickly devoured the contents of the dish.

'Been on low rations, too, I reckon,' chuckled one of the men.

'Now tell us about your mother. Where is she, and whose trail is she on?' said Flynn.

'She's way down there, in an old log-house where nobody lives. We was going to Kiwanna camp, 'cause we heard pa was there, but Freddie took sick, and ma's afraid he'll die; so if ye'll please give me some vittles I'll go back, 'cause she's alone.'

'What'll we do, boys?' asked Bagly. 'We can't leave the critters there; some of us must go with the chick and bring them here.'

'Reed can be spared,' suggested one of the men.

'Bah!, interrupted Ben Skinner, a surly, ill-natured fellow—'Reed, with his white face, that grows whiter every day! If the woman saw him she'd think death had come for the youngster, sure.'

The men glanced toward Si, who was leaning against a tree, apparently oblivious of what was going on around him, and evidently did not hear the unfeeling remark.

'Look aere, boys,' remarked Flynn, gravely, 'our larder is about empty, and we must replenish it. Let's draw lots to decide who will ride into town for provender. We are out of funds, but this,' taking a valuable watch from his pocket, 'can be left as security.'

'And this can keep it company,' said Bagly, producing a handsome pistol.

Skinner drew the slip of paper upon which the word 'go' was written.

'The little gal can sit before ye, and ye can stop at the cabin and give this, the last of our hard tack, to the woman,' said Bagly.

Fleetwood, their only horse, was quickly saddled, and Skinner started on his errand.

'Tell your ma to fight her luck a few hours longer, and when supplies come we'll give you a rousing supper,' shouted Bagly, as they rode away.

When some distance from the hut Skinner put the girl down; gave her the biscuit and resumed his journey.

In the evening Flynn and Bagly went over to the hut, intending to bring the woman and her children up to camp.

'Skinner will get back about eight o'clock. I guess the sick boy only wants a little feeding up to make him all right,' remarked Flynn as they approached the hut.

They found the woman seated on the rough floor with the boy on her lap, and Maggie, their late visitor, at her side sound asleep. With tearless sobs she related her sad story. About five years before, or when Freddie was only a few weeks old, her husband left her to join a party of prospectors who were going to the Sierra Nevada region, and she had never heard from or seen him since. She waited until her funds were nearly exhausted; then made her way to Sacramento. While supporting her children as best she could, she learned that the party had broken camp; her husband had been brought to Sacramento and placed in a hospital, where he remained a long time seriously ill with brain fever. She traced him to the hospital, only to find that he had gone away again; no one could tell whither. Recently she learned that a man answering his description, and bearing the same name, was working in the Kiwanna mines, and she was on her way there. He had always been a fond husband and father, and she believe he had searched for her also, but they had missed each other.

The two men were deeply moved as they listened to the story of her sufferings, and, after much persuasion, induced her to return to camp with them; promising that one of the miners would go the following day to Kiwanna, about ten miles distant, and make inquiries concerning the person she supposed was her husband. Without further ceremony Flynn wrapped the boy in the blanket he had brought for the purpose, and Bagly trudged along with Maggie in his arms.

When the party reached camp it was past the time set for Skinner's return, but he had not arrived. A bed of brushwood covered with a blanket was arranged for the guests, and after they had laid down the men lighted their pipes and gathered around the fire, conversing in low whispers and listening eagerly for the sound of the horse's footsteps.

'He oughter bin here long afore this,' said Bagly, rousing himself from a brown study. 'Boys, he's scooted.'

The suggestion fell like a bombshell; no one spoke for a moment, then Bagly resumed:

'He's got your watch, Flynn—my pistol and Fleetfoot. He's gone sure as shootin'. I saw the cussedness a shinin' in his eyes when he drew the slip.'

The others were loth to accept their comrade's suggestion, but all crept to their resting-places with heavy hearts.

'We kin live on beans,' muttered Bagly, 'but what will become of the woman an' her kids?'

In the morning there was considerable excitement in Eureka camp. Two of the men, Bagly and Reed, were missing. After a protracted search the latter was found near a clump of bushes some distance away in an unconscious state, having apparently fallen in a fit. They carried him back to camp, laid the limp form on a bramble bed and gazed at each other in blank dismay.

'Call the woman; p'raps she'll know what to do,' advised Tom Knowles.

The woman did not wait to be called. Seeing that something was amiss she approached the group. The next moment a heartrending cry burst from her lips. Falling upon her knees she threw her arms around the sick man and kissed his still, white face in a wild, distracted way. A slight tremor passed over Reed's frame. He opened his eyes, looked wistfully at the woman bending over him. Then a gleam of intelligence illuminated his countenance; he recognized the faithful wife from whom he had been so long seperated by a singular freak of fate. For one brief moment soul met soul. He raised his hand heavenward, murmured faintly, 'Up there, Maggie,' then earned his soubriquet of Silent Reed.

A solemn stillness prevailed around Eureka camp when Flynn and his comrades returned from their unsuccessful search for Bagly. The remainder of the party were sitting around in despondent attitudes, while Mrs. Reed, with the sick child on her knees and one hand fondly resting on the dead man's face, looked the very embodiment of inconsolable grief. Flynn—tender-hearted Tom Flynn—how his burly frame shook with sobs as the touching death-scene was described to him.

'Boys,' he said huskily, 'we must face our hard luck like heroes. I have insisted all along that the Eureka held a fortune for each of us, because I believe it. But—' it cost him a struggle to utter the next words, which were the extinguishment of the hope that had enabled them to endure privation and hunger without a murmur. 'But,' he went on, 'I was mistaken. After the poor creature has grown accustomed to her sorrow we will bury poor Si and pull up stakes. We won't abandon them, boys. For his sake we must protect those he loved.'

The others heartily agreed to the last clause. While arranging their plans for the future, little Maggie bounded down the hillside, singing blithely, unconscious of the bereavement that had befallen her.

'Look! she shouted gleefully, 'what nice stones I have found. Full of bright specks jes like eyes.'

Flynn took the stone she held toward him. His face, rough and weather-beaten, grew pallid with sudden joy.

'Boys,' he whispered, in a tone of suppressed excitement, 'she has 'struck it.' Where did you find this, Maggie?'

'Way up there, past the big hole,' she replied, vaguely wondering at his white face.

In a moment the men fell into line, Maggie leading the way to the spot where she found the precious stone. As they passed the mouth of the pit, the scene of their fruitless labors, Flynn stopped to get a shovel. The others followed his example, carrying with them the implements they had cast down in a hopeless way the night previous. They set to work silently, being too much excited to speak. If disappointment awaited them now! No, two or three blows, such as had never been dealt before, told them that they had 'struck it' at last. They paused, looked for a moment, then the hills echoed and re-echoed with the shout of triumph that burst simultaneously from their lips.

They returned to camp, Flynn carrying Maggie on his shoulder, just as Bagly appeared in sight with a bag of provisions on his back. In a few words he explained how, before daylight, he had started for Kiwanna to beg food for the woman and her children. After a hasty dinner some of the men went to select a spot in which to lay the remains of their comrade, and Flynn set out for town to make arrangements about having the camp supplied with provisions.

Several hours later he returned in high spirits and related how he had encountered Skinner in a tavern, and demanded the return of the horse, watch and pistol that had been entrusted to him. He blustered and swore for a while, and finally agreed to sell his claim for the articles he had already appropriated to his own use. Flynn did not apprise him of the lucky turn of Fortune's wheel, but took precautions to have the exchange legally drawn up and signed.

'He played as a mean trick,' concluded Flynn, 'but I got the best of him, and now I propose to transfer his share to the orphans and widow of our old friend.'

No dissenting voice was raised against the proposition; furthermore, they all declared that Maggie should henceforth be called the Ward of the Eureka Mining Company.

The next day Si was buried, and a week later, when the success of the mine had become an established fact, Mrs. Reed and her children were taken back to Sacramento. The sudden change of fortune, coupled with the death of her husband, proved too much for the poor woman, and two orphans became the actual wards of Eureka Mining Company.

A SINFUL POSTURE.

The following law and law cases were taken from the New Haven colony in 1669. The statute says: "Whoever shall invigle or draw the affections of any maide or maide-servant, either to himself or others, without gaining the consent of her parents, shall pay to the plantation for the first offense, 40s.; the second, £4; for the third shall be imprisoned or corporeously punished." Under this law at a court held in May, 1660, Jacobeth Murtine and Sarah Tuttle were prosecuted "for setting down on a chestle together, his arme around her waiste, and her arme upon his shoulder or about his neck and continuing in that sinful posture about half an hour, in which time he kyssed her, and she kyssed him, or they kyssed one another, as ye witnesses testified."

A DENTIST'S QUEER STORY.

"Why," said a prominent dentist to a reporter, "a beautiful young lady came to me and insisted on having her really fine teeth pulled out and false ones put in their place. I protested that it would be foolish, silly, senseless, but she said no, she would have them out, and if I would not do it some other dentist would. "My teeth are not fashionable," said she, "they are too long, and short little broad teeth like corn kernels, are all the fashion now, and no one admires my mouth and I will have them." So I made her the teeth, and they cost her just $300. She couldn't see any one for two weeks after I pulled out her own. They were the upper ones only, and I made them up with gold plates for a handsome young fellow who had his own teeth knocked out in a ball game. The worst of it is that he is in love with this very girl whose teeth he wears, and she knows they are hers. Just ponder on that."

FUN WITH SHARKS.

They have a great deal of fun on the coast of Florida with sharks. A shark will swallow anything that is thrown to him, like a politician. People go out on excursions, armed with small alarm clocks, about as big as a baseball, and throw them to the sharks which sport about the boat, looking for something to eat. The shark swallows the alarm clock, which is set to go off a few minutes later. Pretty soon the alarm strikes, and as it gets in its work, the shark begins to flounder around, looking scared, trying to throw up the clock, and as he turns pale and says his "Now I-lay me," all the time jumping out of the water and begging to be forgiven, the people on boat laugh until their sides ache. It is rough on the shark, at first, but we understand some of the sharks get to like it, and many have been known to flop out on the shore and go to a jewelry store and ask for a key to wind up the clock that is in them. This last may seem like a fish story but we got it from a witness in the star route trial, and it seems as though it ought to be true.

We never saw their wings, but we know that whenever a young man becomes perfectly convinced that he has met an angel he spends all his spare time holding her tight with both arms, as though he feared she would fly away the minute he let go of her. And if they had no wings there would be no cause for this widespread, almost universal fear.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

VOTE THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

To say that there exists bitter animosity between factions of the Republican party is simply uttering a manifest fact.

Stalwart and Half Breed yearn for each other's political blood, and amid their warring words, now and then comes forth a public admission, which both at one time declared, for partisan effect, to be Democratic falsehood.

A year or so ago, a prominent Republican journal in the City of New York, belonging to the Stalwart school, openly acknowledged that the placing of Hayes in the Presidential chair was a concocted partisan cheat, the honest result of the election of 1876 being unquestionably in favor of Tilden.

That is a truth Democrats then asserted and continue to assert, a truth impartial history will enforce by writing against the usurpation of Hayes in glaring capitals the term FRAUD.

Grant, both as Commander and President, was the idol of political Republicanism, which strove to hide his personal imperfections under the assumed claim of services and abilities preeminently grand and perfect.

Democrats respected General Grant as the legally chosen President, and freely accorded him all the military honor he justly deserved, but never could see in him cause for the fulsome adulation his political followers exhibited.

Read the following recent editorial of the New York Tribune, that valiant Republican oracle:

"In the tenacity with which Grant followed out a determination once fixed in his mind, perhaps no man has ever surpassed him, but it was an expensive virtue for his soldiers, as the hundred thousand men he lost in Virginia are a witness. Whether he should have been removed after Cold Harbor, a disastrous blunder only equaled by Burnside at Fredericksburg, is a difficult matter to determine. If he had been, the final result would not have differed much in all probability.

Yet this man, who happened to receive the surrendered sword of Lee, became on that account the supposed hero of the war; received the credit of having suppressed the Confederacy; without education for or experience in civil affairs was made President for eight years, and finally was carried around the earth and exhibited to the nations as the greatest prodigy of the age. The people in their exuberant joy at the return of peace wished for a hero to whom they could pay homage, and, Lincoln being dead, seized upon Grant as the nearest object. Happier for him and for them had he been allowed to continue, like Sherman and Sheridan, quietly at his post of duty! America does not require celebrities of a false lustre to satisfy her pride. 'There are others who are deserving,' as Mr. Emerson said."

Grant, once extolled by Republican authority as the greatest General that ever drew a sword, now denounced from the same source as a blunderer worthy of disgrace and a conqueror only by accident.

Grant, once declared by like authority the most illustrious Chief Magistrate our country ever possessed, now posted by kindred pen as a man devoid of common ability.

Grant, once carried around the earth, at Republican expense, as the prodigy of the age, now charged with wearing the infamy of false lustre.

We quote from a leading organ of the Republican party.

Remember that, Republican friends! 'Tis enough.

If you value truth, justice and honor aright, virtue above intrigue, and principles superior to any man or set of men, discharge duty by henceforth voting with the party of Jeffersonian Democracy.

Its chart the Constitution.

Recently, by order of the President, there was a consolidation of the Internal Revenue Districts of this State, and "Cul" Barkalow, who has long held the position of Collector in the Third District, was designated as Collector over the consolidated Third and Fifth Districts, which displaced Robt. B. Hathorn, Collector of the Fifth. This raised a fearful yell in the Republican camp, because the "moral" element of the party did not want the appointment of such a man of "Cul's" calibre, he being a shrewd and successful political wire puller, therefore the President has directed the suspension of so much of the executive order reorganizing the Internal Districts as changed the existing system in New Jersey. The present action allows the State three districts and continues Robert B. Hathorn as Collector of the Fifth District.

THE LEASE RATIFIED.

The stockholders of the Central Railroad of New Jersey met at the company's office in Jersey City last Friday, and ratified the lease of the road to the Philadelphia and Reading Co. Nearly 155,000 of the 185,000 shares were voted, of which 150,828 shares were in favor of the ratification, and 4,124 against. There were a large number of proxies. The Reading people voted about 30,000 shares; Mr. Garrett, of the Baltimore and Ohio, voted 4,000 shares; Sidney Sheppard, of Buffalo, one of the Directors of the Jersey Central, voted 7,000 shares; E. C. Knight, 7,500 shares; D. P. Morgan, 5,000 shares; Vice President John Kean, 2,359 shares; L. H. Taylor & Co., 3,765 shares; President Little, 325 shares, and Spencer, Trask & Co., 3,020 shares. Of the opposition vote 2,000 shares were held by Mr. Dinsmore, of the Adams Express Company, and 2,000 shares by the Stephen Wall estate. Mr. F. A. Comley, President of the North Pennsylvania Railroad, presided over the meeting, and the judges of the election were Wm. H. Tillinghast, Vice President of Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Railroad; the Hon. John Kean, Jr., and Mr. John Knox, Secretary of the Jersey Central. The counsel for the opponents of the lease entered a protest against the reception of the proxies on the ground that they did not state the purpose for which they were granted. The judges overruled the protest. Mr. Gowen was present at the meeting and seemed greatly pleased at the result. The claims of the Jersey Central income bondholders have not been settled as yet, but an amicable adjustment is expected within a few days. Mr. Gowen appointed a meeting with Mr. William Alexander Smith and Mr. E. R. Bacon, representing the American and English bondholders, for last Thursday, but owing to the absence from the city of Mr. Smith, the meeting was indefinitely postponed.

The same authority states that more than 100,000 of the negroes of the United States are Catholics.

The new law relating to the employment of children went into effect July 1. It provided that no boy under 12 and no girl under 14 shall be employed in any manufactory or mine, and that no child under 14 shall be employed more than ten hours a day. Any employer who violates the law will make himself liable to a fine of from $50 to $100, and a parent or guardian who shall permit the employment of a child under the required age may be fined from $10 to $25. Children employed in preserving perishable fruit in fruit canning establishments are exempted from that provision of the act which limits the hours of labor. Lawrence Fell, of Orange, has been appointed State Inspector, with power to visit factories and to prosecute violators of the law.

The Postmaster-General advises the public that in sending newspapers, books, pamphlets, and other articles by mail to foreign countries or to points within the United States, the address should always be placed on the articles enclosed, as well as on their wrappers, so that should the wrappers become detached, through friction and movement incident to mail transportation, it will be still possible to deliver the articles without the wrappers.

Garret A. Hopper, a leading Democratic politician of Passaic county, lived on a farm which Frederick A. Sickles owned, a little distance north of Paterson. Mr. Sickles did not want Mr. Hopper for a tenant after May 1, and he notified him not to sow any crops on the farm which could not be reaped before that time. Mr. Hopper, however, sowed a crop of rye, and insisted that it belonged to him, although it did not ripen until a few days ago. Mr. Sickles set a man to work and had the rye cut for his own use. Mr. Hopper quietly waited until the rye was cut, and then drove into the field and carted it away. The farm lies partly in Passaic county and partly in Bergen, and Mr. Sickles has instituted a suit against Mr. Hopper for trespass in the courts of each county.

Check Stamps.

It is not necessary hereafter to place a two-cent stamp on bank checks, drafts, orders and vouchers. The repeal of that tax, as well as the tax on matches, perfumery and medicines, went into operation July 1st, with the new tariff law.

Jersey Central Lease.

Judge Nixon, in the U. S. Circuit, on Saturday June 30, granted an order that the New Jersey Central Railroad Company and the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company show cause in court on July 9, next, why an injunction should not issue making void the recent lease by which the Reading now operates the Central Road. The order was granted in pursuance of a bill filed by Wm. B. Dinsmore, of New York City, a stockholder of the Central Railroad, to the extent of 1,000 shares who is opposed to the lease on the ground that it fails to provide compensation for dissenting stockholders as it is said to be required under the laws of this State.

Edward T. Green, counsel of the Pennsylvania Railroad in the other cases now pending, represents Mr. Dinsmore. The Court further orders that until the hearing and determination of the rule above granted the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, its officers, agents, &c., shall desist and refrain from collecting or receiving any money, earnings or tolls that are payable or may become due for the transportation of freight or passengers on any of the roads leased or operated by the New Jersey Central Road at or before the execution of an alleged lease by said last mentioned Company to the Philadelphia and Reading, or from in any way intermeddling with such moneys, tolls, &c., except to transmit the same to the Treasurer of the Central Road, and that the Central Road do desist and refrain from permitting any such tolls, &c., to be collected by the Philadelphia & Reading or any of its agents.

On Wednesday, July 11th, leave was granted to Edward T. Green, of counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, to file a stipulation in the United States Circuit Court, providing that William B. Dinsmore's motion for a preliminary injunction to annul the lease of the New Jersey Central to the Philadelphia and Reading Company should go over without detriment to either party in the suit to the fourth Tuesday of next September. The stipulation was signed by Clarence Seward for the Pennsylvania and by ex-Chancellor Williamson for the Philadelphia and Reading. The matter of the New York and Long Branch Railroad Superintendency goes over to the same time.

Excitement at Lambertville.

We learn that there is no little excitement at present prevailing in Lambertville over what is there said to be the "queer doings" by the Board of School Trustees of that city in removing three of their oldest teachers. As you pass along the street, or enter the several stores, you will soon learn the sole topic of conversation to be upon the action of said Board at their meeting held on Thursday week, the principal business of which meeting was the employment of teachers. The Trenton Times of Tuesday says:

There is excitement in Lambertville over the action of the Board of School Trustees of the public schools in removing three of the oldest teachers in the town. The teachers in question are Miss Hannah Butterfoss, Miss Lizzie Pierson and Miss Smith. The removals occurred at a meeting of the Board on last Thursday night, and are said to have been made without any cause. In the place of the old teachers the Trustees elected Miss Purcell, of Flemington, Miss Herr, of White House, and Miss Ida Stout, of Titusville. Five of the Trustees out of nine voted for the change. The old teachers are said to have had no warning whatever of the intention of the Trustees to displace them. Miss Pierson has been teaching in the school for eleven years, Miss Butterfoss for eight or ten years, and Miss Smith for one year. The Trustees say they are getting better teachers by the change. The feeling among the people is so strong that the Rev. Mr. Mick, of the Baptist church there, preached a sermon on the affair last Sunday, strongly taking sides with the displaced teachers. Of the five Trustees who voted for the change four are Democrats and one is a Republican. Miss Pierson was the only support of a widowed mother. An indignation meeting is talked about.

The Law In Regard to Dogs.

Judge Hopper, of Paterson, in a charge to a jury, last week, laid down the law as to dogs with considerable explicitness. He said the public streets are not places where dogs are allowed to roam about and bite people, and that owners are responsible for the behavior of their dogs, no matter whether they know them to be vicious or not. If a man owns a dog and keeps the animal on his own premises he is not responsible for any damages done by the dog unless he knows that the dog is vicious, in which case he is responsible if the dog bites any person who comes on the premises with peaceable intentions. If a child or grown person teases a dog and this is shown in evidence, then the owner of the dog is not responsible if the dog bites the child or grown person, no matter whether this is done on the street or on the owner's premises.

Interest to Jan. 1, '83, at 3 per cent,	626,000 00

Debt to be adjusted at following rates of interest, viz.:

1 per cent. for 2 years.
1½ per cent. for 2 years.
2 per cent. for 2 years.
2½ per cent. for 2 years.
3 per cent. for 2 years.
3½ per cent. for 30 years.

making an average rate of 3 per cent. for 40 years.

The assets of the city are as follows:

Assessments, and an average accrued interest at 7 per cent. for 10 years,	$1,579,000 00
Unpaid taxes, and an average accrued interest at 7 per cent. for 5 years,	543,000 00
	$2,122,000 00

The estimated collection of taxes and assessments for 10 years is $100,000 each year, leaving the debt at expiration of said 10 years, $4,000,000.

This statement is made as if none of the debt had been refunded, whereas $500,000 of 4 per cent bonds have been issued, representing $27,000 of the principal of the old debt and about $213,000 of accrued interest, at [illegible] to July 1, 1882.—Elizabeth Herald.

The Child Labor Law in New Jersey.

State Labor Inspector Fell, of New Jersey, visited Paterson on Monday last to hear complaints of violations of the new child labor law. None were made but many applications were made to him for leave for children under 12 years to work in the mills. A whole family of small children applied personally for leave to work, stating that they had been compelled for some time to support themselves, as their parents were both too intemperate to be of any help to them. The Inspector could not give them a permit, and they will have to go to the poor-house. A big, able-bodied man wanted permission to send his little children to work on the ground that it was necessary for him to stay at home and care of an infant and do the house-work. Mr. Fell estimates that about 3,000 children will be thrown out of work by the new law, and as there is no effective compulsory education law he thinks half of these children will be thrown on the streets, instead of being sent to school. As business has been dull for several months in the silk mills the employers have been laying off those who would come under the operation of the law, so that its full effect is not at once apparent. When business becomes brisk and there is an increased demand for the labor of those between 10 and 12 years, there will be it is expected, many violations or evasions of the law, if it really applies to silk mills, which many doubt.

The game of base ball last Saturday between the Westfield club and the Orange club was discontinued after the fourth inning, owing to the severe rain. The Westfield club had the best of the game as far as it had progressed.

On last Tuesday morning an accident occurred to an oil train going west. The trucks of one of the oil cars jumped the track at the Central avenue crossing. The cars was dragged along the track nearly to Broad street crossing before stopping. The ties and track were damaged slightly. It delayed the up trains for a short time.

The return game between the Crescents of Plainfield and the Westfield club, will be played on Saturday next, on the grounds of the Westfield club. The Crescents won the game at Plainfield on Decoration Day with a large score. The Westfield club hope to keep the score very close, if they do not succeed in beating the Plainfielders.

The Westfield M. E. Sabbath school's annual excursion occurs on Wednesday, July 18th, to Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. They have issued a neat circular, descriptive of the Park and the Zoological Garden, which is about 10 minutes walk from the excursion grounds. This will probably be the only chance this season to visit Fairmont Park at excursion rates, which are so very low.

And any and every person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall on conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding ten dollars or by imprisonment not exceeding ten days or both in the discretion of the court. THE bottom of every well and cistern should be examined at least twice a year, especially if not closely covered. Sticks, filth, worms, toads, etc., often fall in and injure the water. An Enemy to the Potatoe Bug.

It is encouraging to read that the potatoe bug has found an enemy which will drive him to other grounds or kill him on sight. An exchange says that the army with vermillion colors is being driven towards the northeast before the advance guard of tiger beetles, a band of lively warriors resembling the old-fashioned pumpkin bug. The beetle is spotted like a tiger, and is as voracious, according to its capacity, as a tiger. But it does not destroy vegetation. Its prey is bug and all insect life.

Struck by Lightning.

During the prevalence of a thunder shower Thursday evening of last week, lightning struck the residence of Mr. Isaac W. Laing, just beyond the Fair grounds, beyond the city limits. The electric bolt first struck the top of a pine tree standing in front of the house, following the trunk downward until even with the eaves of the building, when it jumped thence and entered the room below, disappearing out of a window to the ground beneath. The ceiling of the room was considerably shattered, a looking-glass and clock demolished and other articles buried about the room. Fortunately there was no person in that part of the building, although Mrs. Laing had left the room a few minutes previous after closing a window.

The Popular Daily Excursion.

The almost hourly trips of the Starin excursion boats from New York to Glen Island, are undoubtedly the most pleasing and interesting sails; and the many attractions offered at the Islands far surpass in enjoyable features anything within reach of excursionists.

Kicked by a Horse.

Mr. John Thomas, formerly of this city and a clerk in Suydam Bros'. grocery store, New Brunswick, was out with the wagon one morning last week, and noticing something the matter with one of the horse's feet, got down to see what the trouble was. While thus engaged the horse kicked him on the forehead, inflicting an ugly wound.

"Be Sure You're Right, Then Go Ahead."

The ministers of this city and elsewhere who speak so strongly against the running of Sunday trains that interfere with the "day of rest and worship" of those employed, seem to be unaware of the worthlessness of such argument. The trip each employee takes on Sunday occupies but a few hours at the most, and that only once in every five Sundays.

Prospect Avenue Bridge.

At a meeting of the Board of Freeholders of Somerset county, held last Tuesday, Mr. Schenck stated that the arch bridge at the foot of the mountain, in North Plainfield, now undergoing repairs, was found to be unfit for use, and moved that work be suspended thereon and an iron stringer truss bridge, 22 feet roadway and of sufficient length to span the stream, be built there. Which was carried.

A New Industry.

The new brick manufacturing works of Isaac Melbourn, on Somerset st., North Plainfield, is now in active operation, turning out large quantities of brick of superior quality daily. To do this machinery of the latest device for manufacturing brick have been secured and put in operation. The material is obtained on the grounds in large quantities and is of a superior grade. Mr. Melbourn has constantly on hand thousands of brick ready for delivery to purchasers.

Look Out for Poor Kerosene.

The Secretary of the State Board of Health gives notice that it is illegal to sell in New Jersey, kerosene oil that will flash at less than one hundred degrees, Fahrenheit. The penalty is a fine of $500, or imprisonment for one year. As the Secretary is advertising to this effect throughout the State, it will probably be well for dealers to govern themselves accordingly, otherwise they may receive an unexpected and unwelcome visit from an agent of the State Board.

An Admirable Financial Condition.

According to the financial statement rendered by Father Smyth, last Sunday, the receipts of St. Mary's church during the year ending June 1st, amounted to $8,719 46. He congratulated the congregation on having reduced their indebtedness $3,547 26, besides paying the current expenses of the year, and stated that there was then no bills against the church unpaid. All of which must be very satisfactory to the members of St. Mary's.

Fire At Bound Brook.

An old blacksmith and wheelwright shop in Bound Brook, known as the Compton stand, was burned to ashes on Monday night last. It was occupied by Wm. B. Mulford as a confectionery and market. Mulford's property was insured by Carmer & Codington, of Somerville, for $650 in the London Standard; the building in the Hillsborough for $200 and Bound Brook Mutual for $400. There was a barn also consumed in the rear, with an insurance of $150 in the Bound Brook Mutual. The cause of the fire is unknown.

They'll Change Places Next Time.

At Elizabeth, Wednesday, was played a remarkably perfect, interesting and exciting game of ball, between the swell nines of this and that city. The Elizabethans were more experienced, in better practice and under greater regularity of organization, but every man of the Crescents did his duty and brought honor to the nine. The game lasted but one hour and twenty-eight minutes, and the result was:—

Elizabeth,	2 2 0 1 0 1 0 0 0—6

Worm Fences Not a Division Line.

In the case of Morton vs. Reynolds decided at the last term of the Supreme Court, the opinion of Judge Magie, which was the opinion of the court, was to the effect that "a license to build a fence upon a division line between two adjoining tracts, will authorize a fence to be placed on the division line, so as to occupy an equal space on each side of the mathematical line of division for a reasonable width, but will not authorize the erection of a fence, which like a worm or zig-zag fence is not built on the division line, but crosses it from to side, and encloses parts of the adjoining tracts."

Base Ball.

The Crescents came near suffering a first defeat at the hands of a Jersey club, last Saturday on their grounds—and, as it was, were taught a very necessary lesson—not to be too confident. Never having heard of any good coming out of Rahway, the Plainfielders thought it unnecessary to bring out a strong nine, and a decidedly weak team, in many parts, was placed in the field. In the beginning the Crescents led, but later the Rahwegians scored 14 runs in two innings, and the nine innings closed with a tie. Darkness prevented a settlement of the contest until a future day. The following was the score by innings:

Crescent:	2 7 0 2 1 0 1 2 3—18.
Rahway:	0 0 1 2 1 0 5 9 0—18.

Fire Board Meeting.

The Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department held its regular monthly meeting, Tuesday evening, at which all the members were present. A number of candidates for admission as active firemen were "inspected and laid over." The bids for laying new pipes from raceway to well at Front and Somerset streets, were read but none accepted. The Board decided to do the work under its own charge. The matter of repairs to the Engine House of Warren Co., No. 2, was very thoroughly discussed. It was finally decided to adjourn further consideration of the subject until next Thursday evening in the Council room, when an estimate of the cost of alteration and repair is to be furnished by Commissioner Jones. A number of claims were audited, and a resolution providing for an inspection and parade of the Fire Department and an appropriation of $250 for the expenses of such, was laid on the table. After other business—of no importance—the meeting adjourned.

A Day at Thousand Islands Park, St. Lawrence River.

At the last meeting of the State Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations of the State of New York, in response to an invitation from the Thousand Island Park Association, the following persons were appointed a committee to arrange for a Y. M. C. A. Day on Sabbath, August 5th at that place. Rev. George B. Stewart, Auburn; Geo. S. Massey, Waltertown; Jno. Marcellus, Syracuse; Chas. F. Maclean, New York, C. Collins Merriam, Lyons Falls.

Some associations are planning an excursion to the Park during the Sunday School Parliament and the Y. M. C. A. day.

Sent to the Reform School.

Since City Judge Good so promptly sentenced Wm. Friese to the County Jail, after his arrest by Captain Chase last week, efforts have been made by certain citizens of North Plainfield to provide suitable homes for his boys who have become nuisances in consequence of their begging, stealing and swearing propensities. Through the efforts of Messrs Chas. Place, J. E. Turrell, P. Weaver and others, one of the lads has been committed to the Reform School at Jamesburg, this State, by Judge Magie, and it is hoped that suitable homes will be provided for the other lads before the fathers' time of service under Warden Cahill expires.

Templar Pilgrimage.

Pilgrimages to the Old World have lately become a feature among the Knights Templar of the United States, and have been the means of producing a better feeling of fraternal friendship between the Masons of the continent than could have been brought about by any other means. The first of these "pilgrimages" began with that of Alleghany Commandery, of Pennsylvania, in the year 1870, and was so successful that it was followed by others from Philadelphia, etc. This year the pilgrims come from Chicago, and sail under the banner of Apollo Commandery, No. 1, among the members of which are some of the finest and wealthiest men of that city. Upon the arrival of the Knights and their ladies in New York on Saturday next, they will be met by Palestine Commandery, No. 18, of that city, that command assembling at the Masonic Temple to act as escort. The ladies of the party of pilgrims will then be taken under escort to the steamship City of Rome, of the Anchor Line, while the knightly pilgrims will form in line and, under the escort of the Knights of Palestine, which body will be headed by a full band, march along Forty-second street to Fifth avenue, thence to Fourteenth street, and Broadway to the steamship, which will sail at noon. The escort from Chicago will then be taken on board a special steamer under the charge of the local Commandery, and accompany the pilgrims down the Bay, where a final salute will be given by the departing Knights.

It is expected that the voyage across the Atlantic will occupy until Sunday, July 22, when the party will dine at Queenstown. The City of Rome is expected to reach Liverpool on Monday, July 23.

Auditing—O. T. Waring and A. H. Smith.

Privilege—N. Robbins, E. Gross and S. W. Laing.

Contributions were received from the amount subscribed at a previous meeting by members of the Board of Directors toward paying off premiums due exhibitors at the last Fair, and those entitled to said premiums may expect to receive a check for same very shortly.

It is determined to spare no pains to make the coming Fair a grand success in every way. The large amount of premiums offered in the Speed Department should bring out a large attendance, as good horses will be entered for each race and some fine exhibitions of speed may be expected. The running and hurdle races will be a feature of the occasion, as horses will be entered for these trials from the stables of prominent turfmen.

It is now the duty of farmers and others to assist in making the Fair a success by making exhibits of their products and wares.

Did She Swallow An Umbrella?

The Flemington Advertiser says that Mr. Miles Cunningham, of that place, has had for some months past some unexplainable ailment in one of his herd of cows. Doctor's could not solve her condition and had given her recovery up. Some time ago she had one side of her so much swollen that it burst and discharg*ed some yellow matter. Nothing more* could be detected. The cow seemed to be suffering very much. Last Monday week, one of his work hands came in from the field and informed him that the other side of her had burst and something like an umbrella wire was protruding from the opening. Upon making an examination of the same, and drawing it out, some 18½ inches of steel rib of an umbrella was found. Whether the balance was discharged from the other side at the time of its breaking or not, they cannot tell, as she was out in pasture. How she came to have the steel in her is solved in this way; that she may have swallowed it in her hay. The cow is at present doing well and hopes of her recovery are entertained.

Killed by Lightning.

During the very severe thunder shower last Saturday evening, as ex-alderman Francis M. Oliver, of New Brunswick, was driving a team of horses to his barn near that city, the animals were struck by lightning and instantly kill. Mr. Oliver was badly stunned, and for a time thrown into what the physicians term acute hystera, caused by fright. Mr. Oliver, we learn, had been mowing for a Mr. Toland. Seeing the storm approaching he had unhooked his horses, was driving them home, and had nearly reached the barn, when he says that he saw a large ball of fire flash right across his face and then instantly turn. He then saw his horses fall, and the earth all around them appeared to him to be on fire, then all was a blank to him. Soon, however, he was able to arise, and it is said that he was so excited that he ran about ten feet at a jump; he went into his house, crying, "They are both dead, they are both dead!" and then ran out again, acting in a very excited and strange manner. He was taken in hand by some men on the place and put to bed.

That whoever having the care, custody or control of any child within the State shall willfully cause or permit the life of such child to be endangered, or its health to be injured, or who shall wilfully cause or permit such child to be placed in such situation that its life may be endangered or its health injured, or who shall willfully, maliciously or in a cruel and inhuman manner, beat, whip, or punish any child so as to endanger its life or injure its health, upon conviction thereof shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by imprisonment in the County jail for a term not exceeding six months, or by a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars, or by both, such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court."

This Society is authorized by law to make complaint against those who may be guilty of cruelty to children, and have them punished. We therefore respectfully request that all cases of such cruelty, coming to the knowledge of any of our citizens, be reported to the Officers of this Society, that such guilty persons may be properly dealt with.

All over this State can now be heard the merry whistle of "Bob White," where a year or two ago the voice of this game bird could not be heard. The cause of this is attributable to the strict enforcement of the law and care taken of the birds during the Winter, through the instrumentality of the Game Protective Societies, who have also released a large number of quail for breeding purposes throughout various portions of the State. If the farmers will but co-operate with these Societies by joining their ranks and arresting every violator of the game laws, it would not be long ere this best of game birds would be as plentiful in New Jersey as in years gone by. Formerly the State was overrun with lawless hunters (not sportsmen) from New York and other States, even on Sundays, who indiscriminately shot at, killed or wounded game birds out of season and song and insectiverous birds at all times. The increase of these latter birds during the past few years is noticeable and remarkable. The reason to be assigned is that under laws enacted within the past five years, a non-resident is liable to a fine of $50 or imprisonment for shooting or fishing in this State without having first complied with the provisions of a Game Protective Society. A few arrests convinced these maurauders that Jersey Justice would surely be meted out to them should they violate this law, and the consequence is that a true sportsman joins an Association or Society, while the pot-hunters fail to visit our shores as of old. These Game Protective Societies are springing up all over the country, and if the farmers, who are the true custodians of the birds, after all, will only assist in preventing the encroachments of these Sunday hunters, by becoming members of some Game Protective Society, and arresting the offender as the law gives them power to do, there will soon again be plenty of birds, both game and song.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

THE VALUABLE PACKAGE.

I was telegraph operator and station agent on one of the western lines of railroad, when this adventure of which I am going to tell you happened to me.

It was a wild and stormy night, and as the depot was nearly half a mile out of town, the set of loafers which usually collected about the stove in the waiting-room had eventually concluded to seek some place nearer home to spend the evening in, and, for a wonder, I was alone.

The express from the west was due at 9:50. After that I should be at liberty, and I began to wish the evening was over long before the train came along, or else that I had some one to talk to, for the depot was in one of the lonesomest spots that could have been selected; and the wind kept up a dismal moaning in the pines close by, and, every now and then seemed to be positively howling in the wires of the telegraph. I began to feel nervous and fidgety.

At last the train came. I was also express agent, and the expressman on the train handed me a heavily-sealed envelope, remarking, as he did so: 'Be careful of that, Braathwaite, there's a big bonanza in that package, if it were yours or mine.'

'Money?' I asked, noticing that there were but two passengers getting off—two men in shaggy overcoats, and slouchy-looking hats whom I concluded without thinking much about them or paying but little attention to them, to be hunters returned from some up-country trip.

'Yes; a trifle of twenty thousand, I believe,' answered Phillips. 'Old Powers is putting up a mill somewhere near here, isn't he?'

'Yes, on the other side of the river,' I replied. 'It's lucky to have a rich father, Phillips.'

'You're right there,' answered Phillips.

And then the train started off, and I turned and walked toward the office.

As I neared the door with the package in my hand one of the men, who had been watching me, made a spring toward me. I don't know how I happened to be on the lookout for them, but I must have been, for I jumped back almost the same instant that he made his move, and before either one of them comprehended what I was about I had made a dive between them and succeeded in getting into the office, and had the door bolted almost before I knew what I was doing.

I heard a volley of curses hurled at me, and then I knew by the sounds and the creaking of the door that both of the men were trying to break in. But I had no fears of their doing that. It was of hard wood, well-seasoned, and would resist all their efforts in that direction.

I put the package in the safe, and locked it securely, before I stopped to think what was to be done. Then I sat down to think, while I could hear the men talking outside. I knew they were holding a council over the means to be used to effect an entrance and obtain possession of the money I had received.

It was anything but a pleasant situation to be in. Here was I alone half a mile away from any assistance, at ten o'clock at night and a stormy night at that—and the probabilities were that nearly everybody was already in bed. If they were not, no one would think of coming to the depot at that time of night. Outside were two desperate men, who knew I had a large sum of money in my possession, and they knew that if they could effect an entrance I would amount to but little in the way of preventing an accomplishment of their villainous purpose.

Suddenly a thought occurred to me. The clerk at the hotel where I boarded had taken a fancy to telegraphy and we had put up a wire between the hotel and the depot. Why couldn't I advise him of my danger, and have him to send help?

I heard a new sound at the door just then, which sent the blood in great, frightened waves all over me. The men had begun to cut their way in with pocket knives!

I rushed to the instrument and called George. What if he had gone to bed, or should be out? I turned pale at the thought.

But pretty soon a response came back. He was there.

Go ahead.

I began and wrote:

'I am in danger. Two men are trying to gain admittance for the purpose of robbing the express safe. Send help immediately, for God's sake! Not a minute to lose!'

'Slower,' telegraphed George, who had not been practicing long enough to be able to read well.

I went over with the message again. But I suppose excitement made my writing 'blurred,' for again he sent back word:

'Slower and more distinct. Can't make it out.'

Good God. Before I succeeded in making him understand me they would be through the door I thought, with a cold sweat breaking out all over me. But I went over the message again, and this time he caught it, and sent back a hurried 'All right! Hold out for ten minutes!'

The men were digging away like beavers. I could see the points of their knives once in a while, as they splintered away fragments of the panels. But I knew that it would take them some time yet to cut away enough for them to make an entrance through. How I wished I had a pistol!

I waited in feverish impatience. Suddenly there was a crash, and one panel was stove in by the foot of one of the men.

'Aha!' he grinned, with his leering face at the aperture. 'You see we mean business, don't you? What are you going to do when we get in, eh?'

I didn't know. Die, I supposed, if they took an idea to put an end to me into their heads. Why didn't George and the help he had promised come? It seemed to me that they had time enough to make a ten mile tramp.

'We've got the second panel almost ready to stave in,' said the other man, chuckling horribly over the cheerful information. 'Then, I guess, Tom can crawl through. You might as well be opening that box o' your'n, an' git out that bundle we're after. It'll save all on us considerable trouble and time.'

Crash came his foot against the panel and it burst into splinters; and my heart fairly stopped beating when I saw one of them thrust his head and shoulders through the opening. I seized the poker, and struck him over the head with all the force I could muster. He rolled out a volley of terrible curses, but I was master of the situation at that particular moment.

Suddenly there was a sound of voices and then the man outside cried that they were 'nabbed,' and tried to make his escape. But I knew by the sound that he was caught, and was struggling with his captors. There were several pistol-shots fired, and eager cries, during which the poor wretch in the door made no effort to escape, but lay there limp and motionless. I began to fear I had killed him. I drew back the bolts, and got the door open just in time to see the other one overpowered, a prisoner in the hands of a half-a-dozen of the boys from town. Then we got the man out of the door. He wasn't dead, but he was insensible; my blows with the poker had been too much for him.

I bought me a pistol the first thing the next morning, and was on the lookout for robbers and adventurers after that; but that was the only adventure of any account that happened to me while I stayed there. If it hadn't been for that telegraph which George and I had put into operation, I rather think I should have finished up all my earthly adventures that night.

Maud Lennon, the young daughter of John Lennon, of Lockport, N. Y., died Tuesday morning of last week in convulsions from blood poisoning, caused by a prick of a tack in her forehead received one week before. The case is a very unusual one.

There is a young fellow over on the east side who has been making a daily practice of attempting to sing 'Let me like a soldier die.' He seems to crave death, and they do say that a neighbor who has an old but well preserved army musket is preparing to accommodate him.

WHAT HE TOOK HIM FOR.

The president of a defunct savings bank got in a hack and rode to the Central Depot yesterday. Upon his arrival at his destination the driver said: 'Fare, please—$1.'

As the regular charge is only fifty cents the passenger indignantly demanded of the 'Jehu': 'What do you take me for?'

'Fifty cents on the dollar, sir. I was afraid to say only fifty cents for to ride for fear you would want to settle with me for a quarter, that being fifty per cent. and the rate at which you settled with your other creditors.'

The hackman got his dollar and the ex-banker got something he had not thought of before.

SHE TURNED THE TABLES.

The public has long conceded that the power of the hotel clerk is superior to that of President. A new rival has sprung up in the railroad ticket agent, as was demonstrated at an Iowa station, a few weeks ago.

'I want a ticket to B——,' said a well-known lady of the town, just before train time.

'Twenty-four cents,' responded the agent, working his sausage machine. She laid down a silver quarter. Being well acquainted and a practical joker, the agent drew up from his pocket a glittering pants button, passed it over with the ticket and scooped up the quarter.

'Is that a legal tender?' asked the lady, quietly.

'Oh, yes,' he answered, with mock gravity, 'they are the mainstay of the republic.'

She pocketed it and got aboard, leaving the agent's face coruscating with smiles.

A few days after he told it to a brigade of runners buying tickets for B——, and while he was enjoying the encore, the lady appeared with—

'Ticket for ——, please.'

'Twenty-four cents,' with a sly wink at the runners. He laid down the ticket. She scooped it and laid down twenty-four dazzling buttons, exactly like the first.

'You said they were legal tender. They go a long ways supporting the family,' she chirped sweetly, as she bowed from the presence of more than presidential prerogative.

A watch should be cleaned every year and a half and wound up regularly. They will then last a life-time. Without this, about five years is the limit of their life.

"My dear fellow," remarked the judge to the plaintiff, who had lost his action before him that afternoon; "you had a mighty good case, but what made you employ such an ass of a lawyer?" "Because I had been told that he had the ear of the court."

OF ANOTHER AGE.

GRADUALLY SUPPLANTED BY A BETTER ARTICLE CERTAIN OLD THINGS ARE DONE AWAY.

In the general reception room of the Western Union Telegraph building on Broadway, New York, are exhibited the coarse, crude and clumsy instruments of the infancy of the telegraph. They are only relics now. More perfect machinery has superseded them.

Years ago what is now styled the old-fashioned porous plaster did some good service. There was then nothing better of the kind. Now all that is changed. Science and study has gone deeper into the secrets of medicine and produced BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which embodies all the excellencies thus far possible in an external remedy. The old plasters were slow—the Capcine is rapid; they were uncertain—the Capcine is sure. Cheaper articles bear similar names. Be careful, therefore, that some thrifty druggist does no deceive you. In the centre of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Price 25 cents.

POETRY.

A QUERY.

Hast thou not at gray of evening
When the sun takes leave of day,
And his golden arrows shading
Gradually into gray?

And hast listened to the cricket,
To his chirping merry song,
Hidden in the leafy thicket
Singing all the evening long?

Or that little pea-green insect,
Securely in the grass is hid,
Ever singing and direct—
Ly charging that Katy-did?

Or the brooklet of the mountain
Gurgling, laughing as it flows
Clear as crystal, from the fountain
To the river where it goes?

Or the saffron colored morning
Ere the golden orb we view,
All the eastern sky adorning
With a bright and yellow hue?

When Aurora first approaches,
[illegible]
Then the songsters in their carols
Many medley concerts hold:

These their psalms, [illegible]
These, their morn and evening prayers,
These, their only aspirations
They to God of nature bear.

Did mankind fulfill his mission
Like the little birds we see?
Then he'd have his full fruition
As his God designed to be.

All God's creatures, man excepted,
Do fulfill the end designed.
God's noblest work—man—rejected
His just laws, nor statutes mind.

DEATH AND BURIAL IN SPAIN.

They will never return! The bright days of yore have gone; the friends we loved have gone; and they will never return to us again. So say all classes in Spain, in their hour of bereavement and desolation—the fair spring will come with its wealth and smiling fields, and painted flowers; the summer heats will come; the tropic, the autumnal rains—all will return; but hours, days, years, and friends that have passed come no more!

Children of nature, holding their tenure of right by natural more that artificial right, it is in spring and fall that Spanish die; in the summer heats, deaths are very rare; and in the chilly but little varying temperature of the winter, still more rare.

And so the Spaniards call Autumn the 'Harvest of the aged,' and Spring the 'Harvest of the young,' and almost invariably it is at night the Host is carried to the dying.

It is 8 or 9 p. m., of autumnal eve; suddenly from the old church tower ring out three, then three more, then three more—a trinity of sharp clangs of one bell; then priests assemble in the chapel—they live hard by in their clergy houses, and one always keeps a lamp outside his window, in wakeful slumbers, ready to raise if summoned and carry the Host to any poor man—and in five minutes, heralded by a boy in red petticoats, ringing his bell, and preceded by six candle-bearers, the clergy carrying the Host pass up the silent street; servants open the shutters and place a candle in the window; they crouch down and murmur prayers, their hands clasped around each other's waist.

The tinkle of the bell waxes fainter and fainter along the dusty and winding street; in a semicircle of lights, with two policemen sword in hand, on guard, the lay processionists stand outside the sick man's door, while the priests walk up stairs to administer the Host to the dying man.

All around are heard the [illegible] of woe; the hysterical wailing [illegible]ping; the men are smoking the [illegible] cigarette, the universal an[illegible] comfort in this land and stand [illegible], here and there.

But there are some terrible diseases, in which [illegible] cannot be administer[illegible] cannot retain the water, [illegible] far gone to swallow it; it [illegible] be.

The friends are consulted, and they say 'We desire on his behalf, that the Church should give him extreme unction, which is done, only, however, in desperate cases. The bed-clothes are turned down; with due decency, the forehead, chest, soles of the feet, etc., are anointed with oil in the name of the Lord, and the kiss is given and the sufferer dies.

In this semi-tropic climate, there is none of that keeping of the cold clay in the house as long as possible, and the funeral follows close upon the very heels of death.

In ancient days, in Spain, the dead were robed, according to their sex, in the garb of monk and nun, and thus buried.

But now they are buried according to taste, in white, or, more often, in their ordinary clothes; a bride, in her wedding dress.

The short time while the body lies in state, oftentimes with window open to the street, lighted candles burn all around; and the body, in its slight coffin, is literally covered with flowers.

There is no, or very little crape known in Spain, save in the large cities; a plain black dress is the usual mourning; the lady friends of the family kneel round [illegible] turn silently away.

The priests, some four or five would be the average number, are at the door; if the coffin be that of a child, it is very slight, not to say flimsy, and painted of a light blue, picked out with gilt stars, costing two dollars more or less; if a grown up person it is of slight or massive wood, according to the pecuniary means of the family.

The lid is constantly left open.

Every male friend of the family is waiting outside; the laborer has left his hoe in the field, the carpenter his workshop, the tailor his counter, all, in fact, who knew the dead man followed his remains to their last earthly resting place, the priests going before in white and black robes, with cap on head, preceded by choristers and macebearer, and light in costly lanterns, and singing the mournful strain of the Spanish funeral anthem.

At the cemetery gates the ceremony, so far as the church is concerned, is at an end, the priests turn back, the crowd high and low walked side by side, as befits men who walk in the presence of a common foe.

The bricklayer, trowel in hand, stands ready beside the open niche, the coffin is pushed in, bricked up, cigarettes are lit, and the crowd wends its way home.

Within three days a printed paper is sent round by the mourning family, to notify their friends on what day and at what hour they will hold their funeral reception, and a most simple and touching ceremony it is.

The days of mourning are strictly observed; those of a widow should number a year and one month, after which she may change her name.

The bereaved family sit in their reception room in deep mourning; you pass in, express your sympathy in kindly words, and pass on to your usual business.

Each year as it rolls round in its quiet course and brings the anniversary of the Spaniard's day of grief, is marked by a solemn service in the mortuary chapel of the parish church, and from the dark incense-laden aisles the simple prayers of all who loved their lost one ascend up to God.

THE CASHIER SYSTEM.

An Ohio merchant, who kept three clerks, each one of whom made his own change and had free access to the money drawers, was the other day asked by a commercial traveler why he did not keep a cashier to receive all moneys.

'Cost too much,' was the reply.

'But are your clerks honest?'

'Perfectly honest.'

'Have you any objection to my trying them?'

'Certainly not; go ahead in any way you wish.'

[illegible] but in about three hours he returned and said in a loud voice, so that all might hear.

'When I was here this forenoon I paid you a bogus quarter by mistake. In case you find it in counting up to-night lay it aside and I'll redeem it.'

Then the traveller, accompanied by the merchant, took positions where the back door and alley could be kept in view, and in less than ten minutes out came the head clerk and emptied a handful of silver on the head of a barrel and pawed it over. The bogus quarter was not there. He returned to the store and out came the second clerk and went through the same programme. He was followed by the third, and after he disappeared the merchant calmly observed:

'I've been waiting 13 years for trade to pick up, and I rather think I'll try the cashier system.

A HOTEL GUEST IN GREAT TROUBLE.

'Stopping at an uptown hotel the other night,' writes a correspondent, 'I observed an unusual disturbance in an adjoining room, which was shortly after followed by the rapid opening of the door, when a thin, quivering, dandy voice called out to some distant night walker:

'Wai-taw!—wai-taw—wai taw!'

(No answer.)

'Po-taw!—Po-taw!—Po-taw!'

(No answer.)

'Watchman!—watchman!—watchman!'

'That's me, sir,' groaned a deep voice.

'Watchman, come here diwectly! We're in gwate twubble! There's a mouse in this apawtment, and it [illegible] awound in the most distwacted [illegible]. Mrs. Pyinkey is very appweh[illegible] of mice. Can't you come in and [illegible] the cweature?'

'Fraid not, sir. It's [illegible]e, and I might be sure to wake [illegible] some other boarders as mightn't [illegible].'

'How widiculous [illegible] (a long pause) watchman, could y[illegible] just step down into the baw[illegible], and get some cwackers and [illegible]se, and entice the animal out [illegible] the entwy?'

'A brief [illegible] from the watchman that the [illegible] closed, sent Mr. Pinkey b[illegible] his mouse haunted dormitory. [illegible]unately the 'cweature' ceased [illegible]ing, and a dead calm soon [illegible] in the adjoining room.'

That cold rain water and soap will remove machine grease from washable fabrics.

That fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into boiling water for a minute.

That fresh meat beginning to sour will sweeten if placed out of doors in the cool air over night.

That milk which has changed may be sweetened or rendered fit for use again by stirring in a little soda.

That a tablespoonful of turpentine boiled with your white clothes, will greatly add to the whitening process.

That kerosene will soften boots and shoes that have been hardened by water and will render them pliable as new.

That clear boiling water will remove tea stains. Pour the water through the stain, and thus prevent its spreading over the fabric.

That salt will curdle new milk, hence in preparing milk porridge, gravies, etc., the salt should not be added until the dish is prepared.

That kerosene will make your tea kettle as bright as new. Saturate a woolen rag and rub with it. It will also remove stains from clean varnish furniture.

That blue ointment and kerosene, mixed in equal proportions and applied to bedsteads, is an unfailing bug remedy and that a coat of whitewash is ditto for a log house.

That beeswax and salt will make your rusty flat-irons as clean and as smooth as glass. Tie a lump of wax in a rag and keep it for that purpose. When the irons are hot rub them first with the wax rag, then scour them with a paper sprinkled with salt.

JUST WHEN TO PROPOSE.

HOW LADIES IN A MISSOURI TOWN VIEW POPPING THE QUESTION.

[From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

"How shall a man propose in order to be successful in his suit?" repeated one of the most intelligent society ladies, whose silver locks only serve to enhance the beauty of her still youthful face. "In my opinion, though all men know well enough how to 'make love,' there is not one in a thousand who knows how to propose. My husband spent six months protesting and convincing me of his love, of which, by the way, I was well aware from the first, without once asking the important question, 'Will you marry me?' and finally one day said to me, with a disheartened air, 'You are like all the rest, a perfect enigma. I have spent six months trying to win you, and I do not know that I have made any impression upon you; [illegible] you wear around your throat.' 'This,' I exclaimed, in the most innocent way, [illegible] if you only get hold of the right string.' He saw the point, took hold of the right string, and——' "His arm took the place of the scarf?" "Well, neither of us have ever regretted it."

A bright-eyed girl, who is a skillful angler for hearts, thinks a young man, to be successful, should propose after a very short acquaintance, take the girl by storm as it were, while she is pleased with a new beau, and before she has time to tire of him; then follow the proposal up with a vigorous courtship, lots of flowers and bon-bons, drives, theatre parties, etc., and if she consents, insist upon a short engagement by all means. Another well-known blonde beauty, who has created sad havoc and had much experience in this line, says the only successful way is to propose when least expected. Allow no time for consideration, and then insist that the acceptance must be "now or never." She feels sure that is the only way that she will ever be captured; but she thinks very few men are bold enough to try that game. A handsome y[illegible] widow, well-known in social circ[illegible] is not so rich as she was, say[illegible] at the only successful way to win h[illegible] is to offer a fine house, horses and [illegible]riage, with plenty of money to ke[illegible]em up.

A dark-eyed girl, [illegible] a tangle of soft brown hair shadi[illegible]r brow, says: "If a fellow is dee[illegible] in love with a girl and persist[illegible] his efforts to win her, he is sure [illegible] his suit. Widowers understa[illegible] point, and know how to ma[illegible] and propose, and you will observe they are always successful." She [illegible] one case where a widower went in [illegible] hung up his hat, announcing his intention of remaining until he was accepted, and the girl had to marry him to get rid of him. A widower beau makes her nervous about the result.

One sweet, dreamy-eyed girl, who is just on the threshold of society, says: "Lovemaking must be so sweet that she would wish her lover to be a long time making the approaches, and she would not shorten the delights of an engagement; if they tire of each other it would be better before than after marriage. She is not particular as to his style, but he must be tall and handsome, and sing and dance well, and, above all, he must know how to make love." This girl's name must be kept secret.

A married lady, in whose household the little god of love certainly makes his abode, says the only successful proposition of which she knows anything was made without a word being spoken: 'John and I sat looking in the fire a long time without saying anything, when all at once he put his arm around me, drew me to him, and kissed me. When father came in a moment later he said: "Major, I'm going to steal your daughter.'"

"The quickest courtship on record," said one old resident, "was that of Dr. Nick McDowell, who, driving along the street in his buggy one day, saw a beautiful girl standing at the window. He immediately stopped and hitched his horse, rang the bell, inquired the lady's name, was ushered into the parlor, announced his own name, said he was 'pleased with her appearance and wished to marry her at once.' Nothing but the knowledge that she was actually in the presence of the celebrated physician kept her from fainting. To her plea of surprise at this unexpected announcement, he only replied: 'Now or never.' When she asked to 'take a week to consider,' he said: 'I am going down street to attend a critical case and have no time to spare right now.'

"Give me a day, then."

"I'll tell you what I'll do. When I am through with this professional visit I'll drive around and get a preacher; if you have made up your mind to marry me by that time, all right," and he left her, breathing, and unable to articulate another word. When he returned they were quietly married. "No cards."

WHY THE PLAY WAS INTERRUPTED.

Some of the nice children in Commonwealth avenue recently proposed to surprise their parents with a dramatic performance, with the distinct understanding that no adult was to witness a rehearsal or to ask about the nature of the play, written by a young miss of ten years, who [illegible] ed by a lad of the same age. On the night of the performance the parents of the children assembled in the front drawing-room of one of the large residences, and waited for the drawing aside of the portieres with commendable patience. The first scene represented the wedding of the hero and heroine, and the departure of the former for the wilds of the West, where he was to reap his fortune in raising cattle and mining. This went off finely, and the portieres were closed with a loud burst of applause. A lapse of ten years was supposed to have passed between the first and second acts, and when the act commenced the young husband had returned, and his wife, not looking a day older, greeted her spouse in a formal manner, and even asked him to remain and dine with her, which he consented to do. While seated at the table eating ice cream the husband told how he had toiled for wealth and acquired millions, all for the sake of the dear wife he had left behind. This had such an effect on the matron that she finished the ice cream, sighed to think that there was no more on the table, and then addressed her husband, speaking earnestly and firmly: "You have done well," she said, "but while you have been at work I have not been idle. You shall see what I have accomplished." She touched a bell, and a white-capped bonne entered the room, leading a toddlin' infant a year old, and followed by nine others of various ages, one for each year of married life. The actors to this day do not understand why the play was interrupted by shouts of laughter and applause from the fathers and mothers who were present. At any rate, they say the play was a success, but the parents think it a little Frenchy in construction and plot.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE, EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

ALL SIDES.

Political legerdemain on the liquor question is apparent in Ohio.

A Republican Legislature, with the evident design of being all things to all men, submitted to the voters of Ohio three distinct amendments to the Constitution, namely—

One permitting the granting of licenses.

One decreeing absolute prohibition.

One authorizing local option.

The experiment of riding three horses at one time is likely to prove there, as elsewhere, a failure.

The funny part of the scheme is the legal opinion of the Republican Attorney General, that luminous law official, with the grave erudition of a Captain Cuttle, having declared that a voter may vote for all three of said proposed and diverse amendments, or for two of them, or for either one.

Suppose, under the authority of such an opinion, a majority of ballots should be cast in favor of all the amendments, what singular renown would then cluster around the Commonwealth of Sherman and Hayes—

The sale of liquor by license permitted.

The sale of liquor totally prohibited.

The sale of liquor subject to local decision.

All at the same time and by virtue of the same organic law.

How absurd?

Better be honest on the question of liquor as on every other question.

The people are more intelligent than some cunning politicians imagine.

They admire integrity of judgment and consistency of action.

They detest political legerdemain.

KNOCK DOWN.

ABOUT FISH CULTURE.

United States Fish Commissioner M. F. Pierce is not a believer in some of the new ideas about fish culture. He is reported in the Philadelphia Press as saying: "The Delaware and all the large streams north of it emptying into the Atlantic were 'natural salmon streams' at the time the country was settled, but the clearing of the forests and tilling of the lands has made the water warm and muddy, whereas when frequented by the salmon they were clear and cold. For the same reason *the numerous trout streams which ex*isted all through this latitude and north, fifty or more years ago, no longer contain this finest variety of the salmon family. In the face of these facts, State Fish Commissions, and even our very intellectual National Commission encourage the restocking of these streams with this costly variety of fish, at an immense aggregate cost of money. This misdirected labor and expenditure is almost a total loss. Carp culture is the only variety of fish culture which is worthy of serious attention."

Druggists will in future have to distinctly label each and every box or package of any of the drugs usually denominated poisons, with the name of the article and the word "poison," together with the name and place of business of the seller. Fifty dollars fine or three months imprisonment for violation of this law which went into effect on the 2d inst.

Considerable damage was done to fields and roads throughout North*hampton county,* Pa., by last Sunday night's storm. The down track of the Lehigh Valley Railroad between Easton and Bethlehem was blockaded with land slides, and trains had to run during the night on the other track. The Easton and Amboy tracks between Pattenburg and Phillipsburg were covered with water nearly two feet deep. One passenger train lost over an hour in running 13 miles.

The new high license laws in the West differ widely. In Illinois all licenses hereafter for the sale of spirits and wines are to be granted upon the payment of $500 a year, and for beer at $150. The Nebraska law puts the fee in cities of a certain grade at $1,000, and at $500 for all other places. The law in Iowa permits towns to fix the amount, and there is no uniform rule on the subject. In some places it is as low as $75, and in others as high as $1,000, while there has been a large increase in the amount throughout the State, and a considerable reduction in the number of liquor sellers.

The Rev. Father O'Haran, Pastor of St. Mary's church, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and the Pastor of the Catholic church at Plymouth have informed the young Sunday-school children of their congregations that hereafter they will not be allowed to wear "bangs" or "frizzes" while attending divine service. If they do they will be sent home. Father O'Haran in a lecture to the children condemned the fashion of wearing "bangs" in severe terms, and said no young girl who ever expected to become a lady would be guilty of "banging" her hair. The parents coincide with the Pastor with a few exceptions. It is understood that a circular has been issued by Bishop O'Hara to all the clergy of the diocese calling their attention to the matter.

IRISH CABLE NEWS.

(Special Irish Cable News to the N. Y. Nation.)

LONDON, July 17, 1883.

The Nationalists of Wexford have triumphantly defeated the disgraceful alliance between "Cawtholic" Whigs and Orange Tories. Mr. William Redmond has been elected by an overwhelming majority. The O'Connor Don positively nowhere. The popular indignation of the Wexford masses against the men who sought to separate Wexford from the Irish cause resulted in some broken heads and wrecked houses; a significant lesson to all whom it may concern that the people will stand no treachery.

ORGANIZING THE LEAGUE.

Mr. Parnell goes to Ireland to-morrow to prepare for the definite organization of the National League, which, owing to the extreme pressure of Parliamentary business, and partially to the co-operation of the Coercion laws, has been somewhat neglected. The spirit of the people is excellent; they are certain to respond to reasonable impulsion from the leaders of the National movement.

FRANCE AND ENGLAND.

The present relations between France and England are rather alarming. The English mercantile class, puffed up by the victory of Tel-el-Kebir, think they can steal De Lesseps's Suez Canal with impunity. The coarse taunts of the English press has excited the deepest indignation in France. A slight accident might kindle a war which would have the most serious results for England. The British Government, conscious of the danger, is making the most careful preparations at home and abroad.

GLADSTONE'S GOVERNMENT IN JEOPARDY.

Unless the English people cool down the fate of the Gladstone Government will be in the hands of the Parnellites. Within a month Gladstone will probably be defeated on the New Suez Canal question, unless saved by the Irish vote, which is not at all likely.

MASONIC PILGRIMAGE.

Palestine Commandery, No. 18, K. T., New York city, 100 strong, under the command of Eminent Sir Eugene Eunson, assembled last Saturday at their asylum 6th avenue and 23d street, at 9:30 a. m. and accompanied by band proceeded to the Grand Union Hotel, 42d street, to escort Apollo Commandery No. 1, of Chicago, who had arrived in the city early that morning via N. Y. Central, en route to Europe. The line of march was down Fifth avenue, 17th street, Broadway, Waverly place, Hudson street, Leroy street to the Steamer "City of Rome." The Steamer "J. E. Moore" had been placed at the disposal of Palestine Commandery by one of its fraters and they, accompanied by a number of the Apollo Sir Knights who had come as far as this city, proceeded aboard and accompanied the Pilgrim Knights down the bay as far as Quarantine, where, after bidding them God speed and a pleasant voyage with numerous Palestine sky rockets, the steamer turned and headed for Glen Island which was reached at 4 o'clock, when they and their guests sat down and did justice to a Rhode Island clam bake. After disposing of the comforts that had been so amply provided, the Sir Knights inspected the Island and at sound of tattoo at high eight, all returned on steamer for homeward trip to city which was reached at 9:30 p. m. One and all express their views that a quiet, enjoyable and fraternal day had passed, and nothing had happened to mar any of its pleasures. The 34th degree was conferred on a number of novices on the way to Glen Island, and during the rendition of the ritual was favored with music by the Apollo quartet.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., July 18th.—Charles Raymond, a noted train-robber, who escaped from the Middlesex Jail on Sunday last, was captured to-day on an island between Philadelphia and Bordentown by Detective Francis, of Jersey City.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

It is illegal to kill Upland Plover before August 1st, under a penalty of $10.

Gray, black or fox squirrels cannot be killed in this State until Sept. 1st, under a penalty of $5 each.

Woodcock are becoming scarce from the frequent onslaughts made on them by gunners. The season closes on the last day of July.

Weak fishing is now excellent opposite the Sewaren House, Woodbridge Beach. Boats, bait and lines may be procured at reasonable rates of the proprietor, John P. Turner.

In the four mile sculling race between Hanlan and Ross at Ogdensburg, N. Y., on Wednesday last, Hanlan beat Ross, making the distance in 27 minutes 57¼ seconds, the fastest time on record.

There were several interesting scrub races between said-to-go-very-fast horses owned by local residents on the race track of the Fair Grounds last Saturday afternoon. Henry Goeller took the pie.

Hawks have a partiality for a tall pole, from whence they can survey the field before seizing their prey. The knowledge of this propensity of the hawk by the farmers sometimes induces the latter to erect poles at certain locations, at the top of which are fastened steel spring traps, which close when the hawks alight on them.

Messrs. F. W. Sigler, B. G. Lucas and W. M. Carter, of the Crescent Canoe Club, of Trenton, commenced a canoe cruise of half a thousand miles, on Friday noon of last week, at the State street lock of the Delaware and Raritan canal. The course is to be through the canal to New Brunswick, thence to New York via Raritan river and bay, Staten Island Sound and New York bay; up the Hudson to Rondout; railroad to Arkville; back to the Catskills, on the Popacton branch of the Del*aware river; thence to Hancock and home* again by the Delaware. Provisions for two weeks and the most complete fishing tackle and camp equipage are among the impediments, while hammocks, awnings, camp stools and innumerable small conveniences stowed away in the nooks and corners of the canoes add materially to the comfort and well-being of the voyagers.

THERE will be some interesting speed contests between gentlemen's roadsters at the fair grounds, to-morrow afternoon, after five o'clock.

THE Gypsies went through Plainfield last Friday with a fine display of horses and wagons. Some of the latter were the handsomest we ever saw.

MESSRS. George Opdyke and J. B. Dumont, of the Board of Directors of the Music Hall Association, have been added to the Building Committee.

THE compositors of this office are under obligations to Messrs. Morton & Bodeshime, the ice merchants, for a daily supply of pure spring water ice.

Two ladies attempted to drive over Rickert's express wagon, on Park ave., yesterday morning. The result was an upset and the throwing of both out into the road, but no damage of any consequence.

ONE of the best bathing-days of the Season at Ocean Grove, is Wednesday, Aug. 8th, which has been selected by Messrs Laing & Nelson for their annual excursion to that place. Tickets may be secured at any of the drug stores, or at the Railroad station—at $1.25 each.

MR. ISAAC MELBOURN has the contract for erecting a three story brick front to the old post-office building on Front st., which the owner, Mr. John H. French, proposes remodeling into a handsome store room on the ground floor to be occupied by him as a clothing store. The front will be brought out to the established city building line.

MESSRS. MCGINNIS & SHEPHERD of North Plainfield, are the agents for the celebrated Dudley blind fastener and adjuster. Even among so many patented inventions for the purpose, this is undoubtedly the most convenient and practicable. From the inside of the room with the window sash closed, the blinds can be shut or opened to any desired position.

THE body of a woman found on Sunday last near the Pennsylvania Railroad track at Elizabeth, was identified at Ford & Stiles' morgue as that of Johanna Barry, a woman who boarded with Mrs. John M. Gerard, of No. 645 Madison avenue, Elizabeth. The latter said that the deceased had often shown signs of being demented over religion, and she thinks that on Sunday, while on her way to church, she stopped to pray on the railroad track and was killed.

THE new order of affairs inaugurated since the P. & R. Railroad became the lessees of the Central R. R., whereby in consequence of an increased number of Sunday trains being run over the road compels the employees of the road at the various stations to put in more hours of labor on Sundays, prohibiting them from enjoying that day as a day of rest. The employees are, as a rule, justly dissatisfied with this, and in consequence some resignations of old and valued servants have occurred along the line with others to follow. It would seem as though these well-worked employees should have one day's rest in a week.

The Rev. A. V. V. Raymond's Decision.

The entire church going people of this city—and especially the young folks—will unite in congratulating the congregation of the Trinity Reformed Church upon the decision of the Rev. A. V. V. Raymond to remain as pastor of that church, despite the efforts of other churches to secure him. Mr. Raymond had recently received several calls that were decidedly tempting and exceedingly flattering, but he refused them all, and last Sunday morning preached a sermon on ministerial duty that faintly defined the causes that urged him to remain.

His letter in reply to the call extended him by the First Reformed Church of Albany, N. Y., was read by him in substance as follows: "Both the church at Albany and the church at Plainfield had faithfully laid their claims before him. He had sought at whatever personal sacrifice to do right. He believed that the conscientious convictions which had come to him, was the voice of God; and in obedience thereto, he declined the call. He did not deny the attractiveness of the field to which he was invited, but there could be little contentment or prosperity without an approving conscience." The letter closed with expressions of regard for the church at Albany, and a prayer that one "sent of God" might soon come to them.

So He Says.

Long Branch is at present the goal of Plainfield bicyclists. One member of the Club rode from this City to that place during one day recently, including a stop of five hours at Matawan.

Re-opening of an Old Matter.

One of the supposed principals in the "Greader Racket" of last Thanksgiving day, was arrested by Constable Weaver of North Plainfield, Monday, and sent to Somerville jail. An old employer furnished bail, and the accused was released.

Wanted to have his Own Way.

A colored purloiner of edibles prepared for a recent festival in the Mount Olive Baptist church, surrendered himself voluntarily to Justice Nash, Monday—after a gallant escape from Constable Moffett the previous Saturday—and was held to await the action of the Grand Jury.

A Close Call.

One Saturday recently, while Mr. Aaron Jimmerson was adjusting a belt on a revolving pulley at his brick yard back of Netherwood, a projecting nut caught in his overhauls and began winding them around the shaft. With remarkable presence of mind Mr. Jimmerson braced himself against an adjacent beam so firmly that the clothing was entirely stripped from him, but his life was saved.

No. 2, This Time.

Saturday evening last a fire was discovered to have started in the centre of a lot of salt hay in a frame building belonging to P. M. French, Esq., and situated near the race back of Frenchs' mill. An alarm was given, and to No. 2 Engine once more belongs the honor of "getting first water." The fire was speedily put out, and the danger overcome that threatened the surrounding buildings.

Patents to Plainfielders.

Letters patents have been granted from the U. S. Patent office to Percy C. Ohl, of this city, on two valuable inventions of his. One is for an Insulator for Electrical Conductors and the other is a Telephone Call.

Mr. Levi Hetfield, of this city, has also been allowed a patent on his improved coal dump, which is a great labor saving institution in unloading coal from cars.

The Baptists at Ocean Grove.

One of the finest days of the season was deservingly granted the annual excursion of the First Baptists, and about 1200 availed themselves of that occasion last Friday, and visited Ocean Grove for the first time this year. The trip by rail was made in two sections, combining nineteen cars, and without an accident. Under the charge of Messrs Marsh, Vanderbeek and other untiring workers, the affair was completely gratifying.

Base Ball.

The ball players of Westfield had "cut and dried" a programme for Saturday last that was to result in an emphatic defeat for the Crescents of this city. Having easily won the previous game, however, the Plainfielders knew no fear, and turned out but a light nine in general. The contest was one-sided throughout, and only interesting so far as it was amusing. The Crescents literally "made sport" of their opponents. The following is the score by innings:

Crescent —	5	4	9	1	5	0	2	1	—27
Westfield —	3	0	0	1	0	1	2	1	— 8

County Board of Assessors.

The Union County Board of Assessors met at Elizabeth, on Monday last, and fixed the taxable valuations of Union county property at $21,472,925 real estate and $3,612,612 personal. The taxable value of Elizabeth property is fixed at $11,493,300; Rahway, $2,554,500; Plainfield, $4,595,250; Clark township, $230,000; Cranford, $432,100; Fanwood, $635,275; Linden, $1,888,725; NewProvidence, $261,050; Springfield, $284,000; Summit, $770,000; Union, $1,336,800; Westfield, $761,425. The total debt of the county is $547,987. Next week we shall publish the abstract of valuations in tabular form.

Drowned.

Two little girls, named Kitty Hunt and Sarah Steiger, aged respectively 11 and 13 years, were drowned in Green Brook, near the Washington avenue bridge, at Dunellen, on Wednesday forenoon last. The girls, in company with a lad, were blackberrying, when the youngest child playfully entered the water to wade about. Sudenly getting beyond her depth her screams drew the attention of the others, and Sarah Steiger went to her assistance. The water being deep at that point, both were drowned before assistance arrived at the scene. The mother of Sarah Steiger is a widow in poor circumstances. The parents of Kitty Hunt had the misfortune to lose five children from diphtheria within a few days of each other about a year ago.

To Oscawana and Back.

A glorious day and a glorious time was experienced by the members of the Saengerbund and their friends, that participated in the Water Excursion to Oscawana Island, on the Hudson, Thursday of last week. The train left Plainfield at 7:30 a. m., and the excursionists (that did not "get left") reached home again about 10 o'clock in the evening, after a grand sail and a full day of successive pleasures. The Committee of Arrangements, Messrs Weigmann, Lilienstern, Kurzhals, Korman and Bock, deserve the credit of the success of the affair, which was a repetition of the enjoyments of past years. The music under the leadership of Prof. Stone was entirely satisfactory, and was thoroughly appreciated by the many graceful dancers present.

Deserved Commendation.

John S. Everitt, Esq., one of the most admired and respected of our citizens, whose successive family bereavements have called forth the sincere sympathy of the community, has recently retired from the Vice Presidency of the Broadway National Bank of New York—a retirement, after a connection of thirty-three years with that institution, which prostration of body by the weight of continued affliction, has made necessary. Upon such action becoming known to his associates in financial circles, a series of resolutions were drawn up and signed by the officers of every bank in the city of New York. From these resolutions—handsomely engrossed on parchment, and endorsed by autographs representing millions of money—we take the liberty of extracting the following portions:

"We have heard with regret of your retirement from the National Broadway Bank, and consequently from our Association, in both of which you have been an active and efficient member about one-third of a century. During this long period you have zealously participated in every effort made to bring the banking business of this City into an organized and substantial system, and in the several severe crises through which the Country has passed—both before and since the war, and during the great struggle—your counsels and your efforts were always persistently directed to secure the best results to the people, the nation, and the banks at large.

* * * * * *

"Our regret at parting with an old and honored associate is greatly increased because of the fact that it is caused by sudden, severe and repeated domestic afflictions and bereavements which have prostrated your strength and unexpectedly and unwillingly deprived you of your official relations with us."

At the Hotel Netherwood.

In every particular the Phantom Party at the Hotel Netherwood, Monday evening, was a success—due in general to the pleasantness of the surroundings, the courtesy of the host and the faultlessness of the music, but mainly owing to Messrs. Curtiss and Plummer who arranged the event, judiciously selected the guests and directed their pleasure. All present were entirely gratified, and are delighted at the prospect of future enjoyments of the same nature at the same place.

The Notorious Holmes.

The notorious individual known as John B. Holmes, who resides in Washington Valley, near the Stone Quarry, back of this city, again figured in a Court of Justice on last Friday morning. This time it was on a charge of perjury preferred against him by Mary Sullivan, who figures as his housekeeper. The charge is based upon the case of alleged fornication with the same woman preferred against him in the Somerset Courts some two years since, in which he was convicted. Having had another row with Mary, she has again had him "pulled up." The arrest was made by Constable P. Weaver, of Somerset county, assisted by Captain Chase, as Holmes was about taking the train for New York at Fanwood. Holmes was taken before Justice S. O. Horton, of North Plainfield, who set down Monday next as the time of hearing in the case. A Mr. Koch, of Scotch Plains, went Holmes' bail.

Desiccated Cocoanut.

A new and valuable improvement in preserving cocoanut for household and other use, has recently been discovered and patented, and the goods are now being placed on the market. The patent was taken out by one of Plainfield's former residents, Mr. Charles Overbaugh, who for several years was a valued employee in Compton's confectionery establishment. For the past six years Mr. O. has been in the South, spending four years in Jacksonville, Fla., and the past two years in Eufaula, Ala., where he built up an extensive confectionery business, and discovered the secret of putting up cocoanut in such a form that it keeps pure and sweet for years and retains all the delicate flavors so essential in its successful use. The article is now manufactured by Stow & Co., Eufaula, Ala., of which firm Mr. O. is a member. He has recently come on East to make arrangements for the more extensive manufacture of the article and its introduction on the markets. Mr. Overbaugh's many friends in this city will be pleased to learn of his good fortune in securing a patent for such a valuable commodity, which in time must be universally used.

Seriously Injured.

On Saturday afternoon Mr. William Titus, a young man in the employ of the New Jersey Telephone Exchange Company, was at work at New Brooklyn, near Plainfield, and in attempting to cut a limb from a tree to make it clear for the wires, he had cut the limb nearly through with a newly-sharpened broad-axe, and with a powerful blow severed the limb from the tree and came very near severing another limb from his own body, the axe coming down with great force upon his right leg, and we are informed, it split the bone. The young man was able to get down out of the tree after the accident, and was taken to Rahway, where he received medical attention. He was brought to this city and carried to the house of Mr. Connolly, a fellow workman, who resides in Schureman street. Mr. Titus, was very weak from the loss of blood. Dr. Clark is attending him, but says he cannot as yet say much about the young man's injury. It is hard to say whether amputation will be necessary or not. The injury is just below the knee joint and is as long as the blade of the axe is wide, about six inches we are informed.—New Brunswick Times.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

An extra effort is being made to sustain the work during the warm months of Summer. It can be done, but not without great effort. Will not the members and others interested in the saving of young men, do a little extra work now? It will tell in the future.

The young men's meeting is still well attended. The following is the list of topics for July, August and September:

July 23.
"Converted in a prayer meeting." Acts 16: 13-15.

July 30.
"What shall prove our love to Christ?" John 14: 21-24.

Aug. 6.

Sept. 3.
"What will you reap?" Col 3: 1 4.

Sept. 10.
"Which reward am I seeking?" Matt. 6: 1-6.

Sept. 17.

Sept. 24.
"The Prayer of Faith Granted." John 4: 46-54.

THE SUSTAINING MEMBERSHIP PLAN.

The best plan yet devised for the financial support of Young Men's Christian Associations and their establishment upon a permanent basis, is the sustaining membership plan. One is made a sustaining member by the payment of $10 annually, and is given in return all the privileges of the Association. We have already quite a number of sustaining members, some have taken two or more such memberships. But the support of the Association should not come upon a few; it is for the benefit of the public and should be supported by the public, and not a few individuals. There is no reason why we should not have 200 such members and so put the Association upon a solid footing. Nearly every one in business can take one sustaining membership and secure another. Let each member of the Association take it upon himself to secure as many as possible in the coming months.

GENERAL SECRETARY.

A Pastor's Resignation.

Intense surprise does not fully express the feeling experienced by the congregation assembled in the Crescent avenue church last Sunday morning, when the Rev. J. C. Bliss announced—as we give the substance below—his decisive resignation as their pastor. Only one or two of the most intimate friends of Dr. and Mrs. Bliss possessed the slightest premonition of such intended action, and the astonishment of all was only exceeded by the most universal and sincerest regret. Many good and sufficient causes have combined to impel such a step—one principal reason being the ill-health of Mrs. Bliss—and although the majority of the church would earnestly desire to retain their present pastor, yet the acceptance of his resignation is seemingly the only possible conclusion.

Dr. Bliss' words were to the following effect:

"In January, 1880 I announced my purpose to request a release at the next meeting of the Presbytery, from the pastorate of this church. But in view of the decided refusal of the congregation to concur in my request, and in view of the earnestly expressed conviction of both the elders and trustees that my intended action would not be for the best interests of this church and the cause of Christ, I concluded to remain at my post.

In the meantime the heavy indebtedness of our church has been cancelled; our beneficent offerings have shown a large increase, steady accessions to the membership have been made, and the whole work of the church has gone on with vigor and success, so that its present condition may be truly said to be one of marked prosperity.

In consideration of this condition and of the fact that I have been some sixteen years in this ministry among you, I feel that, in the providence of God, I can now with greater propriety leave the work here to other hands, and undertake what, for some time past, I have been contemplating, viz., a year's travel abroad for the benefit of my family and myself before I may be called to labor elsewhere in the Master's vineyard.

I therefore notify you that I shall ask leave of Presbytery to resign my pastoral charge, on or before the 30th of September next, and for that purpose shall seek to have a special meeting of Presbytery at such date in September as may be convenient for all concerned. As to the tender feelings connected with this step, I need not, at present, make any expression; and will only add that I wish it to be understood that the step is a final one, and that due notice will be given for the necessary action of the congregation in the matter."

Rules for Policemen.

No. 1. No policeman or special policeman shall when on duty, enter any hotel or saloon where either spirituous or fermented liquors are sold, except to quell a disturbance or to make an arrest, unless otherwise ordered by proper authority.

No. 2. No policeman or special policeman shall when on duty, drink any spirituous or fermented liquors.

No. 3. No policeman or special policeman shall at any time be intoxicated in the city of Plainfield.

No. 4. All policemen shall be vigilant, and diligent in quelling disturbances of the public peace, and in arresting and bringing before the City Judge or Mayor, as the case may be, all violators of City Ordinances, or the laws of the State.

No. 5. Trial of Alleged Incendiaries.

A few moments previous to the alarm of fire caused Saturday evening last by the discovery of flames issuing from the hay stored in a barn belonging to Mr. P. M. French, in the rear of French Bros. Mills, on Somerset street, Constable Peter Weaver, while standing near the entrance of the alley leading from Front street to the scene of fire, saw two young men, whom he recognized, pass through the alley into Front street. After the alarm of fire had been given, connecting the young men with the event, the Constable sought Capt. Chase, of the Police force, and made known to him his suspicions, which were that the parties in question were connected with the fire. The latter officer soon after arrested the suspected parties, who were Legrand Young and Isaac Vandeventer, who were committed to separate cells in the station house and remained there until the Monday following. Learning then that Corporation Counsel Marsh, whom the Capt. expected would conduct the prosecution of the case, had been retained by the parties themselves as Counsel, he, by advice of Mayor Maxson, telegraphed to County Prosecutor Wilson at Elizabeth to come to Plainfield and conduct the case, which was a charge of arson. That functionary replied that he would attend on Tuesday. Just previous to the opening of the case on that day, another telegram was received from Prosecutor Wilson stating that it would be impossible for him to be present in consequence of pressing business preparatory to his intended departure for Europe on Wednesday. The city then being without counsel in the matter, Mayor Maxson announced that he would act for the prosecution in the interest of the city. The evidence adduced at the trial following, which was conducted through Tuesday and closed on Wednesday, failed to prove anything against the prisoners as being directly concerned in the alleged attempt at incendiarism, and they were accordingly discharged from custody by Justice Wadsworth, before whom the trial took place. The justice, however, announced that he should send the papers in the case to Elizabeth, to await the pleasure of the County Prosecutor as to their future presentment to the Grand Jury. Immediately upon the discharge of the prisoners, Young was re-arrested by Constable Weaver on a warrant issued for his participation in a row at Greader's Saloon, North Plainfield, some months since. Corporation Counsel Marsh, who acted as Young's attorney in this case also, contested the Constable's right to arrest under the warrant as there was a copias issued subsequently against the same party. A hearing in the case was to have been had before Justice Horton at 4 p. m. on Wednesday, Young in the meantime being committed again to the station cell. Meantime Constable Weaver had telegraphed to Somerville for an officer with the necessary copias which was brought here by officer Crow, who took Young in charge and transported him to the Somerville Jail.

Information Wanted.

An official from the English Consul's office of New York city was in Plainfield this week, looking for a young Irish woman named Annie Kane who arrived at Castle Garden, March 28th last; and as the books of that institution shows came to this city to work for a family named Wiley, Willetts, Witts, or some such name. Inquiries of families of that name failed to elicit any information regarding the young woman. It was stated that she had fallen heir to property in the old country since her arrival here, and her whereabouts is desired by the English Consul.

The Council then adjourned.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

C. H. Mills residing on North avenue is the happy one—a boy—Sunday 15th.

Benj. H. Woodruff had one of his horses die on Monday last, from paralysis of the throat.

One of our residents has been the past week looking for a man who he thought wanted to see him. He found him on Tuesday afternoon.

Louisa A., youngest daughter of J. W. Cox, died on Monday last from cerebro spinal meningetis. This is the second child, within two years Mr. Cox has lost from that dread disease.

We notice a number of our young men considerably under the age of sixteen still smoking cigarettes. Some one must be defying the law in selling to them, as the law forbidding it went into effect July 4th.

David E. Miller, residing on Elmer street is the owner of a fine Night-Blooming Cereus plant. It bloomed on Tuesday evening with twelve flowers. It was admired by a great number of our residents.

We regret to learn of the probability of our streets being again in darkness after having been lighted a year or two; and regret still more to learn the cause is failure of our citizens to support the improvement.

Another one of our old residents gone. John Pierson, aged 65 years, died on Tuesday last after a short illness. He was taken on Saturday with a slight stroke of paralysis and never recovered from it. The deceased buried his wife about three months ago. He leaves a son and two daughters to mourn his loss. Interment in the old church yard.

Benj. J. Coles who has resided the past year in our town, was taken to Englewood, Bergen County, on Monday last by Overseer of Poor Samuel E. Young. Mr. Coles has been in a deranged state of mind for the past six months, though he has been considered harmless. On Sunday last he attempted to do bodily injury to several of our citizens. His native county is Bergen near Englewood.

The village Improvement Committee of the Lyceum have labored patiently and earnestly without compensation for the past two years, soliciting subscribers and collecting the subscriptions monthly for the public good, hoping their labor and annoyances connected therewith would become less irksome as the importance of the street lighting became more and more apparent to the people. We sincerely trust the citizens of Westfield will manifest sufficient public spirit to call at the post office and subscribe twenty-five to fifty cents per month for the support of this grand enterprise, and as the committee can hardly be expected to see that every individual subscriber is interviewed personally each month, the subscription could be just as easily paid the first of every month to Mr. Decker at the Post Office, thereby saving them trouble and expense. Attention to this subject is one means of preventing attempts either to incorporate or borough the township.

The annual excursion of the M. E. church Sunday School, occurred on Wednesday the 18th, to Fairmount Park. The train consisted of eight cars all well filled. It left Westfield at 7:45 a. m. and arrived at the Park at 10:30 a. m. After they had ate their luncheon, a large majority of the excursionists visited the Zoological Garden and spent the greater part of the day in viewing the rare animals and birds there confined in cages. Every body seemed well pleased with the choice of the excursion committee in selecting Fairmount Park for their annual excursion. It is a pity the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad Co. could not have furnished better cars for the excursion, they being all very low and badly ventilated. It was not so when the Central Railroad had control. The train left the Park at 4:45 p. m., arriving at Westfield at 7:20. Several of our young men were left, as they saw fit to visit the city, and not arriving in time to catch the train had to come on the regular line.

ARRANGING TO ENJOY THE DISCOMFORTS OF SUMMER AT HOME.

"Where you going to spend the summer," said a prominent citizen to another prominent citizen, as the two met at a free lunch counter one day this week, and prepared to tackle the lunch.

"Well, I have not made up my mind," said the second prominent citizen as he took a fork and speared a chip of liver sausage and laid it on a piece of rye bread and called for a schooner of beer. "I have been talking it over with my wife and we have about concluded to fix up the house as a summer resort and stay at home. She thinks she can take a hatchet and break some of the springs to the bed, and shorten up the bed slats so they will fall down, and put some old cabbage stumps in the mattress, and can make the bed about as uncomfortable as the one we had at a summer hotel last summer at four dollars a day apiece. But she has got to have a fire in the room all summer to make the room as hot as our hotel room was."

"That may do for a starter for a summer resort," said the other prominent citizen, "but she will want to tamper with the broiler so it will burn one side of a beefsteak and leave the other side raw, and she will have to instruct her cook how to make biscuit so hard outside that you can strike a flint on them, and soft inside."

"Oh, she can arrange that all right," said the other. "But she is going to have a hard time to train our servants to make a good imitation summer resort servants of them. I tell her she wants to train them so they will do nothing without being paid half a dollar. I have got the chambermaid so she will not make up the bed in my wife's room until all the other beds are made unless she gives the girl a quarter, and she won't carry out the slops until after dinner, and my wife says it seems real natural. I have instructed the man who answers the bell not to come up for three-quarters of an hour after we ring, and to always bring a pitcher of ice water, the way they do at summer hotels. Did you ever notice that a bell boy at a summer hotel always brings ice water when you ring? He does not seem to have a soul that soars above ice water and two shillings. He thinks that the chances are when a bell rings that the guest wants a pitcher of ice water, and he takes it along so he won't have to make another trip, and when he finds you want something else he looks mad and sets the pitcher down, and seems to think you are a fraud because the other nine pitchers he has brought you are enough. I am having a bar fixed up in the barn, and shall make the family pay two shillings a glass for lemonade that has a pint of water, a pinch of acid, a little sugar and a strawberry that looks as though it had been ground under a boot-heel. I thing I am getting the thing down fine. Come over and see us this summer from your hot and dusty residence on the West side, and we will make you tired in about two days."

"Oh, I am fixed. I am going to take a blanket and go out to the glue factory and lay off this summer and catch suckers in the Menominee, and fight mosquitoes," said the other citizen, "and charge myself four dollars a day. I tell you a man can summer-resort right here at home, and have all the discomforts and get just as mad as he can to go to Saratoga or Long Branch," and the two citizens went out picking the liver sausage out of their teeth, looking as though they had invented a new scheme.—Milwaukee Sun.

LIVE STOCK EXHIBITIONS.

During the coming three months, there will be continual exhibitions of our domestic animals at the numerous Fairs and Shows over the whole country. In order to judge fairly as to the merits of these, it is highly important that they should be exhibited in proper condition—that is, neither being too fat nor too lean. As fat hides many bad points of animals, they are very frequently exhibited by owners in a superabundant state of grossness, in order to cover faults, and blind the eyes of the examining judges. Here a distinction should be made in accordance with the different breeds of animals, and the purposes for which they are kept. The Jersey, Guernsey, Ayrshire, and Dutch (Holstein and Friesian) cows surpass in the dairy; these, then, should be judged mainly as to their merits in yielding an extra large quantity of milk or butter for the food consumed, while a harmonious form and fine points, though desirable to accompany these extra yields, should be a secondary consideration. As the Shorthorn cow is a generous purpose animal, its form and disposition to take on an excellent quality of flesh when dried off for fattening, should be equally considered with its dairy qualities; and the same is required of any other breed for which a general purpose is claimed, as is the case with the Devon, although a much smaller animal than the Shorthorn.—American Agriculturist for August.

SPARE THE TOADS.

There is no better abused, and probably no more useful creature in the garden and upon the farm than the toad. That apt simile, "like a toad under a harrow," tells the story of his wrongs. And now that our harrows are armed with steel teeth, and are supplemented with clod crushers and cultivators of various types for comminuting the soil, the sorrows of the toad are intensified, and he is threatened with extinction in all cultivated fields. Stay thy hand from slaughter, tiller of the soil. The toad is as useful in his place as the implements of tillage you drive over his back so thoughtlessly. "The jewel in his head" is not there, but in his capacious stomach, that always has room in it for one more bug, one more worm, that destroys the food of man. Watch his habits for a day, and observe the lightning thrusts of his tongue as he scoops in your enemies, and you will have a better appreciation of his work, and of his place in good husbandry. If your garden is without toads, you can afford to purchase them for stock. They will pay good dividends, as surely as superphosphate.—American Agriculturist for August.

To be able to bear provocation is an argument of great wisdom; and to forgive it, of great mind.

A man advertises "Hands wanted on boys' pants." Hands won't do any good out this way; it takes a leather strap.

"Yes," said a Vermont clergyman, "I consider it all right for a minister of the gospel to trade horses; but, as a matter of policy, he should trade with some one outside of his own congregation.

POPULAR SCIENCE CATECHISM.

What does this gentleman see?

An iron fire-escape, darling.

Of what use is it?

It enables poor iron-mongers to make a living.

How?

They sell the iron and also charge for putting it up.

Oh! but I thought it was a benefit to the house.

So it is.

How?

It is very ornamental.

Is it not useful?

Yes, for it might be sold to the junk men for three per cent. of its original cost.

But how does it act in case of fire?

It stays right where it is.

Cannot people climb down it?

They can try.

Is it difficult to climb down a fire escape?

Not more difficult than to turn a triple back somersault.

Then most people would fall if they tried?

Very probably.

How, then, would it enable them to escape being burned to death?

By enabling them to break their necks.

They can stay in the burning building.

Can't they do anything else?

Yes, they can jump from the window.

Then fire-escapes are really quite dangerous things?

Oh, no; no one is obliged to use them unless he chooses.

Then why do the poor builders put them up?

Because they are compelled by law.

Could the man who made the law climb down a fire escape?

I should like to see him try.

Has he ever tried?

No.

How do you know?

Because he still lives.

Then will you please tell me what earthly good is the fire-escape?

It is a comfort to the poor chuckleheads who live in the ninth story of a fire trap.

How a comfort?

They think they are safe.

But are they safe?

About as safe as the Dutchman who smokes in a powder magazine.

What should the poor chuckleheads do, then?

They should move out of the fire trap.

But will they move out?

Not immediately.

Why?

They are waiting for a fire.

Will they move out then?

Oh, yes!

Danger from Swings.

The following communication from Ex-Mayor Daniel K. Clymer embodies an important suggestion, which it would be well to heed:

EDITORS READING TIMES: Near to each end of a joist a hole is bored. Run a rope through each hole, and tie three knots on top of said joist to secure it to hold the swing seat. Then tie a knot in each rope three inches below the joist; this done, tie a strong safety rope under said knot; then lay this rope loosely over the top of the joist near the ends of the swing, so that when the rope breaks at the greatest point of friction and wear right under the joist, the safety rope lying idle over the joist top will at once catch and rescue the falling person from injury and even "DEATH."

The New Revision of the Old.

The Old Testament Revision Company have concluded their seventy-ninth session in the New Jerusalem Chamber at Westminster. They are making satisfactory progress with their work, the final review having extended so far as Exodus, xxvii. In the course of the current year there is a reasonable presumption that the revision will be completed and the new revised Bible in the hands of the people. This will be the second time that the Jerusalem Chamber will have been the scene of such work. It was here that King James version was translated. Judging from the acceptance which has been accorded to the New Testament revision, it will be many years before the new version will supplant the old.

should chance to meet we'll flirt
a little on the street. How sweet.

You may depend upon it that he is a good man whose intimate friends are all good.

No liberal man would impute a charge of unsteadiness to another for having changed his opinion.

How wise we are in thought! How weak in practice! Our very virtue, like our will, is nothing.

The highest luxury of which the human mind is sensible is to call smiles upon the face of misery.

True friends visit us in prosperity only when invited, but in adversity they come without invitation.

He who receives a good turn should never forget it; he who does one should never remember it.

MISCELLANEOUS.

OF ANOTHER AGE.

GRADUALLY SUPPLANTED BY A BETTER ARTICLE CERTAIN OLD THINGS ARE DONE AWAY.

In the general reception room of the Western Union Telegraph building on Broadway, New York, are exhibited the coarse, crude and clumsy instruments of the infancy of the telegraph. They are only relics now. More perfect machinery has superseded them.

Years ago what is now styled the old-fashioned porous plaster did some good service. There was then nothing better of the kind. Now all that is changed. Science and study has gone deeper into the secrets of medicine and produced BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which embodies all the excellencies thus far possible in an external remedy. The old plasters were slow—the Capcine is rapid; they were uncertain—the Capcine is sure. Cheaper articles bear similar names. Be careful, therefore, that some thrifty druggist does no deceive you. In the centre of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Price 25 cents.

POETRY.

HOLD YOUR HEAD UP LIKE A MAN.

If the stormy winds should rustle
While you tread the world's highway,
Still against them bravely tussle,
Hope and labor day by day;
Falter not, no matter whether
There is sunshine, storm or calm,
And in every kind of weather,
Hold your head up like a man.

If a brother should deceive you,
And should act a traitor's part,
Never let his treason grieve you,
Jog along with lightsome heart;
Fortune seldom follows fawning,
Boldness is the plan,
Hoping for a better dawning,
Hold your head up like a man.

Earth, though e'er so rich and mellow,
Yields not for the worthless drone,
But the bold and honest fellow,
He can shift and stand alone;
Spurn the knave of every nation,
Always do the best you can,
And no matter what your station,
Hold your head up like a man.

A WIFE'S MISTAKE.

Everyone said that Clara Johnson was foolishly fond of her husband. A nature as free from suspicion as hers proved an uncorrupted and incorruptible heart.

It was her custom in the long winter evenings, when her husband, deeply engaged in his business affairs, was absent, to prepare for his return a delicious little supper, and then quietly awaiting his return, dream over his last words of love; for Clara was a foolish little blonde, and certainly loved well, if not wisely.

One evening she was surprised by a visit from a maiden aunt, who was noted for gossip, and had heretofore been very sparing of her visits to this house of wedded bliss. Alas! what untold miseries have resulted from the venom of the human tongue. Clara's aunt on this occasion looked portentously dismal, and after a few commonplace remarks she launched at once into the subject-matter of her discourse.

'My dear, said she, 'I suppose you are totally unaware of what is going on in the theatrical world! You have not heard of the extraordinary beauty of Mademoiselle Vera, the leading star at the theatre?'

'Aunt, you know my husband's time is so occupied. I dearly love the theatre, but I love him better, and I can't enjoy myself when he is toiling for me.'

'But did you never think it strange,' said Aunt Liza, 'while Mr. Johnson is so immensely rich, he should be forced to work so hard? Why, another woman would be mad with suspicion.'

'Oh, Aunt Liza!' said the sensitive girl, as her eyes filled with tears, 'I could not suspect the husband I have married and loved.'

'Well, there are women and women, and you are one of the most trusting little dears I ever met. I trust you will never have any cause to repent of your fidelity.'

Clara sat by the window at her house in Windsor, gazing at the star-embossed heaven, with a vague feeling of uneasiness which she found impossible to reason away. There have been cases where loving and faithful wives were deceived by those whom they cherished as the incarnation of goodness.

She had read many a novel, with tearful eyes, wherein those who seemed best and noblest proved base and vile. She knew, in her short experience of life that men were lured away by influences that that they strived in vain to resist. All these thoughts came to her, and with them a firm resolve to question her husband that very evening. The hours passed away, seeming centuries to the poor young wife who was thus rudely awakened from her dream of bliss by the venom of a woman's tongue. At last, as the clock struck eleven, Clara heard the welcome step on the footpath, and was soon in her husband's arms. For an instant doubt and suspense were at an end. Gazing into that noble face, reading truth and love in those proud black eyes, it seemed impossible that such a one could harbor deceit or create misery.

Mr. Johnson consumed his supper with great relish. He was satisfied with the loving gaze of his wife, and spoke but little; but astonishment was in store for him.

'Herbert,' said Clara suddenly, nervously twining her hands, 'what is this business that detains you in the evening? Oh, do tell me! Let there be no more secrets between us, or I shall die.'

Mr. Johnson pushed his plate from him and regarded her attentively.

'My darling,' he asked simply, 'who has been here?'

'No one—that is, Aunt Liza,' answered Clara, wondering.

'But, Herbert, you have not answered me; you treat me with contempt.'

'Oh no, my dear!' said Mr. Johnson, quietly; 'not you. Come, love, you are overcome by nervousness and groundless suspicions. I promise you I will be more at home hereafter, and give to my little rosebud of a wife that love which her angelic disposition so justly deserves.'

There was something in his quiet, self-possessed manner that set Clara's tortured mind completely at ease.

She kissed her husband fervently, and said, 'Forgive me for doubting you, Herbert. It was my love caused my fear.'

'There is nothing to be forgiven my sweet wife. Heaven bless and keep you always.'

Clara's eyes filled with tears, and the reconciliation was complete.

A few days after this, Clara was at her favorite window, gazing out with rare pleasure at the handsome equipages which dashed past. It was a splendid winter day, and there was snow on the ground. Since the night of Aunt Liza's visit Clara had been supremely happy; her husband had spent his evenings regularly in her company, and had once even taken her to the very theatre spoke of by her aunt.

True, she had noticed the lovely Mademoiselle Vera, and had imagined her attentions were rather plainly addressed to her husband; but she had determined to banish suspicion for ever. It was no easy task, for frankness was one of the chief virtues in her lovely character. Absorbed in her pleasant reverie, she had not noticed the approach of a maid, who had handed her a letter. A vague presentiment of evil came over her as she opened it.

It was from Aunt Liza, and ran as follows:

'MY DEAR NIECE:—I regret exceedingly the position I am placed in, but feel bound under the circumstances to expose your husband's duplicity. I saw him unobserved, this forenoon, conversing in the lobby of the theatre with Mademoiselle Vera. I overheard enough to convince me that he is going to attend the performance to-night. He is cruelly deceiving you, and I strongly advise you to unmask his villainy and seperate from him. Affectionately yours,

AUNT LIZA.'

Clara crushed the letter in her hand, and sat there looking at the fast falling snow, it was growing dark and he would soon be here. And then? Would she show him the letter and demand an ex*planation? No. It would be met by* equivocal replies; he was a master in the art of deception; but that night would end it forever. As she thought this, she felt a dull pain at her heart—and the evening grew deeper.

'Why, little wife, are you sitting alone in the gloaming?' It was Herbert's cheery voice; he had entered unperceived.

'Herbert!'—the tone was forced and hollow—'are you going out to-night?'

'Why, yes, my dear—I might have told you this morning. I have an important engagement. It will not be long now, pet wife!'

What did he mean? He could not see the weird beauty of that deadly-pale face as she bade him farewell. It was a gala night at the theatre. The benefit of Mademoiselle Vera, the fame of whose beauty and talent was whispered, had drawn a crowded audience; and boxes, orchestra and gallery presented an animated scene. Where was one there, however, whose heart was aching with pain.

Yes, Mademoiselle Vera was beautiful; and there was no mistaking the fervent admiration with which she was regarded by all, but especially by the solitary occupant of one of the boxes; and this person recognized as her husband. How changed he looked!

The contamination of that woman's presence seemed to infect him with fever; there was unnatural brilliancy in his splendid eyes, notwithstanding which his face looked worn and haggard. He was never so at home. The curtain fell at last, and tumultuous applause brought Mademoiselle Vera before it. She was greeted with flowers and cheers, which were treated by the pampered beauty with proud indifference, till at last a boquet more elegant than the rest fell at her feet. She gave a glance at one of the boxes, kissed her hand to the occupant and withdrew.

Clara felt the building swim round before her, but by a strong effort she controlled herself, and reached the entrance in safety. Shutting herself in her carriage, she waited patiently, much to the astonishment of her coachman, an un*usually stolid individual, quite averse to* adventures. Half an hour afterwards he received the welcome order to drive home. Clara had seen her husband emerge from the stage entrance with Mademoiselle Vera. A deadly pallor passed over her countenance, and she fainted. On arriving at home Clara proceeded to the drawing room. As she opened the door a cry of astonishment burst from her lips.

Mr. Johnson was seated in an easy chair, reading. He looked up good-humoredly, and said, 'Turn about is fair play; where has my pet wife been?'

Clara sat down wearily.

'Herbert, you can deceive me no longer. I was at the theatre to-night. I saw you, and know all.'

'I was not at the theatre to-night, Clara. I do not like aunt Liza; she has been here again.'

'Herbert, am I mad? I saw you, and —that woman.'

Mr. Johnson advanced and took his wife's hand in his.

'My pet wife,' he said quietly, 'the person you saw to-night at the theatre is my twin brother. Years ago he was obliged to leave the country on account of his participation in a mad escapade. Notwithstanding a long career of profligacy, I loved this erring brother of mine. I accumulated money by additional labor without impairing that fortune which, in event of my demise, of right belongs to you. I have finally paid his debts, and summoned him back to his native land. He is improved but little, I am sorry to say, but his destiny is in his own hands, and he can make or mar it as he chooses. And now my dear, are you satisfied?'

"Oh, Herbert, darling!—can you forgive me, wretch that I have been?"

"On one condition, Clara,' said Mr. Johnson smiling "that you will never listen to Aunt Liza again."

THE POWER OF LOVE.

While on their way home from a mite society the other night old neighbor Wickle and wife became somewhat displeased.

"I'm not going with you any more, Samuel," said Mrs. Wickle. "You are too old a man to cut up the way you did to-night. The idea of any old man who has the rheumatism so bad that he can't put his socks on mornings, going to a mite meeting and cavorting and romping as you have done to-night. I say it's a shame."

"I may have rheumatism," said the old man, "but I haven't got dyspepsia. I don't growl and snap at everybody. You have been growing worse for the last ten years. If you didn't have me to pick at I believe you would die."

"I won't walk with a man that acts like a rhinoceros."

"How does a rhinoceros act?" asked the old man, thinking that he would catch her on natural history.

"Acts like a fool, that's how he acts," and Mrs. Wickle walked rapidly away, leaving the old man several paces behind. He finally caught up just as a young man came walking along.

"You are walking pretty fast," said the old gentleman.

His wife didn't say anything.

"It's clouding up," he remarked; "it must be going to rain."

The old lady made no reply, but the young man took in the situation.

"You are a villian!" he exclaimed, addressing Mr. Wickle. "What do you mean by attempting to thrust your company upon a lady who does not want you? It is becoming too frequent for ladies to be insulted on the street by loafers. Get back."

The man struck at Wickle. The old lady clubbed her umbrella, and exclaiming, "that's my husband," gave the young man a very undignified blow.

The old man, encouraged by his wife's strike for the union, jumped on the young man and held him while the rattling ribs of the umbrella fell on the youth's head with a sound like the falling hailstones.

"Samuel, no one can break up your domestic felicity," said his wife after the battle.

"No, sir," said the old man. "When a man tries to destroy the domestic happiness of my household he catches my consolidated power of wrath."

MORALITIES.

When you introduce a moral lesson let it be brief.

Affliction, like the iron smith, shapes as it strikes.

It is a crime to consider any wickedness a sign of ability.

If you would create something, you must be something.

It is opinion that wins battles, and it is opinion that loses them.

That is the bitterest of all—to wear the yoke of your own wrong doing.

We never deceive for a good purpose. Knavery adds malice to falsehood.

He that will lose his friend for a jest deserves to die a beggar by the bargain.

There is no greater delight than to be conscious of sincerity and self-examination.

Flowers are the sweetest things that God ever made and forgot to put soul into.

Good is never more effectually performed than when it is produced by slow degrees.

Whatever is becoming is honest and whatever is honest must always be becoming.

I was never afraid of failure, for I would sooner fail than not be among the greatest.

The history of all the world teaches us that immoral means will never intercept good ends.

It is better to believe that a man does possess good qualities than to assert that he does not.

What is defeat? Nothing but educa*tion; nothing but the fire step to some*thing better.

Nature never sends a great man into the planet without confiding the secret to another soul.

The quality of books in a library is often a cloud of witnesses of the ignorance of the owner.

The light of friendship is the light of phosphorous—seen plainest when all around is dark.

He is truly great that is little in himself, and that maketh no account of any height of honors.

Envy is a passion so full of cowardice and shame, that nobody ever had the confidence to even own it.

*Common sense does not ask an impos*sible chess board, but takes the one before it plays the game.

Choose always the way that seems the best, however rough it may be. Custom will render it easy and agreeable.

If you boast of a contempt for the world, avoid getting into debt. It is giving to gnats the fangs of vipers.

Charity is a virtue of the heart, not of the hands, and gifts and alms are the expressions, not the essence of this virtue.

The temperate are the most truly luxurious. By abstaining from most things, *it is surprising how many things we en*joy.

A loving act does more good than a fiery exhortation. What mankind needs is not more good talkers, but more good Samaritans.

The work an unknown good man has done is like a vein of water flowing hidden under-ground, secretly making the ground green.

Everything lives, flourishes and decays, everything dies, but nothing is lost, for the great principle in life only changes its form, and the destruction of one genera*tion is the vivification of the next.*

BETTER CALL HER MARY.

A real homely girl, slow of speech, named Mary, had been called 'Beauty' by her associates, and the name stuck to her. On one occasion she was met by an old lady who did not know her, and the following conversation ensued:

'Good-morning, my girl,' said the old lady.

'Good-morning.'

'What is your name, my girl?'

'Well, mum,' drawled the girl, 'my name is Mary, but they call me 'Beauty.'

'Indeed?' replied the old lady, looking at her critically; 'I think they had better call you 'Mary.''

REASONS FOR PAWNING HIS WATCH.

The other day a Detroit pawn-broker received a call from a young man with the tan and freckles of the country on his face and nose, and an old-fashioned bull's-eye watch in his hand. "Vhere you lif?" asked the broker. "Oh, out here a few miles." "Vhere you got dot vatch?" "It used to be dad's, but he gave it to me." The broker looked him all over with suspicious glances, and asked and received his name, and then added: "Vhy you vhants to pawn dot vatch, eh?" "Well, I needed a little money." "Dot looks suspicious to me, und I guess I call der bolece." "Suspicious! Police!" repeated the young man. "Say, mister, if you don't know the difference between a thief selling his plunder and a young man in town with his gal, and that gal wanting peanuts and candy and sody water and street car rides until she's cleaned him out of his last cent, you'd better go and start a sheep ranch." "Oh, dot vhas it, eh? Vhell, I gif you tree dollar. Dot makes it all aah blain as der face on my nose, und I hope you haf some goot times. Here—two und one make tree."

HE KNEW HIM.

Uncle Hank Allen was perhaps the smoothest and most accomplished liar in central New York. Why the old man's lies were so smooth, so artistic, that, while listening to them, you imagined you were listening to Elder Cleveland's Bible stories. One day we were all talking about potato bugs in Uncle Hank's grocery, which was a sort of village farmers' club. Old Hank scratched his head thoughtfully and remarked: "Gentlemen, you don't any of you appear to know anything about the ravenous nature of them potater bugs. You may call me a liar, but I've had potater bugs walk right into my kitchen and yank red-hot potaters right out of the oven. Waiting around the potater patch for the second crop!" exclaimed Uncle Hank with a sneer. "Waiting? Why, confound your eyes, I was up at Townsend's store yesterday, and I saw potater bugs up there looking over Townsend's books to see who had bought seed potatoes for next year. I did, by gosh!" The whole grocery was still when Uncle Hank finished. You could have heard a pin drop. Final*ly a long, lean man from Woodman's* Pond raised himself up near the door. He was evidently a new-comer, and was not acquainted with Mr. Allen. Pointing his long finger at Uncle Hank he exclaimed: "You are a liar!" Uncle Hank looked over his glasses at the stranger long and earnestly. Then holding out his hand he inquired with a puzzled look: "When did you get acquainted with me?"

THE WEATHER.

WHAT THE BAROMETER KNOWS ABOUT IT.

Higher barometer means that the mercury is raising and lower that it is falling.

Higher pressure is synonymous with higher barometer, and lower pressure with lower barometer. In case of a higher barometer it indicates a colder and contracting atmosphere and consequently a diminution of moisture.

A lower barometer indicates an expand*ing atmosphere with greater capacity for* holding moisture.

In case of rising barometer it indicates a decrease of moisture and diminishes the liability for rain.

A falling barometer indicates an increased amount of moisture and greater liability for rain, and with it we have an increased cloudiness.

When the barometer rises in cloudy weather it is generally an indication that the clouds will break and be followed by fair weather.

A sudden change in the barometer, either rising or falling, is a fair indication of approaching high winds.

At sunset if the sun goes down behind or is obscured by a bank of clouds with a falling barometer, rain will follow in nineteen cases out of twenty on the succeeding day. If the sun be obscured at its setting by clouds, with a rising barometer and cooler winds, the chances are nineteen to twenty no rain will fall on the succeeding day.

There are three fair weather sunsets—the red, yellow and green. Green and red are exceptional, the green more so than the red.

It will seldom happen that we will have a rainfall on a day succeeding one on which any of the three above colors are dominant at sunset the day before.

It occasionally happens, however, that rain will fall when no indications whatever on the preceding day would lead one to expect it.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

PUBLIC PLUNDER.

The resolution of the Pennsylvania Republican State Convention advocating the continued raising of over a hundred million dollars surplus revenue each year, for the professed purpose of dividing it among the States, does not elicit much approval outside of the partisan financiers in Philadelphia who gave the idea birth.

Honest men look upon such a scheme with well grounded suspicion.

They have just cause therefor.

It would be a mine of wealth to thousands of political thieves throughout the land, who are, doubtless, already rubbing their hands with delight at the bare mention of the project.

Unquestionably scores of graduates of the Pennsylvania "addition, division and silence" school of politics stand ready and eager to undertake the job of annually cleaning out encumbered treasury vaults, and are artful enough to invent plausible reasons for the granting of such a magnificent opportunity to pocket the pickings.

The people of this country, on whom must fall the enormous cost, have no relish for a continuance of that kind of work.

Political jobbery is public robbery.

It would be better and cheaper to build additional State Prisons.

There is no valid reason why a dollar of surplus revenue should be raised.

It is a temptation for corrupt expenditure.

Over and above the realization of sufficient money to meet the interest on and moderately reduce the principal of the public debt, to provide for pension charges, and all the legitimate expenses of a government economically and honestly administered, every dollar ought to remain, where it rightfully belongs, in possession of the tax-payers.

To that, every sensible and honest citizen, whether Republican or Democrat, must accord assent.

The harvest of plunder has been abundant.

It is time to sow different seed and garner the substantial riches of integrity.

ARE THEY NOT REASONABLE?

The following are the moderate claims of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers:

1. Believing that man's physical and mental welfare requires that at least one day in seven be accorded him for rest and recreation, we ask for the total abolition of Sunday work as a compulsory duty, unless compensated as extra service.

2. That eight hours shall constitute a regular day's work, and seven hours a regular night's work, and that both sexes shall receive equal pay for equal work.

3. That a universal increase of fifteen per cent. on all salaries be made.

A GUN OF WONDERFUL POWER.

READING, Penn., July 24.—The Lyman-Haskill multicharge gun, a weapon that is designed to create wonders in modern warfare, was finished at the Scott Foundry, in this city, to-day, and to-morrow morning it will be shipped to New York and taken to Sandy Hook, where it will be tested in the presence of leading army and naval officers of this and other countries. Congress has made a special appropriation for this purpose and also appointed a board of experts who are to make a report of the results of the test. It is claimed that the gun will hurl a heavier projectile a longer distance than any other class of cannon. Ever since the invention of cannon as a means of warfare they have been constructed upon one principle, all the powder being in the breech. J. R. Haskill, the inventor of the present gun, has introduced an entirely new plan. An ordinary cannon of the same size contains about 35 pounds of power. Mr. Haskill's contains 130 pounds, distributed as follows: 18 pounds in the breech and 28 pounds in each of four capacious "pockets" underneath the gun. It is claimed that as the force of this powder is concentrated gradually upon the projectile, it is given greater force and velocity. The gun weighs 25 tons, is 25 feet long, and will shoot through a solid piece of iron 24 inches thick. It will carry a projectile from 12 to 15 miles, and is intended to revolutionize modern warfare, as even iron vessels can hardly withstand the blows of its projectiles. It has been constructed at a cost of $50,000. A company with a capital of $10,000,000 has been organized for its manufacture. Ex-Governor Cornell and ex-Senator Platt are among those interested. If the gun proves a success it is expected that the Government will adopt it as a part of the ordnance for sea-coast and naval defense.

The Ocean County Democrat has again changed proprietorship, W. A. Gwynne, editor the past three years, having sold out to Mr. Charles S. Haslett, of Cumberland county.

Aristocracy seeks to give blood superior rank and wealth special privileges. Democracy honors men for their own real personal worth, not that of ancestors, and would make wealth the reward for honest labor, not its austere master.

The Democratic party has battled four score years against arbitrary enactments, and the conferring of exclusive favors on the few at the expense and to the detriment of the many. The grand old party of Jefferson and Jackson is still in fighting trim.

Any man has the right to do what he pleases with his own justly acquired money, subject to the limitations of law, but he has no right to squander a cent belonging to others, and this applies to every position of trust, whether public or private, political or otherwise.

Some of the conspirators engaged in carrying Indiana against the Democratic candidate for President in 1880, by ways that were dark and means that were foul, admit their guilt, and show, to say the least, that certain modern honorables were in shocking bad company. Dishonesty like murder will out.

A bevy of Republican politicians in Philadelphia stole the roof off the Alms House and sold it for old copper. Now another crowd, assuming to themselves the virtuous title of "Better Element," want the people of New Jersey and all the other States to pay exorbitant and unending taxes, in order that elementary patriots may run away with the surplus collection. Of the two, the copper roof speculators are certainly the most modest and least expensive.

FINE BICYCLE RIDING.

E. H. Carson, of East Rochester, N. H. has accomplished the remarkable feat of riding down Mount Washington on a bicycle. He went up the mountain from Gorham. His machine was the American Star Bicycle, whose peculiarity consists in the small wheel being placed in front of the large one. After resting some time upon the summit he started down, while the guests at the Summit House held their breath in fear for his safety as he wheeled rapidly round the steep bend just below the house. Another sharp turn near the great gulf was safely passed, and the machine was behaving beautifully, the precedence of the small wheel preventing any liability of "headers," and also serving as a brace in case of obstructions. The half-way house was soon gained, and the rider breathed more freely. The remainder of the journey was made in perfect safety. The Glen was reached at about four o'clock, the descent having been accomplished in about an hour and fifty minutes.

STATE ITEMS.

The directors of the Warren County Fair Grounds, at Belvidere, have decided to dispose of their property at public sale.

There are symptoms of a general strike in the silk industry at Paterson. A number of secret meetings of operators were in progress Wednesday night of last week.

The tomato blight, the bane of tomato growers, has appeared in some patches in Salem county. The blight is caused by a parasite with a habit similar to the squash boar.

A girl at Cape May playfully threw sand into the eyes of a young man who scrutinized her bathing attire too closely, and there is danger that he will never look at anything again.

A Jamesburg bar-keeper thrust his finger into the neck of a newly-opened bottle of ginger ale in order to prevent the liquid from escaping, and the bottle had to be broken with a hatchet in order to release his finger.

Mrs. John Sarius, of Vernon, Sussex county, while picking berries on the Pochuck mountain, captured a rattlesnake five feet long and having ten rattles, by placing a split stick around its neck and pinning it to the ground.

A Somerset county farmer, of Middlebush, named Sullivan, and his wife, aged 60 years, have been committed to jail at Somerville upon confession of having fired their house and barn to obtain the insurance money, amounting to $1,600.

Maria Arber, a prisoner employed in the kitchen of the Middlesex County Jail, at New Brunswick, confessed that she gave the keys to Charles Raymond, the train robber, by which he made his escape from jail recently. She said Raymond gave her no reward for aiding him to escape.

Maurice J. Power has received the contract for the erection of the Monmouth battle monument at Freehold at $40,000. Of this amount $20,000 was appropriated by Congress, $10,000 by the State, and $10,000 was contributed by individuals. The monument is to be completed so as to be dedicated on the 28th of June, 1884, the next anniversary of the battle.

Last Friday as Ludwig Lutz, who lives near Elizabeth, was working on the Spencer farm on First avenue, mowing with another man, he stooped down for some purpose, and as he did so his companion swung his scythe and the point struck Lutz in the right eye. The blade penetrated the upper eyelid and cut open the ball of the eye, completely destroying it. The unfortunate man has a wife and several children.

GLEANINGS.

A Texan paper advocates holding the next Democratic National Convention in Galveston, pleading that for nearly a quarter of a century no party has held a National Convention in a Southern city.

There are now in England and Wales between 300,000 and 400,000 women who possess the franchise—that is to say, one woman to every seven men. More than 108,000 women possess, as householders, the municipal franchise. The number of women land-owners in England and Wales is 37,806.

An addition has recently been made by Judge Snell, of the Washington Police Court, to the body of bicycle law, and in this case the rights of pedestrians were upheld. The broad streets and smooth asphalt pavements of the capital have brought the bicycle into general use there. A bicycler, while speeding at the rate of fifteen miles an hour, struck and knocked down an elderly physician, who was standing in front of his residence engaged in conversation with a friend. The old gentleman was severely hurt. Judge Snell fined the bicycler $20, with the alternative of going to jail for thirty days, and the offender was committed because he could not pay the fine. In announcing his decision the Judge referred to an English case in which a bicycle was held, on appeal, to be a carriage, and it was plain that he would, in cases that might thereafter come before him, rule in accordance with this view. Washington bicyclers ought not to complain if they are allowed all the privileges which are accorded to four-wheeled vehicles drawn by animals.

The "Poison Ivy," also called "Poison Oak," and in some localities known as "Mercury," is often the cause of great distress. The vine is abundant all over the country, one form being low, running along on banks and rambling over stone walls. Another form climbs the highest trees, clinging to the bark by its many rootlets. It is often confounded with the Virginia Creeper; indeed, we have known it to be planted as an ornamental vine, it having been mistaken for that. The two are readily told apart, the Virginia Creeper having its dark-green, shiny leaves five-parted, while the light-green leaves of the poison vine are three-parted. The Poison Ivy is so very abundant, that were all equally susceptible to its influence, we should hear much more of its effects than we do at present. With many, the poison produces only a slight eruption on the skin and an intense itching. Others are more seriously affected, and the face swells up to such an extent that the features are hardly visible. Nearly every locality has its popular remedies for the poison, and new ones are frequently proposed. As a general thing, most cases are relieved by keeping the bowels open by the use of salts, and washing the eruptions with a strong solution of sugar of lead. The latest remedy, which is now going the rounds, is to bathe the affected parts with lime water, applied as hot as it can be borne. This is simple, the remedy is usually at hand, and is worth trying, as other alkaline washes have been found useful. No harm can result.—American Agriculturist for August.

COMMUNICATED.

For "The Constitutionalist."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—My attention has been called to the fact that the account of "The Trial of Alleged Incendiaries" appearing in your last issue conveys, in some respects, an erroneous impression respecting the nature of the proceedings. The suggestion is therein made that the city was prosecuting the defendants Young and Van Deventer, and that the Corporation Counsel should have represented the city in such prosecution.

The facts are that it was a State, and not a city prosecution, and hence, it was, that the City Judge referred the matter to a justice of the peace; the crime charged was arson, ranking in turpitude next to murder. To proceed against so high a crime under city law would be palpably absurd. The Corporation Counsel of Plainfield had no more to do with the prosecution of that crime than had the Corporation Counsel of Rahway or Elizabeth. The law has not left the prosecution of violators of the State laws to city officials, but has expressly cast the duty of attending to the arrest, detection and prosecution of such offenders upon the Prosecutor of the Pleas, and the same law provides for the payment of expenses incurred by him in the performance of that duty. It is true that the city has an interest in the detection and punishment of criminals, but so has every individual citizen, and both, and the whole people find their proper representative is the Prosecutor, who from the moment that crime is committed until the penalty is pronounced, with the exception of the Attorney General, is the sole prosecuting officer authorized by law. Nothing but confusion and embarrassment could result from changing this order of things, and the County Prosecutor would lose one of his best helps in securing the conviction of criminals.

In the proceedings against Young and Van Deventer by the State on the charge of arson, I had no duty and no right to represent the State, unless specially engaged; in other words, my relation to the case was no different from that of any other private lawyer.

Not only is it the uniform practice in cities of this State for city attorneys to defend persons accused of crime, when their services are requested, but the idea that there can be any, even the remotest, question of propriety or good taste involved, is scouted by bench and bar alike. I have taken the trouble to verify this view by personally interrogating most of the practicing lawyers (not city officials) of this city, and many more in other cities, including Corporation Counsel Bergen and R. V. Lindabury, Esq., of Elizabeth, all of whom without exception concurred fully in the view last stated.

Very Respectfully,
CRAIG A. MARSH.

CITY DEPARTMENT.

J. A. DEMAREST, - - - City Editor.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF THE STATE, THE COUNTY AND THE CITY, AND HAS THE LARGEST CIRCULATION OF ANY PAPER IN UNION COUNTY.

MASHED dude is the latest color. It is a silky green.

VINE street, North Plainfield, is being re-graded by Mr. John Whitlock.

THE moon is "on the wane," and the street lamps are once more lighted.

FRESCOERS are to re-decorate the interior of the Crescent avenue church.

ATTENTION is directed to advertisement in another column, Washington Rock property for sale.

THE choice place for Summer coasting, with the boys, at present, is the roof of the new School house.

ON our second page will be noticed Ettall's announcement of a special sale of white goods. Read what is offered.

IN spite of the shower of Sunday afternoon last, services by the Rev. Dr. Walker in the evening, were largely attended.

EPISCOPAL services will be held next Sunday morning at 10.30 o'clock in the Netherwood Union Chapel, the Rev. H. H. Cole of Elizabeth, officiating.

THE well-known and valuable mare "Becky," owned by Mr. Wm. Moore, of this city, died suddenly a few days since. Death was caused by strangulation in consequence of eating green oats.

CORPORATION Counsel Marsh desires room in this issue to tell his side of a little story mentioned in our last issue.—We were not aware at the time of writing the article that we had hurt any one.

HE slipped quietly in at the door, but catching sight of an inquiring face over the stair rail, said: 'Sorry so late, my dear; couldn' get a car before.' 'So the cars were full, too,' said the lady, and further remarks were unnecessary.

CURIOUSLY inclined commuters have been taking a tally of the feelings of passengers on the Central N. J. R. R., regarding the strike of the telegraphers. The result is an almost unanimous expression of sympathy with the operators.

MR. SAMUEL Robinson captured a fine specimen of the horned owl species in his back yard, corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street, a few nights since. This is the second of this species of bird, captured in the heart of this city within a week.

THE man has not yet been discovered who can take off his pantaloons at night without tumbling everything out of the pockets. Yet a woman will go through those same pantaloons in the morning so noiselessly that even the mice know nothing about it.

TITSWORTH'S "Sure Cure" for Malaria that is being widely introduced through the country, is increasing in sale in Plainfield where it has been used by many of our residents with universal success. We are told it will arrest the disease in 12 hours.

MRS. FINE, Milliner and Miss Butts, Dressmaker, who have occupied the old Stillman homestead the past three years, are obliged to remove in consequence of the erection of the Music Hall. They have, however, found comfortable quarters in the Dewey property, corner of Front street and Central avenue, opposite the First Baptist church, where they will be pleased to see their old friends and customers.

THE Newark city tax board and county board of assessors have fixed the tax rate for 1883. The county rate was placed at 68 cents and the city rate at $1 38, a total for Newark of $2.06 which is a reduction from last year's rate—$2.44—or 38 cents on the $100. The decrease is due to increased valuation of nearly $6,000,000 in the county (of which nearly $4,000,000 represents an advance in Newark property), in the absence of a state tax, reductions in the appropriations and other causes.

A SINGULAR and destructive worm to grape vines has made its appearance in this section. The worm is about two inches and a half in length, and a third of an inch in thickness. The color resembles the under side of a grape leaf. The head is quite large in proportion to the body and contains a large, bright eye set in the forehead. The worm has fourteen very short feet, and walks backward, the tail being erected and having the intelligent motions of a head. It also has a number of small white points sticking out from its body and sides. The name of the creature is the Hog-caterpillar of the vine, its scientific name being Chaerocampapampinatrix. It has an enemy in a tiny Ichneumon fly, a species of Microgaster, which lays its eggs on the caterpillar, the worms from which, when hatched, instantly commence boring through the caterpillar's skin. The effect of this is that the great Vine Caterpillar dies of exhaustion. But for this little fly, the ravages of the worm would be so great that the grape would become a rarity.

A Health Organ.

Dio Lewis is out with No. I, of a monthly of his own, that has for its aim to popularize Sanitary Science. What, and how, to cook, and eat, and wear, are but a few of the subjects treated, and they are made as simple and interesting (if not fascinating) by the way they are treated, as can be desired.

New Jersey State Dental Society.

The thirteenth annual session of the New Jersey Dental Society was opened on Tuesday at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, by the meeting of the different committees and Board of Examiners. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. H. E. Bunting, Sr., Newark; Vice President, Dr. J. W. Scarborough, Lambertville; Secretary, Dr. C. A. Meeker, Newark; Treasurer, Dr. George C. Brown, Elizabeth; Executive Committee, Drs. G. Carleton Brown, Elizabeth; W. Price Richards, Orange; C. A. Timme, Hoboken; G. M. Merrit, Jersey City.

Board of Examiners—Drs. J. Hayhurst, Lambertville; C. W. Meloney, Camden; F. C. Barlow, Jersey City; F. A. Levy, Orange; J. G. Palmer, New Brunswick.

Out On A Fly.

Mr. Bob Flynn was arrested yesterday morning for his part in a general disturbance at the corner of Fourth street and Madison avenue, last Monday evening. The City Judge fined Bob $25, and relegated him to the County Jail for thirty days—but while Captain Chase waited outside the Flynn Mansion for Robert to change his clothes, the latter skipped for parts unknown.

The women, also brought before the Court for its mercy and justice, were dealt with accordingly. One got 30 days—the trial of the other was set down for Tuesday next.

A Great Improvement.

Mr. D. W. Rogers of this city is the inventor and patentee of a refrigerator for fruits, berries &c., that combines simplicity, practicability and efficiency in a way that will at once commend it to all. Mr. A. D. Godown is manufacturing these articles for the inventor, and testifies as a practical man unconditionally in favor of the improvements they contain. The fruit is protected from direct contact with the air, yet at the same time through openings the warm air is excluded and the continuous circulation kept up that is so necessary to preserve the flavor of strawberries and other fruits. The same principle is also used in the construction of refrigerators for corn beef or other material in a brine or pickle.

A Chance for Old Maids.

The Junior Bachelors' Social Club, composed of young men without wives, in this city and North Plainfield, will hold a picnic in Wooden's Grove, Thursday, August 30th, that promises to be a big affair.

Games to Come Off.

The Legal Club of Newark will play the Crescents on the grounds of the latter, in this city, to-morrow afternoon. A return game between the Elizabeth Athletics and the Crescents will take place at Elizabeth next Wednesday.

Revengeful Tramps.

Last Monday tramps were ordered off the premises of L. M. Rocap, who resides on Front street, in the outskirts of the city. The next morning a valuable horse was found dead in its stall in Mr. R.'s barn. The tramps had poisoned the animal.

Squealing Over a Horse Trade.

The principals in a horse trade met in court last Friday, and laid before a jury both sides of their case wherein she claimed that the two he's had misrepresented the condition of the animal they delivered. Corp. Counsel Marsh appeared for the plaintiff, and the jury awarded her damages to the amount of twenty-eight dollars and costs. The defendants advised by their counsel, Foster Voorhees of Elizabeth, settled forthwith.

Delicious Ice Cream.

The employees of this office were one day last week regaled with a generous quantity of delicious Ice Cream from the establishment of John Dalbert, No. 28 North Avenue, to which they did ample justice and return thanks to the donor. We can safely assert that the Cream manufactured by Mr. D. is of a superior and pure quality, and the increased business of his establishment since he opened on North avenue, attests to the fact that the public are aware of its excellence.

Miss Sullivan Against Mr. Holmes, Again.

The case of the State vs. J. B. Holmes was heard before Justice Horton of North Plainfield, Monday, and the accused held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. The charge was perjury brought by the nominal "wife" of the defendant—it being claimed by her that in denying under oath at a past trial his relations with her, he had perjured himself. Prosecutor John D. Bartine appeared for the State, and His Honor, Mayor Maxson, looked after the interests of Mister Holmes.

The Netherwood's Success.

The lower-priced rooms at the Hotel Netherwood are all occupied, and but a few of the more expensive remain to be had. The success of the new proprietor has been remarkable, and hotel men all over the county who looked upon The Netherwood as a failure, can hardly believe in half the facts. The dining room that was supposed to be larger than would ever be necessary, is at present over crowded, with thirty-five tables in use. Music and dancing has become a regular feature of at least two evenings each week.

Gazelle Hose Boy's Picnic.

During Thursday afternoon and evening of last week, Wooden's Grove was again the scene of life and activity, and the First Annual Picnic of Gazelle Hose Co., was accomplished with wonderful success and satisfaction. The music by Prof. Frazee was first-class in every respect; and the Grand March that opened the evening's dance surpassed many another and was decidedly creditable to the leader and Floor Manager, Mr. T. F. Wright. The General Director of the affair was Mr. Ed. B. Daly, and the Assistant floor managers were Messrs. C. Johnson and Edw. Searing. To the gentlemen composing the Committee of Arrangements, however, must be given great praise for the general success of the event, the entire good order that prevailed, and the complete gratification of all—they were Messrs. E. Searing, W. Miller, G. Zelat, M. Carty and L. Beekman.

Personalia.

Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Peck are summering as usual at Milford, Conn.

"Dr." Wm. H. Voorhees and family are summering at The Victoria, Asbury Park.

Jasper Wilson, son of ex-Street Commissioner Wilson, has arrived at Glasgow on his European trip.

A recent letter from County Clerk Vosseller, locates him at Leroy, Minn. His health is improved.

Johnston Cornish, of Washington, N. J., of organ fame notoriety, made a pleasant call at this office on Thursday.

Captain Shepherd, the senior member of the late firm of Shepherd, Johnson & Godown, will leave this city in a few days for Savannah, Ga., to superintend the erection of a mansion for one of the Southern railway magnates.

The relatives and many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John K. VanArsdale, deeply sympathize with that bereaved couple in the sudden loss of their youngest child and only boy, during Monday last. Death occurred from gastric fever, almost without a warning, and when the little one was with its mother enjoying the summer at East Stroudsburg, Pa. The funeral took place from the residence of the parents, corner of Grove street and Park avenue, North Plainfield, Wednesday afternoon.

"Let's See—What's Your Name."

In nine cases out of ten when a man has to ask that question he would rather see his last cent roll down a crack than do it, but it is asked every day in banks and other business places and—printing offices. A man comes into the office and the printer smiles, says—"Well, old fellow, how are you?" and holds out his hand for a shake. The man has done business there often, and the printer knows him like a book.

But pretty soon the man asks to have something done which requires a knowledge of his name by the printer, and the latter finds himself stuck. The cold chills begin to run down his back, and he feels as though he would like to be alone a minute so he could kick himself. He would know the name if he were to see it, and he begins to go through the books in the hope of coming across it, but it eludes him every time, and finally in desperation, he turns around with a sheepish look on his face and says: "Let's see—what's your name?" Ever afterwards there is a certain degree of coldness between those two men. But some business men are sharp. When they get stuck on a name they will ask the customer to "please spell it," at the same time remarking that they believe it is spelt wrong on the books. If the man happens to spell "S-m-i-t-h," the questioner feels bad, but that don't often happen. Other business men will say boldly, "Your name has slipped my memory." "Brown," comes the reply. "Oh, I know; I mean your first name," and by this subterfuge a great deal of pain and worry and bad feeling is avoided.

Printers have their own time with names. They carry several thousand on their books, and most subscribers expect to be recognized. They know the editor, and it doesn't strike them that it is hardly possible for him to know all of them. He does know their faces well enough, perhaps, and he tries to think of their names, but the effort is usually fruitless. The subscriber, as a rule, says "I wish to pay my subscription." If he adds "James Graham, Rockton," the editor feels like giving him the paper free for a year.—Exchange.

Own Their Own Machine.

Warren Engine Co. No. 3, has recently paid the last installment on its steamer and now own it free and clear. Fire Commissioner Jones who advanced the money to purchase it, has been paid in full and the boys will hereafter run with their own machine.

The Coming Resort.

The property of the Highland Beach Association, running from Sandy Hook to Seabright, and lying between the Shrewsbury river and the ocean, is being developed in a way that destines it to become a favorite resort and place of Summer residence. Its nearness to New York and the attractions of both still water and surf, are a few of the unusual advantages the locality offers. Mr. Ferdinand Fish of this city, represents the Company, and with his family are occupying a cottage at Highland for the Summer.

Nose Bleeding.

To stop excessive nose bleeding press the finger firmly upon the little artery which supplies the blood to the side of the face afflicted. A small artery branches from the main artery on each side of the neck and passes over the outside of each jawbone. If the finger be passed along the edge of the jawbone until the beating of the artery is felt, and the latter pressed hard for five minutes until the ruptured vessel in the nose can contract and the blood coagulate, the work is done.

K. K. K.

A rivalry for the honors of the ball field with the heretofore invincible Crescents of this city, has been started by the organization of the Koffee Kolored Koons, a base ball nine of dusky gentry from the Mount Olive Baptist Sunday School and elsewhere. The team is composed of such well known ball-tossers as Gamey, Kliney, Scotty, Eph. Babbitt, and a prominent North avenue tonsorial artist as centre field. They will undoubtedly make one of the strongest nines in the State.

Sunflowers.

It is a little early in the season to note a very large crop of the fruit peculiar to the taste of Oscar Wilde. The sunflower was what the æsthetic youth had a passion for, and in returning home he has escaped having the term "dude" applied to him. In some parts of the city, sunflowers appeared quite a while ago, and each day witnesses new faces on tall stalks. It is said that more of this variety of flower will be grown this season than has ever before been known. The months of August and September bring the crop to perfection, and then the finest specimens will be in demand by persons of a truly rural æsthetic nature.

Installation.

Last Monday evening the following newly elected officers were installed by Plainfield Lodge, No. 44 I. O. O. F.

Noble Grand—John K. Case.
Vice Grand—Geo. W. M. Townley.
Rec. Secretary—John Bodine.

The installation ceremonies were under the direction of District D. G. Garrison, present Mayor of Perth Amboy. After the ceremonies the brethren adjourned to rooms on Front street, where a fine collation was served and interesting services conducted until a late hour. Deputy P. G. M. Cleaver of Newark was present, and presented to the retiring P. G., Fred. M. Slater, a handsome P. G's regalia.

New Regulations for this Diocese.

Bishop Wigger has laid down certain rules to be observed in regard to picnics, fairs and excursions. No picnic, he said, shall be continued after dark—such gatherings must be dispersed at sundown; and fairs should not be continued later than 10 or 10:30 o'clock. No society connected with the church shall have a picnic or excursion or fair without the permission of the reverend rector, nor shall any have such picnics, fairs or excursions without the superintendence of the rector, or at least of one of the priests of the parish. The church and the rector, he said, are held responsible for the good or bad behavior of such societies, and they should consequently have the right to superintend as direct such amusements.

Sad Death of a Young Lady.

Miss Emma Louise Kiemeroth, of Philadelphia, aged sixteen years, who had been to New York city to seek medical aid owing to the ravages of consumption, was placed on the 7:10 p. m. train from Jersey City on Friday. She had grown worse instead of better in New York, and she was suddenly seized with a longing to see her mother who had remained in Philadelphia. Her physician expressed grave doubts of her reaching her home alive, but fearing that absence from her parent would in itself shorten her days, at last gave his consent, and she departed for Philadelphia with some friends who were going on to Washington. The young lady sank rapidly, and friends gathered about her in the sleeping car where she was. Dr. J. L. Mulford, of New Brunswick, happened to be on the train, and did all in his power to make the dying girl comfortable. Death came to her relief after the train passed Rahway, and when it arrived in New Brunswick at 8:08 o'clock the body was taken in charge by Undertaker Rogers, after it had been examined by Drs. Williamson and Mabon. The body was prepared for burial and sent to Philadelphia two hours later.

Monday's Shower.

The terrific thunder shower which passed over this city on Monday afternoon last, extended over a vast area of territory, judging from the reports gleaned from exchanges of its ravages elsewhere. No damage was done in this vicinity that we learn of. Mr. A. C. Garland and Harry Beadell were in a wagon near New Market. They saw the storm coming and drove as rapidly as possible to reach New Market before the storm, but did no succeed. They drove under a shed by the roadside for shelter, but had not much more than reached there supposed haven when the wind took the roof and whirled it in every direction with a number of chicken coops that were near by. During the prevalence of the storm, hail stones were picked up at Metuchen as large as hen's eggs.

At Asbury Park the wind blew with great violence for over an hour. The Madison, Gilsey, and Howard Houses were unroofed by the gale and six carriages loaded with people were upset and wrecked. A number of tents were blown down at Ocean Grove. An unknown colored man was blown out to sea in a boat and was drowned at Atlantic Highlands. The freaks of the wind were equal to those of a Western tornado. Houses were torn from their foundations, roofs ripped off and entire buildings demolished. Shutters and doors were wrenched from their hinges and whirled through the air, chimneys were toppled over and carried bodily away, and in some cases buildings were flung into the bay. The havoc was widespread and the damage done runs far into thousands of dollars. Several persons were injured. Scarcely a building in the place was spared from some injury. Accompanying the storm was a destructive mass of hail, which fell with crushing effect between the Raritan River and Metuchen, particularly in the vicinage of Stelton. Plants were crushed and torn, glasses were dashed out of windows, and young shrubbery suffered.

Failed to Connect.

A party from this city visited Bound Brook on Tuesday last to fish. One of them, too anxious to reach home, got on a through train, and triumphantly waved his fishing pole to his brethren who were left. When the conductor refused to stop the train at Plainfield to let him off, and carried him to Elizabeth, there was a Thorn in his side.

A Sabbath Row.

A go-as-you-please fight, in which a father and two sons impartially participated, occurred Sunday morning last at the residence of a Plainfield shoemaker. Officer Grant, upon notification from the neighborhood, arrested the three who the next morning were arraigned before City Judge Good—Corporation Counsel Marsh appearing for the City to prosecute the violators of its peace, good order and morals. Mainly upon their own evidence, the two sons were each given thirty days and $25 fine—the father being discharged upon it appearing that he merely interfered to stop the quarrel.

That Opera House.

The plans for the Music Hall are rapidly approaching completion, and upon the execution of specifications and estimates the contracts will be given out and work commenced at once. The building Committee have visited with the architect a number of New York theatres, with the purpose of selecting the best points of each and combining them in a whole that will be not only a credit to Plainfield, but the admiration and envy of other cities. The difficulty in securing possession of the additional property purchased on the line of the street it is hoped will soon be adjusted, and the front building and entrance will be immediately erected.

Base Ball.

Saturday afternoon at Rahway was the time and place of one of the most interesting and closely contested games that the Crescents have taken part in during the present season. Victory "perched" as usual on the foul flags of the Plainfielders, but their opponents have no reason to feel anything but proud over their efforts no matter what the result. The following is the score by innings:

On the Crescent's grounds in this city, last Saturday, a large gathering assembled including many ladies, to witness a match at base ball between the Hotel Netherwood and the Park House. The latter team, however, was composed mainly of more or less efficient players who had no connection with the House, and the result was disastrous to the Hotel nine. Six innings each closed with the score—Park House, 35; Hotel Netherwood, 10.

An Exacting Landlord.

Under this heading the Elizabeth Herald tells of a landlord of that city, who has laid down the following rules and regulations to his tenants. After reading them, one will naturally inquire: "Have tenants any rights?"

Rents to be paid before the 10th of the month in advance.

No ashes or garbage to be thrown in the yard or behind the privy.

Doors, gates and shutters to be fastened so that they do not slam with the wind.

No children under ten years of age to be sent to the well for water.

No dirty water to be dashed against the back of the house.

No children not belonging to the family to be admitted into the yard.

No children to be allowed to swing on gates, to climb or walk on fences, or the piazza railings.

On the infringement of any of these regulations the tenant will receive thirty days notice to quit, or an increase of rent at the discretion of the ownerr

The Firemen's Fund.

The New Jersey Firemen's Association will meet at Dover this year, on the fourth Wednesday in September. Secretary Kelsey will, this year, distribute to each legally organized Firemen's Benevolent Association in the State $300, from the aggregation of the two per cent. tax on premiums received on their New Jersey business by insurance companies of other States and collected where there are no fire departments. The companies pay three per cent. tax in all, and formerly the entire collection was made by the State Treasurer, who retained one per cent. for the State and distributed to the beneficial associations two per cent. The State Firemen's Association, when formed procured legislation by which the treasurer of each association does the collecting of the tax in his own district. The $300 now to be distributed comes from a fund that was formerly retained by the State, which annually received about $10,000 from the insurance tax in districts where no fire departments exist, there being several entire counties without a legal organized fire department. The State Firemen's Association brought this change about also.

Why Not?

It is said that the Union county delegates to the National-Greenback-Labor-Reform-Party are in favor of nominating Benjamin Urner, Esq., of Elizabeth, for Governor. Mr. Urner, it is said, however, will not consent to become a candidate under any circumstances. Why not nominate our esteemed fellow citizen, Frank Bacon.

The Best System of Steam Heating.

The agency for the celebrated Gorton Steam Heating Boilers, has been placed in the able hands of Mr. J. N. Schenck, the practical machinist of North Plainfield, who is prepared to introduce them in residences and other buildings in an entirely satisfactory manner. Those who are using these boilers in this city and elsewhere, speak in the highest terms of their utility and the service rendered. Economy of fuel, automatic action of draft and water supply, self feeding and amount of heat radiation, are a few of the improvements and advantages combined in this boiler.

SCOTCH PLAINS SCRATCHINGS.

The Baptist Sunday School will shortly give an excursion to Coney Island.

Kiah Hand has rejuvinated his hack wagon with a fresh coat of paint.

The chemical engine for the new fire company will be received next Wednesday evening.

Jas. G. D. Richards, son of Mrs. Bennet Brittin, is a member of the U. S. Judicial Court at Washington.

Mr. John Cole has purchased a building lot of Bennet Brittin, Esq., next to the latter gentleman's hotel.

Last Wednesday, Mr. B. Brittin took little Maud Hill to Metuchen, where she will hereafter live with a good family. This child is one of the family left orphans by the sudden death of their parents from fever a few months since.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

John N. Wilcok had a young child die on Saturday last from cholera infantum.

Overseer of Road Dist. No. 8 is at work putting the roads in his district in good repair.

Capt. Sansom of the ship Alsa, arrived home on Wednesday 18th inst. He sailed again on Thursday last for the West Indies.

On Monday afternoon last during the shower the lightning struck a large pine tree near the residence of C. B. Ripley, Esq., on Elizabeth road.

At the meeting of the Town Committee held on Tuesday evening last Mr. Albert Wilcox was appointed overseer of Road Dist. No. 7, to fill the unexpired term of John Pierson, deceased.

Mrs. Susan Frazee, wife of Anson Frazee, Esq., residing on Park street, died from Acute Mania. She had been sick about ten days. Her funeral occurred on Sunday—burial at Elizabeth, N.J.

The annual meeting for the election of officers of the Westfield Bucket & Eng. Co. No. 1, occurs on the third Friday of August next. The regular monthly meeting on Monday, Aug. 6th at Town Rooms.

Why does not some of our public spirited citizens go in for telephone connections with our neighboring towns? With probably 20 subscribers we could have an office established here and have the full benefits of the surrounding towns. Let some one start the list.

Vincent Linden, a young man working for Mr. Gansell was bitten on the left arm by a snake on Monday last—he im*mediately applied a poultice of tobacco to* to the wound and drank plenty of wisky. The arm soon became swollen to double its natural size. At last accounts the swelling was receding.

The Pullman farm, situated on the corner of Mountain avenue and Springfield road was sold by E. S. Atwater, Master in Chancery, to close the estate on Tuesday last. It was purchased by Job Male of Plainfield for $10,000, which was a decided bargain. It has a dwelling house and out-buildings with 50 acres of land.

Our Freeholder James T. Pierson has completed his improvement around his new dwelling house on Broad street. The grounds and lawns are finely laid out and drives and walks nicely graveled. The building is in a fine location, together with the grounds adjoining of Mr. C. B. Peddies, and a fine addition to our town. Mr. Pierson's house is occupied by Capt. Sansom of the Ship Alsa.

The suit for penalty in riding a horse over and upon the sidewalk, brought by C. H. Daniels against Michael Hanlon before Justice Jaques, a non suit was granted upon the motion of W. G. Peckham, Esq, Hanlon's counsel, there being a defect in the way the suit was brought. Craig Marsh, Esq., of Plainfield, represented the plaintiff. He was not engag*ed in the case before the papers were* served or probably the case would have been tried. We understand that it is not the end of the case as another suit has been brought at Plainfield before Justice Wadsworth. Now no doubt the case will be brought to issue.

On Friday morning last at 2 o'clock, Henry Littell, a resident of our township when he is not confined behind the bars, was arrested at Elizabeth by the police on suspicion—he having a new set of harness in his possession. The officers suspicions proved to be correct—the harness was stolen from Oliver Crane of Union Township. Littell is aged about 55 years. About 20 years ago he stole a horse from Silas Miller of our town, was convicted and sentenced to State Prison for 4 years. In the year 1867 he was arrested upon suspicion of being connected with the Miller bond robbery of Westfield, but escaped conviction. In 1870 he was arrested by officer Marsh for stealing several sets of harness and blankets from West Chest, Columbia Co., New York State, for which offence he was convicted and sentenced to Auburn Penitentiary for five years. Since his release from confinement he has been roaming around the country. He has been in our town about a month before committing the larceny of Crane's harness, for which crime no doubt he will again be sentenced to Trenton State Prison.

The Newark Daily Advertiser says: Peralto has been sold. This horse has been before the public so long that his name is almost as familiar as those of our Congressmen or Governors. He was a member of the Mutual Driving Associa*tion, and his sale removes one of its* shining lights. Peralto is one of the speediest horses on the American turf. It is doubtful if there are three horses in the country that can take the pole from him on the first quarter. At Somerville, two years ago, he was timed to the first quarter on a half-mile track in 33 seconds, a 2:12 clip. The trouble with him is that he is constitutionally delicate, and no amount of expert handling can make him stand up a hard case. George Swick did his best with him. At Fleetwood, a few days ago, some gentlemen were looking at him in his stall. Peralto quietly munched his oat without looking up or paying the least attention to them. Presently George Swick, his old trainer, came up and spoke to him. Peralto lifted his head at the familiar voice, turned around and walked up to the bar and put his head over Swick's shoulder. His club record over the Waverly course is 2:24¾, and no horse to sulky has ever beaten it on that track. Peralto is game to the core. He trots on his nerve, and when he gives up the whip is useless, for nature can do no more. He has won more club races than any other horse that ever trotted at Waverly, and although he is uncertain in a race, he was a universal favorite. His future home will be in New York.

Another Life Saved—Mrs. Harriet Cummings, of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: Early last winter my daughter was attacked with a severe cold which settled on her lungs. We tried several medicines none of which seemed to do her any good, but she continued to get worse, and finally raised large amounts of blood from her lungs. We called in a family physician, but he failed to do her any good. We then called in a physician—a most skilled professor in one of our colleges—he said that she could not get well. At this time a friend who had been cured by Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, advised me to give it a trial. We then got a bottle, and before she had used it all up she began to improve, and by the use of three bottles was entirely cured.

AN OLD DREAM STORY.

One snowy winter night an English farmer named Robin Cartwright, sitting with his wife before a blazing fire of oak wood, fancied that he heard the faint bleating of a sheep outside his door, and, anxious for his flock, took his lantern and went out to look for the poor creature. No sheep was there, however, but instead, close against the door jam, a basket lined with wool and covered with a blanket, in which lay a very young child.

There were footsteps in the snow which led up to the door, and other steps which led away from it. Holding his lantern low, the farmer followed these until they ceased abruptly beside the margin of the river, which lay at the foot of his land. Lifting his lantern over his head, the good man shouted half a dozen times: "Hullo!" he cried. "Hullo!" but the deep silence of the winter night alone answered him. As he stood listening in vain, a shudder ran through his stout frame. His imagination pictured a young woman, trembling, unhappy, shame-stricken, who having laid her infant at his door, had sped away toward this dark water to hide her woes within its bosom.

"Friends here!" he shouted again. "Friends here! Only friends!" But again he heard no sound, and after searching the banks carefully he returned to his cottage.

His wife, meanwhile, had taken the child to the fire and cared for it kindly. It was a pretty little boy, dressed in good and comfortable garments, and fast about his neck by a cord was one-half of a peculiar silver clasp or buckle.

It seemed evident that the clasp was intended to be a token by which the infant's identity might one day be proven, and the farmer's wife put it away carefully. Inquiries were made in the neighborhood, but they led to no discoveries and the Cartwright's kept the child, though they did not deem it wise to adopt him as their own. He was kindly cared for, but brought up as a servant. He had been christened Roger and knew no other name.

As soon as he was old enough he was put to out-door work, and, though taught to read and write, was otherwise on a par with his fellow-laborers. He had never seen any place more elegant than the farm house parlor, nor any dress more costly than that his mistress wore to the church on Sunday; yet his dreams, which he was fond of telling, were all of magnificence and splendor.

Often in his sleep he found himself in an elegant room, furnished in yellow satin. There were old portraits on the walls, and beautiful ornaments everywhere. Here he always saw a lady dressed in black, but wearing diamonds, who was very beautiful and often wept, and a man who wore something on his breast—as he explained to Mrs. Cartwright, "like your best breastpin, but more sparkling," thus describing an order, as it seemed. He appeared always to be himself invisible, and once a man in livery, who had only one eye, seemed to walk straight through him without knowing it.

Mrs. Cartwright always believed that these dreams "meant something," but her husband laughed at the matter.

"Poor Roger is no nobleman's child," he used to say. "No doubt his mother drowned herself the night she left him here—poor soul!"

So the boy's sixteenth birthday came, and on it he dreamed this dream:

He thought he was in London, and stood before a row of rough stone houses, which were plainly very old. Across the front were some raised letters, quaint and queer enough to puzzle him, but he made out the words "Lady Armytage." Before him was one of the low doors with the number 10 on it, and at it stood an old woman with a black silk cap on her head, and a little black shawl over the shoulders of her purple calico gown.

She held something in her hand and showed it to him. It was a piece of a silver buckle.

"Bring me the other half," she said, "and I'll tell you a tale that will please you."

Then the lad awoke, determined to go to London. He was so excited by the dream that he could scarcely wait until morning to tell his mistress, who, on hearing it, at once brought out the silver half buckle that she had kept ever since he had been left at her door, and vowed that she would go to London with him and see what came of this strange dream.

Together the woman and the boy made the journey, and, after many inquiries and much wandering about the strange city, they learned there existed in its very heart an old time charity called, queerly enough, "Lady Armytage's twenty-four old wives."

Twenty-four old women, who had been reputable wives and mothers, were fed, clothed and lodged in these buildings—the funds for the purpose having been bequeathed by a certain pious Lady Armytage, long dead.

To this row of buildings the two country folks made their way, and the boy cried out with something very much like terror when he saw the houses of his dream, and on one low door the number 10 that he had read in those very white letters. He knocked at it with a trembling hand, and an old woman in a black silk cap, purple gown and a little black shawl, opened it at once. She made a courtesy such as humble English women give their superiors, and said:

"What can I do for you, ma'am?" and the boy staggered back against the door-post, too faint to speak; but Mrs. Cartwright walked into the poor little apartment.

"Dame," said she, "we've come a long way to ask you a little question. Have you the other half of a buckle like this?"

The old woman looked at her a moment and answered:

"I have, ma'am, and a parcel, too, for one that shows it to me. Sit down and I'll tell you all about it."

Mrs. Cartwright seated herself, the boy drew near. The old woman went to a chest which stood in a recess, unlocked it and took from thence a parcel, well tied up.

"There's two of us in this home always, ma'am," she said. "The last one died here. She was an old nurse-woman—Hannah Glegg she called herself—and in her last illness, she was greatly put out about something that was on her conscience. Before she died she gave me a card, with a name and place on it, and this parcel. 'When I'm gone,' she said, 'no before, write to that place and say: 'If you want the other half of the buckle come to me.'' When any one comes, if they show you half of a silver buckle, give them this parcel."

"It's all," she said, "ma'am." "She died very soon. Of course I was upset, and when all was over, I found that, though I had the parcel safe, I had not the card; that was gone. I've been thinking to go to the minister and show the parcel to him, for it is full of writing, and there's a bit of a buckle in it, too. But it seems some one must have told you about it. I think it is yours by right, and I should give it over to you."

The farmer's wife was wise enough to keep her own counsel. She gave a gift to the old woman that made her feel herself paid for any trouble she had had, and took the parcel away with her. At the hotel where they stopped for the night the two anxious travelers read the paper it contained. It was to this effect:

"I, Martha Grey, who has been living in the city of London for ten years or more, under the name of Hannah Glegg, do hereby swear and affirm that sixteen years ago, being then employed as nurse for my Lady Marlowe, of Marlowe Hall, ——shire, I was desirous of punishing Lord Marlowe for trifling with the affections of my niece, Kate Grey, who died, as I know, of a broken heart, because of his Lordliness—for he had no mind to marry a poor, ignorant girl, but only to make love to her—and being nurse to my Lady Marlowe, I one night contrived to steal the child and leave the place with it unseen; and, taking a boat, I rowed, with my own hands, stopped near the house of one Robin Cartwright, farmer, and laid the child at his door, and then departed as we came, knowing well that it would be believed that the mother who had left the child had drowned herself. Since this I have changed my name and lived unsuspected; but, being in dread of death, I now make confession, lest I be punished for the deed in the world to which I am going. The half of the buckle, which is in this parcel, will mate that which I hung about the child's neck, and my Lady Marlowe will know it well, since it is a family heirloom. This statement I swear is true; I make it on my death-bed.

MARTHA GREY."

Of course the poor boy who had been led so far by this strange dream, lost no time in going to ——shire, still cared for by good Mrs. Cartwright.

They found Marlowe Castle easily, and on entering it, the boy's vision again came into the story, for the one-eyed footman opened the door for them. All was familiar to the young fellow. The stairway, the passages, the yellow-satin drawing-room—he had seen them all in his dreams. He had no doubt, whatever, that he stood in his father's home, or that his mother would prove to the lady of the black robes and diamonds who had seemed so beautiful to him.

And this, in fact, was actually the case, the grief which the Marlowe's had suffered for years on account of the strange disappearance of their child being well known by all the country. The letter and the clasp proved his identity, and the servant boy became the heir to a fortune. The story was not universally known, but it is carefully recorded in the private diary of Dennis Archer, then Vicar of Marlowe Church, who avers his belief in its truth.

KNOCKING AT THE WRONG DOOR.

At the terrace baths last Sunday an impatient young man walked up to the door of one of the compartments and knocking on the same testily inquired: 'When in blazes are you going to get those pants on?' There was a faint giggle and a silvery voice replied: 'When I get married, I suppose.' He had mistaken the door, that's all.

CARP CULTURE.

Something more about carp from an excellent authority: Carp grows from the egg to three pounds in weight in one year. They multiply rapidly, a single female yielding half a million eggs in a year. They spawn in May and June. In the winter they burrow in the mud and remain dormant, neither making nor losing growth. In the spawn season they must be fed or they will destroy the spawn. At other times they need not be fed, unless there are so many of them in the pond that the aquatic vegetation and the supplies brought down by the feeding creek are insufficient. There is scarcely a doubt that a carp pond would be a profitable adjunct to nearly every farm.

HELPFUL HINTS.

Powdered borax is excellent to soften the skin.

A weak infusion of gall is turned black by sulphate of iron.

Wash pantry shelves in hot alum water to rid them of ants.

Milk that has changed can be rendered fit for use by stirring in a little soda.

To remove indelible; apply a strong solution of cyanide of potassium and rinse well.

Fish may be scaled much easier by first dipping them into scalding water for a moment.

To clean chased brass ornaments cut lemon in slices and rub the ornaments with it, then wash in hot water.

If salt is sprinkled upon soot that has fallen upon the carpet, it may be swept up without discoloring the carpet.

Baking powder and soda biscuit should be made as quickly as possible, laid in hot pans and put into a quick oven.

For apoplexy, elevate the head and keep the person quiet. For sunstroke, use ice on the head and cold water on the extremities.

Use hot soap suds for washing flannel, rubbing the flannel quickly through it. Rinse in hot water, wring tightly and dry quickly.

To make good mucilage, take equal parts of gumarabic and gum tragacanth and add sufficient water to dissolve, and a couple of cloves.

Clear boiling water will remove tea stains. Pour the water through the stain, and in this way prevent its spreading over the fabric.

For hands that are stained, dampen the hands first in water, then rub them with tartaric acid or salt of lemons, as you would with soap; rinse them and rub them dry.

The date of the President's departure from Washington on his trip to the Yellowstone Park has not yet been fixed. It seems to be settled, however, that he will leave Washington about Aug. 1st, and attend the opening of the Louisville Exposition before going further West. The arrangements for the trip are to be made by Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan. Secretary Lincoln will accompany the President, and it is said that Senator Wade Hampton will be one of the party. The President has postponed his proposed trip on the steamer Despatch to Newport and Cape May until the end of the week, and may, perhaps, abandoned it altogether.

PRACTICAL BENEVOLENCE.

An old story is being revived of a prayer meeting held for a poor fellow's relief who had broken his leg. While Deacon Brown was praying a tall fellow with an ox goad knocked at the door, saying: "Father could not come, but sent his prayers in the cart." They were patatoes, beef, pork and corn.

WHAT SHE CALLED HIM.

There was a bright little boy between two and three years old, picked up as he was wandering on the street and carried to the police station, where he took a seat on the railing, stuck out his chubby legs and stared at every one who came in, without being the least abashed. As is customary in such cases, an attempt was made to elicit information from him that might lead to his restoration to his distracted parents. The little fellow appeared willing to tell all he knew.

"What is your name, young man?" they asked him.

"Jimmie Beardon," he lisped.

"What's your papa's name?"

"Papa."

"But what does your mamma call him?"

The cherub's face lighted up with pleasure at being able to furnish the desired information, as he answered:

"She calls him, 'You old divole, you.'"

Further examination was postponed.

WHERE HE WAS LEFT.

'Yes, I am the man who had a corner on maple sugar a few years ago,' he replied.

'How much did you buy in?'

'Almost every pound made east of Canada that spring.'

'And how much did you force up the price?'

'Not a red cent. I lost about $28,000 on that little speculation.'

'Why, didn't you have the market in your own hand?'

'Yes, for a few days. I should have jumped sugar from eleven to eighteen cents per pound in a fortnight, but a Western wretch began making maple sugar from New Orleans molasses, Indian meal and Lake Erie sand, and in a month I was bankrupt. It was perhaps a good thing for me, though.'

'How?'

'Why, I intended to make a corner on pickles in the fall, and if I had some one would surely have invented a basswood cucumber and cut the price down to fifty cents per barrel.'

INNOCENCE OF YOUTH.

The Vicksburg boy can stand up with any other boy in the world against an accusation. The other day, when a Vicksburg mother discovered sugar on the pantry shelf, she called her boy and said:

'Some one has been stealing the sugar!'

'Is it possible?' he exclaimed, rolling up his eyes in astonishment.

"Yes, it is possible, and the thief is not far away, either.'

'Ain't he? Do you suspect father?'

'No, I don't.'

'Couldn't be the cat, could it?' he enquired looking under the table in search of the feline.

'Cats do not eat sugar, young man!'

'They don't?'

'No, sir, the thief is a boy about your age.'

'He is, eh? I'd like to catch him in here once.'

'If the sugar is disturbed again,' she said, as she covered the box. 'I know of a boy who will get his jacket dusted.'

'That's bully! I wish you'd let me stay out of school so's to see you catch and maul him.'

And he went out to devour the other lumps.

WHAT CAUSED TOPNODY TO TUMBLE.

After supper, Monday night, Mr. Topnody put on his hat and started out of the house.

"Where are you going, Topnody?" asked his wife.

"I'm going down town, my dear."

"Well, I didn't suppose you were going to New York, or Philadelphia, or Europe, or Cumminsville."

"Didn't you, my love?"

"No, I didn't. But I want to know what you are going down town for."

"Business, my dear, of course. You didn't think I was going for fun, did you?"

"Oh, no; men never go down town at night for fun. There's no fun down town at night for a man, when his wife is left at home by herself. Of course not, of course not. It's business all the time; sometimes it's the saloon business; sometimes it's the billiard-room business; sometimes it's the pasteboard business; sometimes it's the theatre business; sometimes it's the—"

"Now, my dear, what's the use of your going on that way? I'm honest, and have to go down town. I am going to join the Knights of Pythias, and have to be on hand at eight o'clock sharp."

"Going to join the Knights of Pythias, are you? Well, I say you ain't. You already have Mason nights, and Odd Fellow nights, and A. O. U. W. nights, and Chosen Friends nights, and Elk nights, and now you want to have a night of Pythias, do you? I say you shan't, and, Topnody, if you want to lodge with me, you had better take one night off for a Topnody night, or this lodge will be closed till further orders. Do you tumble?"

Topnody tumbled.

FRIGHTENING CHILDREN.

A lady in the city overheard her nurse-girl talking to the little child she was putting to sleep, and among other legends of the nursery in which she indulged, was this:

'If you don't go right to sleep this very minute, great big, awful black bears with eyes like coals of fire, and sharp, white cruel teeth, will come out from under the bed and eat you all up!'

The poor little thing nestled under the clothes, and after a long season of terror fell asleep, to dream frightful dreams of bears eating her.

That night when the stolid nurse had composed herself in her own comfortable bed, and had put the light out, there came a sudden rap at the door, and the voice of the mistress called loudly at the door:

'Maggie! Maggie! for mercy's sake get up as quick as you can! There's a fearful burglar under the bed, and as soon as you get to asleep he's coming out to rob and murder you.'

At the word burglar the girl sprang from the bed and with a scream, tore open the door, and fell into hysterics in the hall.

The lesson was even more instructive than the mistress had designed, but when the girl's fears were calmed, she said to her:

'You did not hesitate to tell my little child, who could not possibly know that it was a lie, a cruel story of a bear under her bed; now, when I treat you in the same kind of slumber story, you are nearly frightened to death. To-morrow you can go into the kitchen and work; you are not fit to care for little children.'

How many little children are there who, every night of their lives, are frightened to death.

SECRETARY W. S. Potter has issued the list of speed premiums for the Somerset County Fair, which will be held in October next. Copies can be had on application to the Secretary.

GLEANINGS.

The citizens of Summit have raised a fund of $1,000 to suppress the illegal sale of liquor.

Hugh Herbert, of Point Pleasant, recently sold for $1,500 a piece of land at that place for which he paid only $70 a few years ago.

Thos. Nast, of Morristown, so long identified with the pictorial work in Harper's Weekly, has been retired on a pension of $10,000.

Martha Bryant, while playing with a dog in New Brunswick, was severely bitten by the brute in the foot. The dog was shot at once and Miss Bryant was attended to.

'I've given that boy the wrong medicine,' exclaimed a druggist, seizing his hat and rushing from the store. The boy had reached home by the time the druggist overtook him.

'Say,' exclaimed the druggist, as an old negro approached, 'I've given your boy the wrong medicine.'

'What did yer gin him?'

'I gave him morphine. You sent for quinine.'

'Dat's all right. De udder day I sent for morphine, an' yer sent me quinine, an' dis time when I wanted morphine, ter keep down any mistakes, I sent for quinine, knowin' dat yer wouldn't send what de boy axed for. Go on back home an' sell some rat poison.'

New Jersey Insurance Tax Law.

Secretary of State Kelsey, of New Jersey, distributes $300 this year to each legally organized fire department in the State. This money comes from the two per cent. tax on the premiums received on their New Jersey business by insurance companies of other states. It is for the relief of disabled firemen only, and is in addition to what is collected by each department in its own limits. Collections are made in districts where there are no departments for the benefit of those places which are wise enough to provide themselves with fire protection.

Beware of Ink-Pencils.

A most useful implement to the business man, this innocent-looking pencil can be easily converted into a treacherous friend, and on no consideration should it be used to write the signature of anyone. The composition of the pencil is a peculiar combination, highly poisonous in itself, and (herein lies the danger to signature writers), competent to give off two or more impressions on damped paper—not tissue paper, be it understood, but ordinary writing paper. Attention was directed to this peculiarity by an official of the Bank of New Zealand, and subsequent experiments proved how easy it was to make a clear copy of the filling-in of a cheque with this ink pencil. First the writing of the cheque is transferred—upside down, of course—to a slip of damped paper, and from that transferred, right side up to another slip of damped paper. Tested recently in the case of a cheque written with the ink pencil and sent in from the country, simple hand pressure obtained a very perfect copy of the transferable parts of the document.

IN a few weeks the luscious peach will make its welcome appearance. Notwithstanding the reports of the young fruit falling from the trees, everything points favorably to a very large yield, and that the peaches will be of a large size and excellent flavor.

A DISTRESSED mother who called upon a doctor to learn if there wasn't some medicine that would cure her daughter of her habit of indiscriminate flirting, was advised to give the girl plenty of salt. He said that all that ailed her was that she was too fresh.

Old gentleman in a beer garden near the railroad depot, waiting for his wife to arrive on the next train, complaining to himself—"Here I have already six glasses of Pilsener, and (looking at his watch) the train will not be here for one hour to come. This will compel me to drink six more glasses. It's terrible. What an expensive wife I have got!"

UNLESS unforseen and unexpected misfortune shall overtake the potato crop it will probably prove to be the largest ever grown in the country. The increased acreage in the Northern States is five per cent. over last year with an average condition of 101. The vines of very early potatoes are already turning yellow and the season is so far advanced that the crop is already assured.

A MAN dropped in a hotel a few days ago, and called for a drink and a cigar, tendering in payment a bland dollar. The clerk handed him back a trade dollar. The man looked up in amazement, and said: "Is this the change?" The clerk replied it was correct. The man was so overjoyed that he embraced the clerk and said: "Count on me as a regular customer. I have traveled a good deal, but this is the first town I ever struck that I could trade dollars and get a drink and a cigar to boot."

A CIRCULAR recently issued by Prof. Apgar, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, states the examination of candidates for teachers' certificates to be held in August, (which continues two days,) will be for all grades. All teachers holding first or second grade certificates, which will expire on or before January 1st, 1884, will be expected to present themselves for examination at the August meeting. Teachers holding certificates of either of these grades, which will expire after January 1st and before August 1st, 1884, will be granted permits until the last mentioned date.

An awful mash,
A little cash,
Two hearts that beat as one?
Ain't got a cent
To pay the rent;
Gol darn it, where's the fun?

A WISE MAN'S FORTUNE.

You can't surmise
My great surprise
The first time that I advertised.

Right after nine
They formed in line,
Customers and old friends of mine.

All eager to buy,
For the reason why,
That I was wise
To advertise.

I do suppose
We shall dispose
Of all the goods in store.
In this event I am bound to rent
My neighbor's house next door.

You may take the hint,
If you want a mint
Of money, be, as I was, wise,
And go to this paper to advertise.

OF ANOTHER AGE.

GRADUALLY SUPPLANTED BY A BETTER ARTICLE CERTAIN OLD THINGS ARE DONE AWAY.

In the general reception room of the Western Union Telegraph building on Broadway, New York, are exhibited the coarse, crude and clumsy instruments of the infancy of the telegraph. They are only relics now. More perfect machinery has superseded them.

Years ago what is now styled the old-fashioned porous plaster did some good service. There was then nothing better of the kind. Now all that is changed. Science and study has gone deeper into the secrets of medicine and produced BENSON'S CAPCINE POROUS PLASTER, which embodies all the excellencies thus far possible in an external remedy. The old plasters were slow—the Capcine is rapid; they were uncertain—the Capcine is sure. Cheaper articles bear similar names. Be careful, therefore, that some thrifty druggist does no deceive you. In the centre of the genuine is cut the word CAPCINE. Price 25 cents.

POETRY.

THE SONG OF THE SCHOOL GIRL.

With heavy and aching head,
With weary but sleepless brain,
A school girl sat in her room at night,
And thus gave voice to her pain.

It's study by day and by night,
And it's study by night and by day,
Till the blur comes over my sight,
And my brain seems oozing away.

The studies are piled so high,
That the weight is breaking me down;
I wish I had wings and could fly,
Away from the school and the town.

It's study and study at school,
And it's study and study up here,
And I shudder beneath the rule
That awaits the failure I fear.

All day and all night in my head
With figures and facts oppressed,
And at last when I crawl into bed
They haunt me and rob me of rest.

It's oh, for a romp and a run,
A game with a hoop or a ball!
And it's oh, to be out in the sun,
Away from percentage and all!

Perhaps I may marry some day,
If I ever get through with my life,
And what will a husband say
To a nervous and fidgety wife?

It's study by day and by night,
And it's study by night and by day,
Oh, surely it can never be right
To study and never to play.

SUMMER BOARDING.

Seasonable Information for those about Embarking on a Country Campaign.

THE TOURIST'S GUIDE.

Ant. A lively insect, found in the country, where it exists in a state of excited uncertainty, whether its home is in the sugar-bowl, the old stump or the pantaloons of the gentleman from town. Not down on the bill of fare, because it is a matter of course, like the salt.

Ass. The man who believes all that he reads in the advertisement.

Bath Room. A wood shed with a pail of well water and a cedar wash tub in it. The spiders are not mentioned in the advertisement, because they go with the wood shed.

Brook. A slough that trickles through the meadow in April and dries up in the summer; any stream of water too small to hold fish and large enough to nurture frogs.

Butter. A substance manufactured from animal fat, with a little milk and some chemical ingredients. The genuine is supplied only from the city. An imitation article is sometimes made from cream, but it is easily distinguished by its strong flavor of garlic, and is seldom used in the country.

Berries. Small fruits, from three to ten days old; supplied from the city markets.

Bugs. An insect of the genus 'Cimex,' order 'Hemiptera,' having a beaked or sucking mouth; also provided with something to make a noise with the several things to bite with. See woodshed; also couch.

Boating. A summer sport very popular on the Schuylkill, Hudson and other rivers contiguous to great cities; in the mountains, poling across a duck pond on two slabs and a panel of fence.

Cream. A pale-blue fluid, composed of acqua pura, protoxide of hydrogen and some other substances. Used to astonish berries and frighten rebellious coffee.

Croquet. Three wooden balls, a mallet, with a hickory handle, and from ten to three wire wickets, according to the age of the set. Usually three.

Chicken. A feather fowl, that runs wild about the barn-yard and under the house; remarkable for rapid longevity, sometimes attaining the age of seventeen years in a single spring. Not available for human food until after the seventh year.

Dairy. A place on the next farm, for storing real butter, cream, milk and cheese. Obsolete. See pump.

A young man dressed in the highest of fashion and with a poetic turn of mind, was driving along a country road and, upon gazing at the pond which skirted the highway, said: "Oh, how I would like to have my heated head in those cooling waters!" An Irishman, overhearing the exclamation, immediately replied: "Bedad, you might have it there and it wouldn't sink."

A Syracuse ghost had it all his own way until he stole a ham and a buckisaw. He was then waylaid with a club and "sent up."

PROMINENT PEOPLE.

Mr. Spurgeon talks more like an American than any of the great English preachers, so Dr. R. B. Stanton says.

Bret Harte's father married a beautiful, but uneducated, factory girl, and he educated her himself after marriage.

Jay Gould's latest hobby is for the study of antiquities, and it is said he intends to make his own investigations at Cyrus.

Gen'l. Sheridan's mother eighty-three years of age, still lives in the same house in Perry, Somerset county, Ohio, in which he was born.

Samuel J. Tilden has loaned for exhibition in the art department of the Louisville exposition his portrait, painted by Huntington, and the picture called "A Hopeless Case."

Gen'l. Crook, the Indian fighter, was a much stared at visitor in Washington. He is about six feet tall, weighs about 175 pounds, and his hair, somewhat sandy, is tinged with gray.

The head of a mammoth Texas steer, magnificently mounted and ornamented, has been presented by Richard King, a Texas "cattle king," to United States Senator Maxey. It is four feet between the horns.

Dr. Mary Walker has received notice from the commissioner of pensions that her services are not required. She is absent on leave, but has written to the commissioner that she will appear at her desk notwithstanding her dismissal.

Oliver Wendell Holmes attributes his years and good health to an early morning walk or horseback ride before breakfast. He was naturally of a delicate constitution, and when he married Doctor Johnson's daughter the father-in-law said to him: "If you have the necessary physique for horseback riding, do it; if not, take an early walk each day." He scrupulously followed the advice.

Mr. Mackay, the "bonanza king," has, according to a London newspaper, purchased a famous Rembrandt portrait from the Lansdowne for $25,000—"a large figure," the paper adds; but Mr. Mackay can doubtless afford it, since that paper gravely asserts that his income averages $9,000,000 a year, "and there does not seem any prospect of the mines from which he derives his wealth becoming exhausted."

Some of the best known dramatic professionals will seek the shades at Saratoga for a portion of the heated term this summer. Among them may be mentioned the following: Miss Emma Juch, of Her Majesty's Opera company; Miss Clara Louise Kellogg, Signor Brignoli, Mr. William Crane, of Robson & Crane, John McCullough, Signor Tagliapietra, Miss Rosalie Beecher and others.

We read that "Marie Rose is the only singer of distinction who is not afraid of catching cold. Nilsson treats her throat as she would a sick baby. Kellogg is afraid to venture out of doors twenty-four hours before she sings. Minnie Hauk goes to bed for days together and remains there in complete silence. Emma Abbott has the doors and windows of her room hung with blankets to keep out the draughts. Gerster wears a heavy shawl indoors in all weathers."

Senator Jones, of Florida, has been having a great time in Ireland. When he reached Balbriggan, his native place, he found nearly the entire population turned out to receive him, and although he has few relatives at present living there, and the principal object of his trip was to visit the family graves in Balrothery churchyard, he found the streets arched with evergreens in his honor, the buildings festooned with ribbons and flowers and the populace in holiday attire. He was received at the station by a large delegation and was presented with an address by the town commissioners.

A BUSY MAN.

Mr. Bijnn had been coming in late for several nights and reporting to his wife that he was busy until midnight. Her suspicions were aroused, however, and she interviewed one of his companions without telling him who she was.

'You know Mr. Bijnn?' she asked.

'Oh, yes, madame, quite well. He is a particular friend of mine.'

'You have been with him a good deal of late?'

'Yes, every night.'

'He is quite busy at night now, isn't he?'

'He has been very busy, indeed, every night when I have seen him,' and he laughed.

'Will you tell me the nature of his business?'

'Well, he was trying to walk on both sides of the pavement at once going home, and I assure you, madam, a busier man I haven't seen for a long time. If he has told you he was busy last night, you may take my word for it that he was telling you the unadulterated truth, and no discount to the trade.'

HE COULDN'T SWIM.

A temperance lecturer was after a man to sign the pledge.

'What are your principles?' he asked.

'To abstain from intoxicants of all kinds, and to do all in your power to prevent others from indulging and also to hinder, all you can, the sale or distribution of the essence of evil.'

'Nothing else?'

'No, except for medicine.'

'Then I can't join.'

'But why can't you?'

'Because I can't swim, and I'm too old to learn. I don't want to belong to a water society and stand out on the bank while all the other fellows are having the fun. I can stand up to the counter as long as the next one, and I guess there's no pressing demand at present for me to give up what I am acquainted with to tackle something I'm a stranger to. Good by.'—The Drummer.

NOT LEFT OUT.

There were five of 'em on the corner. One said that his wife was cleaning house and had every room upset.

The second observed that he had just left six painters at work at his house.

The third said he was tearing out partitions and building on a wing.

The fourth smiled sadly and added that he was going to have four ceilings whitewashed, three rooms re-papered, a chimney torn out and his hall widened.

"Gentlemen," said the fifth man as he drew a long breath, "I don't like to be looked upon as one who is trying to crawl out of his fair share of this world's misery, and I therefore take this opportunity of informing you that in order to buy new carpets and a parlor suite I have been obliged to mortgage my house and shall probably lose it."

ANTIPODEAN.

There is a fathomless gulf between Aristocracy and Democracy.

They are antipodean.

One is a privileged order, the other popular freedom.

Aristocracy creates and fosters class favoritism, and by enacted law and established usage, seeks throughout every department of life to make the toiling many subservient to the ennobled few.

Democracy denounces that as a pirate outrage on human rights and boldly proclaims, by word and act, that no mortal creature is entitled to exclusive or superior legal advantages, but that all are bound to stand on perfect equality before impartial law and ever subject to its provisions.

Aristocracy with bloated pride claims the excellence of blood-ancestral distinction.

Democracy justly declares that it matters not a stiver whether ancestors were princes or hod carriers, millionaires or scullions, achieved character for ability and honest worth is the sure and only passport to present personal renown, all else being naught but bogus repute.

Aristocracy worships wealth as the means for ostentatious display and the exercise of arbitrary power.

Democracy holds that practical simplicity is of far greater value and respectability than gaudy show, and that the proper mission of wealth is to exhibit the beauty of moderation, encourage works of benevolence and enterprise, aid human happiness, instead of feeding personal ambition and riviting tighter the fetters of poverty.

Aristocracy and Democracy are directly opposite to each other, like oil and water they cannot blend.

Under governments ruled by the aristocratic element the masses of the people are slaves.

Wherever Democracy bears sway the people are sovereign.

Such is the difference, and it is vital, involving life or death, liberty or serfdom.

Root out every germ of Aristocracy that dares show its noxious head in free America.

It will grow if it can.

Root it out!

The editor of the Trenton Times has got himself in hot water by inditing an article reflecting upon the virtue and good character generally of factory girls. The article created considerable excitement among the working class of Trenton, and on Saturday evening last the editor was hung in effigy by a large crowd of working girls. Editor Mott afterward attempted to justify himself for writing the article by saying he didn't mean anything by it. The girls, however, don't view it in that light. A newspaper should never be used as a means of slander or vituperation.

The Sparrow Must Go.

War against the sparrows has broken out in Washington. Major Lydecker, one of the three Commissioners of the District of Columbia, desires to exterminate them, and the well-known ornithologist, Prof. Elliott Coues, who is convinced that these little birds are a nuisance, has undertaken to show him how the work of extermination can be successfully carried on. He advises, first, that a part of the game law that forbids the killing of any sparrow, under a penalty of $2, shall be repealed; second, that the killing of sparrows within the city limits, except by the use of fire arms, shall be permitted; third, that a bounty of 2 cents a head shall be offered for the dead sparrows; fourth, that sparrows' heads shall be receivable for taxes at the same rate, and fifth, that it shall be the duty of those who care for the public streets and parks to destroy sparrows' nests, young sparrows, and sparrows' eggs. Prof. Coues believes that if the Commissioner shall adopt these suggestions he will win the lasting gratitude of the citizens of Washington. The sparrow is in his opinion, a nuisance that should be abated, and he says that he does not know of "a single ornithologist, entomologist, or botanist, whose knowledge of the case entitles his opinion to consideration, who does not take substantially the same view."

RIVER & HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS.

THE WORK DONE AND IN PROGRESS IN THE WATERS NEAR NEW YORK HARBOR.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—The Engineering Bureau has just received the annual report of Major G. L. Gillespie, Corps of Engineers in charge of the river and harbor improvements on the northern coast of New Jersey and southern part of New York:

In Flushing Bay the improvement had for its object the formation of a tidal basin by means of dikes, which by its filling and emptying through one channel would maintain a depth of six feet at mean low water after it had once been obtained by dredging. A channel of this depth, eighty feet in width and 1,900 feet in length, has been opened from the dike to deep water, and a branch channel made from Hill's dock to the dike. It is essential that the dike should be extended 2,700 feet, and that the channel be given a least width of 100 feet. For this purpose an appropriation of $40,000 is asked. During the year $7,247 was expended.

On Newtown Creek the channel westward, for a distance of 1,100 feet from the south draw opening of Vernon avenue bridge, was deepened to 18 feet at low water over a width of 75 feet, and thence 1,200 feet to the entrance the width was increased to 150 feet. It is recommended that the channel at Metropolitan avenue be deepened to 10 feet at low water, and that the project for the improvement of the upper portion of the creek be included in the plan already adopted for the reach below Vernon Ave. bridge. It is stated that a channel 100 feet wide and 10 feet deep would greatly advance the valuable commercial interests of the community, and would cost about $75,000. Diking may also be required, for which no estimate can be given at present. An appropriation of $75,000 is asked for, of which sum $21,000 will be applied to the work at the entrance and the remainder to the work in the upper part of the river. During the year $15,209 was expended.

No work was done on East Chester Creek. The amount available for continuing the improvement will be applied in dredging a channel 50 feet wide and 1,500 long, affording 9 feet at high water from Town dock down stream to near Kill Point, and in removing boulders. An appropriation of $30,000 is asked to be applied in extending the 9 feet channel from Town dock to Lockwood's, and in the construction of lateral dikes.

In the improvement of Canarsie Bay, $8,220 was expended in dredging out the channel between the east end of the north side and Canarsie wharf, resulting in great satisfaction to the fishing vessels. An appropriation of $20,000 is asked for the next fiscal year.

At Sheepshead Bay no improvements were made, because the appropriations were insufficient, and an appropriation of $30,000 is asked for, to be used in making a channel connecting the bay with Dead Horse Inlet.

At Sumpawams Inlet $6,861 was expended in dredging out a channel 10,000 feet long and 75 feet wide, beginning at the 5 feet curve, 750 feet southeast of the outer end of the railroad wharf; $15,000 is asked for the next fiscal year.

All of the appropriations for Cheesequakes Creek, N. J., have been expended at the entrance. Two stone jetties have been built for a distance of 1,000 feet from the beach, and a channel 65 feet wide has been excavated across the beach to a point 550 feet within the outer end of the jetties. The appropriation of $20,000 asked for will be expended in extending the channel and jetties.

No work was done on the Passaic River above Newark, but a channel 100 feet wide and 6 feet deep will be dredged through the obstructing shoals near Newark. An appropriation of $3,000 is requested. From the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge to the mouth of the river a channel is being dredged, and 55,067 cubic yards of earth were removed during the past year; $21,068 was expended, and $85,000 is asked for continuing the work.

In widening and deepening the channel between Kill von Kull and Arthur's Kill, $43,828 (the entire amount available) was expended during the year. An appropriation of $25,000 is asked for to deepen the channel to a uniform depth of 13 feet throughout the width of 400 feet.

The sum of $32,495 was expended in the continuation of the improvements of the Shrewsbury River, and $50,000 is asked for the next fiscal year.

On the Rahway River the work was confined to the formation of a channel by dredging; $4,766 has been expended and $10,000 is requested for a continuation of the project.

The improvements upon the Elizabeth River consisted in the deepening of the existing channel; $204 was expended in that work. It is estimated that $16,200 will be required during the next year.

One thousand dollars has been expended in the construction of a channel in Woodbridge Creek. The work is well advanced, and $4,000 is asked for its completion.

Jetties are being constructed at the entrance of Manasquan River, N. J., at a cost up to the end of the fiscal year of $2,393. Marked improvement has resulted, and $25,000 is to be used in extending the jetties and piers.

In Raritan Bay 56,200 cubic yards of earth were removed from the channel across the shoal off Seguine Point at a cost of $12,364. For the completion of the work $60,000 is requested.

Great satisfaction has resulted from the dredging operations in Matawan Creek, $6,155 having been expended in deepening the channel, and $9,000 is asked for the next year.

In Keyport Harbor $356 has been expended in opening up a channel to Raritan Bay, and $10,000 is asked for a completion of the work.

To Be Cashed At Last.

On April 1, 1875, an Easton lady, who holds a $1,000 bond of the Belvidere Delaware Railroad, received from Mr. Higgins, at the Phillipsburg depot, a check for $35, with interest. She took the check and with some money laid it away. The other day, in turning over some papers, she found the check and the money, greatly to her surprise, for she had never missed them. She doubted whether the check would be cashed, but on application to the railroad was told it was still good, and so, after eight years, she draws her money.

HIS OPINION.

IN CLEAR SENTENCES AN AUTHORITY ADDS HIS OWN TO THE POPULAR JUDGMENT.

191 West Tenth Street,
New York, Aug. 11, 1882.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:—I am slow to pin my faith to any new curative agent. Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster has won my good opinion. I find it an exceptionally cleanly plaster to use and rapid in its action. Many tests of its qualities in my own family, and among my patients, have convinced me that there is no other single article so valuable for popular use, none so helpful in cases of Lame Back, Local Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Congestion of the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs and Lumbago. You may feel free to use my name. H. H. KANE, M.D., Physician-in-Chief of the De Quincey Home. Price of the Capcine 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

Washington Rock!

The hotel at this historic spot having been destroyed by fire, the splendid site, with barn, sheds, observatory, monument foundation, oak grove, the two famous Rocks, and over twenty acres of land is offered at private sale. The many thousands who have visited Washington Rock know that the panoramic landscape view from its summit is one of the grandest in the country, and that the air is salubrious, and the water cold and pure. The site is one of the finest within 50 miles of New York for a hotel sanitarium, military school or summer cottages. A commission will be paid to anyone who sells, or sends a purchaser who buys it.

THE Netherwood Hotel is daily becoming more popular under the management of its present proprietor, Mr. S. V. Woodruff. The house is filled with guests and more room could be utilized for those desiring to come. It is the desire and anticipation of Mr. Woodruff to keep the hotel open for guests during the winter months. People who leave the city during the summer months are fast forsaking the sea shore for the mountains, and where can there be found more romantic mountain scenery and drives, pure air and water, in this State than at Plainfield?

MR. WM. P. BRINTNALL, who resided corner of 5th street and Madison avenue, this city, died suddenly from apoplexy Thursday of last week. His remains were interred at Woodlawn Cemetery, New York. He was a member of a large New York firm of dry goods merchants.

EX-FREEHOLDER Cornelius A. Runkle's name appears as counsel for Mr. Martineau in a divorce case, in New York, and it appears that after considerable litigation and borrowing money of Mr. R. to assist herself until alimony was obtained, Mr. Runkle procured the arrest of the husband, and in the meantime Mrs. Martineau's affections got the better of her and she signed a paper abandoning her action against her husband, and his counsel moved his liberation, to which Mr. Runkle objects as he has a lien on the alimony proposed to be paid ($6 a week) for the money loaned and services. —Rahway Democrat.

A Game That Two Can Play At.

Just What's Wanted

Woodcock!

It is not now legal to kill woodcock in this State until Oct. 1st. They can only be killed during the months of July, October, November and up to Dec. 15th. The months of August and September are "close" seasons. The penalty for infringement of the law is $15 in each case.

Another colored offender arrested for striking a woman, was fined $5.

New Music.

Two of the latest and most admired of vocal compositions are a Finland Love Song and "Her Picture," the music of both by Mr. Clark W. Evans of this city. This same author has recently finished an instrumental work called a Spinning Song, that will shortly be issued and which promises to be most favorably received.

Also an extra fine cider in bottles at $2.00 per dozen, to which he invites the attention of the public. Mr. Thorn guarantees these, as well as all goods sold by him to be pure.

Don't Miss the Chance!

Trotting By Plainfield Horses

There will be some unusually enjoyable speed contests on the Fair Grounds, tomorrow afternoon, between roadsters owned and driven by residents of this city. Mr. J. W. Johnson will present a silver cup and Mr. A. H. Smith a gossamer, to the owner of the horse trotting two separate miles the closest to six minutes, adding the time of the heats together.

Worth Knowing.

Very few people know that a letter mailed on a hotel-envelope which fails to reach the person addressed is sent at once to the dead letter office, notwithstanding the ten days' return notice on the corner. If you stop at a hotel and use one of their envelopes, always mark out the name and insert your own if you want your letter again, if it fails to reach the person addressed.

The Best of All.

The excursion of each season that is most expectantly looked forward to, is that under the management of Messrs Laing & Nelson. One reason of its success is the ability with which it is managed and the efforts that are put forth to insure the comfort and pleasure of all. Another reason is because the best bathing day of the year is always selected. Next Wednesday morning at 7:20 a. m., the train will leave here for Ocean Grove and Long Branch, and you will be sorry if you are left.

A Midsummer Knights—Excursion.

Messrs. B. F. Moore, J. VanSickle, M. B. Crane, A. Reichart and W. T. Walker composed the Committee in charge of the Second Annual Excursion of Perserverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., of this city. The Knights with their wives, children and friends, left Plainfield last Friday morning for Ocean Grove, accompanied by Grace Church Sunday School and older members of the parish. The day was a perfect one and the affair was an entire success.

Trotting.

The two most noted trotters in New Jersey, Star and Irish Lad have been matched to trot for $500 a side over the Union and Middlesex Counties' track on Saturday August 11th. This will be one of the greatest trials of speed that has taken place in this vicinity for a long while. With all things favorable the track will be trotted in the neighborhood of 2:28. Both horses are fast. Star has a record of 2:27¼, and Irish Lad 2:30¼. The match grew out of a club race the two horses had at Waverly a few weeks ago when Irish Lad beat Star who was short of work in 2:30¼ and 2:31. Both owners agreed to the selection of the Plainfield track as the best now in the State. Waverly track is in bad condition.

"Buffalo Bill" Coming.

The Cody & Carver Combination, formed by "Buffalo Bill" and the celebrated rifle shot Dr. Carver, is making arrangements to visit this city with its 70 horses and other accessories that are used in the great open air show now at Prospect Park, Brooklyn. The performance will be given on the grounds of the U. & M. C. M. A. Asso., during the present month.

Annual Re-Union.

The Third Annual Re-Union of the descendants of Sarah Tappen Bailey, Keiziah Tappen Crane, Samuel Tappen, Elizabeth Tappen Livingston, Jane Tappen Rogers, Benjamin Tappen, Isaac Tappen, Phoebe Tappen Smith, Susan Tappen Good, and their colateral relatives throughout the United States, will meet at Stone Bluff, Fountain County, Indiana, Sept. 20th, 1883. There will be addresses and entertainments of various characters for the amusement of the aged and the young. Our respected fellow citizen City Judge, P. P. Good, is one of the descendants above mentioned.

Court Proceedings.

The colored citizens of Plainfield appeared quite prominently before the Criminal Court at Elizabeth on Wednesday last. George Lewis, charged with entering and stealing sundry articles from Mt. Olivet Baptist Church, during a festival held there on the 7th of June, was placed on trial before the Judges and ably defended by Craig Marsh, Esq. The evidence failed to sustain the charges other than the theft of a towel, and the Court adjudged that Lewis pay a fine of $20.

The other case of local interest was that of Josiah Dunham, charged with assault and battery by Mrs. Cuff, formerly Miss Ella Williams. Mr. Coddington of Jackson & Coddington appeared for Dunham, and after a thorough investigation of the facts the Court held that the assault was merely technical and imposed a penalty of $5.

A Mile In Forty Seconds.

President Arthur, who passed through this city last Friday, made a very fast trip from Somerville. He ended his visit to Secretary of State Frelinghuysen, three miles from Somerville, at 11 o clock. At the Somerville station the railroad had placed at his disposal a special train consisting of a parlor car and Engine No. 169, said to be the fastest locomotive in the country. The train left Somerville at 11 32 and Elizabeth, 23 2-10th miles, at 11 55; at the Bay Bridge draw there was a delay of four minutes and the train arrived at Jersey City, 34 7-10th miles from Somerville, at 12.14, having made the run in 42 minutes, of which four minutes were wasted. This is said to have been the fastest run ever made on the Central Division. Competent persons assert that one mile on the down grade between Westfield and Cranford was made in 40 seconds. The regular express trains frequently make three miles on this grade in 2½ minutes.

It is with pleasure the many friends of Mr. Percy C. Ohl, of this city, learn that from the several patents of an electrical nature recently issued to him, one at least, an insulator for electrical conductors, is likely to bring him great profit. Telegraph and telephone magnates have taken an interest in the invention for its valuable properties and the result is likely to be of considerable pecuniary benefit to the inventor in the near future.

Temperance.

Under the auspices of Howell Division S. of T., Temperance meetings will be held every Sunday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, during the month of August and September, in Berry's Grove, entrance near the Grove street bridge. There will be speaking of interest and the public are invited to attend.

For Malaria.

The following is recommended by a correspondent as a sure cure for malaria. It can do no harm to try: "Take in the morning five drops of hartshorn in a little water; the next day take six drops, and so on increasing the dose one drop each day until fifteen drops are reached. Then recede, lessening a drop every day until you come again to the five drops, and, it is said, the cure will be complete."

The Peach Prospect.

The prospect of the approaching peach trade is now beginning to attract attention. One of the largest New York dealers who just returned from the peach growing districts of Delaware and Maryland estimates that the crop will be about two-thirds in quantity of last year's crop, but that the quality will be almost twenty-five per cent. better, unless warm rains during the peaching season should rot the fruit. He estimates about three-fourths of the whole crop is supplied by the peninsula, and the other fourth by New Jersey, which is cultivating the late sorts that pay best, and hereafter New Jersey will take the place of Delaware in producing late peaches. The late varieties bring as high as $3 a basket, as they are sought after by house wives for preserving after many of them return from their Summer trips.

New Jersey Crops.

The crop reports from different parts of this state still continue highly favorable that a second crop of clover is almost ready for the mower in some places and pasturage is remarkably good for this season of the year. The wheat and rye crops were also very large, and have mostly been safely garnered. Corn never looked better than it does now, and it is pretty certain that there will be one of the best crops ever gathered in this state. A drought may yet, of course, entirely ruin this crop, but this seems unlikely to occur. It is a rainy summer, and the probabilities are that it will remain so to the end. Oats are nearly ready to cut, and promise as well as the crops we have named, while potatoes are also in excellent condition and are yielding well. The frequent rains have also made this a great fruit year. On the whole, the farmers of New Jersey have reason to feel happy. While their crops are large, there is somewhat of a shortage in the West, and this will insure good prices.—State Gazette.

Driven Wells.

The Philadelphia Record in commenting upon a recently published article in the New York World, which favors Green in his enforcement of royalties for driven wells, says: "The World has been deceived by its correspondent. The Green patent has never been passed upon by the U. S. Court, for the very good reason that those who are using it to oppress the farmers of the country know it to be invalid, and final adjudication is the very thing they wish to avoid. In the United States Court, Southern district of Iowa, an elaborate opinion was delivered by Judge Shiras on May 9 last, covering this entire question of driven wells. In that opinion it was clearly shown, first, that the original patent of Jan. 14, 1868, is void for want of novelty and because of the abandonment of the invention by the patentee to the public; and, second, that the reissue dated May 9, 1871, embraces the application of a principle not covered by the original patent, and is consequently void. Farmers need not hesitate to drive from their premises any one who attempts to swindle them by means of an invalid patent like this driven well affair."

Out-Batted.

A return game between the Crescents of this city and the Elizabeth Athletic Club nine upon the grounds of the latter, Wednesday, resulted in the emphatic defeat of the Crescents by a score of 26 to 1. The pitching of Stone of the Crescents, upon which so much depended, proved most ineffective—the Elizabethans batting the ball all over the field and earning run upon run. The fielding of both nines was about equal.

Working in Company.

The New York papers contained the statement that Mary Traynor and Annie McKay, who say that they live in Plainfield, were arrested on Saturday afternoon in New York on a charge of shoplifting. It is alleged that they have been visiting a number of stores on Grand street and stealing articles, in all, of the value of about $80. One carried a basket and the other a shawl, in which the stolen goods were concealed. They were about to leave the store No. 271 Grand street when arrested. In the Essex Market Court they were held for trial. Who are they?

That Peculiar Shot.

A story started last week through the columns of a State contemporary, that while a marksman at the Brinton Range was practicing, his bullet aimed at the target, struck it and a meadow lark which happened to fly across the range at the time he fired, is pronounced incorrect. The man who made the shot was named Strong, from New York, and the meadowlark was not killed. It did not seem to have been struck by the bullet, but stunned by coming so closely to it while it was speeding to the target. It dropped to the ground, stayed there awhile, then got up and flew away.

A Life Saver.

The New York Sun of Sunday last says: Edward Stiner, an energetic young man who has charge of the boats at Woodbridge Beach, Staten Island Sound, has saved seven lives since July 3d. Three of the rescued persons were sons of Judge Brown of Woodbridge, who were upset in a sailboat. Another was H. Dickinson of Texas, who became exhausted while swimming. Miss Campbell, daughter of the Sheriff of Middlesex county, fell off the steamboat dock in thirty feet of water. Stiner pulled the young lady out. The other persons were James Foster, Jr., and a steamboat dock hand. Mr. Stiner, who will be married soon, has invited these seven grateful people to his wedding.

Aurora's Picnic.

Monday last was a gala day among the Germans of New Brunswick, the occasion being a Grand Annual Picnic held in Neilson's Woods, near that city, under the auspices of Aurora Singing Society, in which many other German societies out of town participated in. A large delegation from the Plainfield Saengerbund participated in the parade and exercises, during which the line was reviewed from the balcony of the Masonic Hall by his Honor, Mayor W. S. Strong, and the Common Council and Board of Freeholders. It was also reviewed by Governor George C. Ludlow, under the American colors. Dancing was indulged in for an hour or two when the grand concert took place, in which the Plainfield Saengerbund participated with honors. The Committee deserve the highest encomiums for the perfect manner in which everything was arranged and carried out. Grand Marshal R. H. Becker and his aids Messrs. Schussler, Zimmerman and others, deserve great credit for the manner in which they carried out their part of the programme.

Somerset's Apportionment.

The Somerset Messenger says: In the published list of delegates to which each county is entitled in the next Democratic State Convention, Somerset is credited with 16 delegates her vote at the last election for Governor being 3143. Taking the aggregate vote of the townships that number (16) would appear to be all we are entitled to. But we are allowed to apportion the delegates among the townships according to the respective vote of each. Hence we shall have 17 delegates. The vote for Governor in each township in 1880 was as annexed. The right-hand column shows the number of delegates to which each is entitled under the new rule of one delegate for every 200 votes or fraction over 100. Where a township cast less than 200 votes, of course one delegate will be allowed:

WE are now, and have been for two weeks, in what are generally called the dull days of the year. The business community generally complain of dull trade. The farmers being busy with the harvest and farm work, do not come to town in as large numbers as usual, and those who do stay but a short time and hurry off to again get at their work. They do not take time to make any purchases except such as are absolutely necessary, and as a consequence there is less of ready cash in circulation among business men.

THERE is a hot water craze. Somebody has found out that hot water has strange medicinal powers. The medicinal journals are talking about it, and everybody is drinking it. It has got itself into the good books of fashion. It is not unpleasant to take, and more than that it is asserted people actually become fond of it. It assists digestion and helps astonishingly in numerous other ways. It is to be taken before breakfast, at dinner and before going to bed. It is a gentle stimulent.

PERTH AMBOY.

BY E. HAMILTON LEE.

The name of the point upon which Perth Amboy stands, (having the Raritan river on one side and the waters dividing the town from Staten Island on the other,) appears from the book of the proprietors of East Jersey to have been originally "Ompoge" and to have been changed to Ompo, Ombo, Ambo, and finally to Amboy. Perth was added a compliment to James, Earl of Perth, one of the second set of proprietors, received as partners by William Penn and others, who purchased from the widow of Sir George Carteret, the first proprietor.

The land on which Perth Amboy is built was bought of the Indians in the same honest way that Penn negotiated for his territory. The first deed on record relative to "Ompoge Point" was given by the Indians to Augustine Herman, and it is dated the 26th of December, 1651. The bounds of the grant were as follow: "From the mouth of the Raritan creek westerly into a creek at the uppermost end of the great marsh called Mankackewahky,"—now called the Raritan great meadows,—"which runs northwest into the country, and then from the mouth of the Raritan creek aforesaid, northerly up along the river,"—the Sound between Perth Amboy and Staten Island, behind Staten Isle into the creek Pechciese, namely—"from the point called Ompoge into Pechciese, the aforesaid creek,"—now Elizabethtown point creek, or Elizabethport creek,—"and so up the said creek to the very head of it; and from thence direct-westerly through the land until it meets with the aforesaid creek and meadow ground called the Mankackewahky." The whole of this territory was included in a larger grant made to another person by other Indians, and the conflicting claims caused a suit in chancery. It was found necessary to prohibit by law any purchases from the Indians unless sanctioned by the proprietors of Jersey; that is from those who held the grant from Carteret and his associate Lord Berkeley.

Finally this Ompoge Point and the tract above mentioned was purchased by the twenty-four proprietors of East Jersey, and they laid out a town on the point, which was then called Ombo, and in compliment to the Earl of Perth, (one of the twenty-four) they named it Perth Ambo, which was soon changed to Perth Amboy.

Amboy was commenced on a plan drawn by Garvin Lawrie, a proprietor, and at one time the deputy governor of the province. This scheme was adopted by the Council and the city was divided into one hundred and fifty lots, each of ten acres; the price to those who purchased before the 25th of December, 1682, was fixed at fifteen pounds sterling, and one year after at twenty pounds. Four acres were reserved as a market square, where the park is seen now. In the early days of Perth Amboy there were a few remarkable men in the village; among them may be mentioned Barclay, the apologist for Quakerism; Dr. Lewis Johnston, an eminent physician and student of nature; and Samuel Neville, an English gentleman, who lived and died there, and who edited a magazine there as early as 1759.

In 1709 Queen Anne permitted New Jersey to issue paper money, and although it used to be printed with the words "to counterfeit is death," many spurious bills were soon circulated. They were manufactured in Dublin and agents sent hither with them. But the great band of counterfeiters were detected and dispersed a short time before the revolution, during the rule of Gov. William Franklin.

In those days some parts of New Jersey were as wild as a western wilderness, with here and there a solitary farm house and patch of pumpkins and Indian corn. In such a place lived an Englishman of the name of Ford. He was occasionally seen at Morristown, Elizabethtown, and even at Amboy and Burlington. He appeared to be an honest thriving yeoman, but although the owner of a considerable portion of land, little of it was cultivated, and no one knew how Ford could appear so "well off," and do so little work. The tract he owned remained a wilderness, and several extensive swamps were situated on it, near which neither path nor road approached. His only companion was one of his countrymen named King, who was in appearance a hired laborer, but no fruits of his labor appeared. After a time Ford was missed altogether. King said he had gone home, on the death of his father, to take possession of property that he inherited in consequence.

After a time he returned and then it was found out what he and King had been doing for a long time. He, at first, came out to this country as agent for the Dublin counterfeiters, but conceived a plan for making the bills on the spot. He had been successful in circulating the false bills, and purchased the land which he thought would suit his purpose. King was his confidental agent; and with the utmost secrecy they conducted a den, part cave and part house, in the depths of a swamp, to which ingress nor egress was known or could be effected, except by the two villians. Ford then went to London, made himself somewhat acquainted with engraving, and procured the types, ornamental cuts, portable printing presses, tools and moulds for coining, and all the materials he wanted for his secret abode and laboratory. He returned and commenced his operations with the materials and the skill acquired in London. Accomplices were necessary for the distribution of his manufacture, and he had the art to seduce many of the farmers and respectable yeomen of the surrounding country into the practice of buying his spurious money and circulating it, and that without communicating the secret of his workshop or the hidden path that led thereto.

They continued their nefarious trade for several years, but in, 1773 another gang of confederated counterfeiters and coiners arrived from New England. They spread themselves in the towns and villages from Woodbridge to Middletown.

Two of them, pretending to be silversmiths, set up business in Perth Amboy. The quantity of base coin and counterfeit bills excited the vigilance of the Government, and it is believed that the new set of confederated rogues led to the detection of Ford, King & Co. In the meantime the public being on their guard, the agents of Ford among the people ceased their operations, and as business being dull in the way of passing bills, he conceived the bold design of making up all deficiencies by robbing the treasury. In that undertaking he was successful and for a long time was not even suspected of the robbery.

The treasurer of the province, Stephen Skinner, lived at Perth Amboy, and the treasury was in his house; the money in bills was kept in an iron chest in the office. In 1768, the office was found to have been entered in the night, the iron chest opened, and upwards of one thousand pounds carried off. It was not until six years after, that the perpetrators were known to be Ford, King, Cooper, and three soldiers belonging to a regiment quartered in the barracks at the time of the burglary. In 1774 Cooper, being convicted of counterfeiting, and under sentence of death, confessed that he assisted Ford in accomplishing the robbery of the treasury, and received three hundred pounds for his share. He said the plan was Ford's; that he procured the necessary information as to the situation of the chest, the manner in which the treasurer secured the key in his chamber, the mode of obtaining access to the chest, and if necessary to the treasurer's bed-room, and assigned to each the part he was to act in the business. They were to remove the chest if possible; if not they were to break it open in the office; if that failed, they were determined to enter the bed-chamber, murder the inmates and secure the key.

Long before the confession was made, several of the counterfeiters had been apprehended, and one who had been intrusted with the secret of the hidden path to the den of the coiners and counterfeiters, betrayed the secret. The officers of justice were led to the place, and entered the swamp by a passage that only admitted one man at a time, and that by creeping for some distance in a posture that rendered him helpless. Both Ford and King were taken by surprise, detected at their dark work, and surrounded by the evidences of their guilt.

Their detection led to the discovery of their accomplices, the farmers and reputable people of the country and the agents concerned in the circulation of the base coin and forged bills; and you may judge of the consternation of the public and the wretchedness of the wives and relatives of those deluded men, when five or six highly respectable freeholders (among them a physician and a justice of the peace) were apprehended, imprisoned, tried and convicted of the crime of passing false money, designedly and in concert with the vilest rogues. During their trials the country around Perth Amboy was in a state of agitation beyond description.

The prison and the court of justice were thronged with their friends and their wretched families and relatives. Some of these unhappy men had seen their error and ceased from the practice long before. One of them was so respected by the congregation to which he belonged that they had elected him a deacon, and upon his accusation and imprisonment, the clergymen of the parish publicly prayed "that he might be delivered from false accusers;" and a report having been spread that the accused was released, thanks were returned in the church. But they soon knew that he had confessed his guilt. These unhappy criminals were all sentenced to be executed.

In the meantime Ford and King, the arch villians, being both confined in Morristown prison, contrived by the aid of one of their accomplices who was still at liberty, to break jail and escape; and notwithstanding proclamations of rewards and the most active pursuit, they were never taken; while Richardson, the fellow who assisted them, was apprehended, convicted and hanged. Another of the coiners suffered death; but the miserable misled men who had been seduced to be accomplices, by aiding in the circulation of the forged bills, were first respited, and finally pardoned.

There will be 401 votes in the electoral college next year, 201 being a majority. The sixteen Southern States that went Democratic in 1880, will go the same way in 1884, for the "great Southern 'movement'" is a confessed failure. It culminated in 1882, and will disappear after the next campaign, in which it will meet the fate justly due to such unnatural and dishonest bargains. Those sixteen States will cast 153 votes for the Democratic candidate, leaving only 48 votes to be gotten in the remaining twenty-two States, most of which went Democratic last year.

LITERARY NOTES.

The North American Review for August opens with a very spirited discussion of "Moral Instruction in the Public Schools" by the Rev. Dr. R. Heber Newton and the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton. Henry D. Lloyd exposes the tricks and speculation in grain. "Woman in Politics," by ex-Surgeon-General Wm. A. Hammond, is a caustic discussion of certain facts of nervous organization which in his opinion render the female sex unfitted for participation in public affairs. Hon. Francis A. Walker reviews "Henry George's Social Fallacies." The evils resulting from "Crude Methods of Legislation," both national and state, are pointed out by Simon Sterne. Charles F. Wingate writes of "The Unsanitary Homes of the Rich," and there is a joint discussion of "Science and Prayer," by President Galusha Anderson and Thaddeus B. Wakeman. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York, and for sale by booksellers generally.

The Magazine of American History for July is excellent in every particular. The conclusion of Mrs. Lamb's series of articles. "Wall Street in History," covers thirty or more pages, and is superbly illustrated. The illustrations include views of the gold and silver vaults in the Sub-Treasury, and of the "Boiling Rooms" in the Assay Office, with seven or eight fine portraits of prominent Wall Street men. "Cannibalism in North America," by Rev. Charles F. Thwing, the second article, will surprise and interest innumerable readers. "The Republic of Texas," by Captain Potter, U. S. A., is well written and entertaining. Joel Benton contributes a charmingly romantic essay, entitled "An Unpublished Chapter in Noah Webster's Life: Love and the Spelling Book;" The Hon. George Bancroft, an interesting document concerning "Virginia in the Revolution of 1689;" an appreciative tribute to Peter Cooper follows—whose portrait graces the first page of the Magazine; and "Charlestown's Appreciation of her Early History," form a rich table of contents. The Departments of Original Documents, Notes and Queries, Historical Societies, etc., are well filled. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for August is even more brilliant than usual; the variety and excellence of the contents are highly creditable to the editor, and commend it not only to religious but to general readers—they combine most edifying, entertaining and instructive reading. No. VII. of Religious Denominations in the United States, "What is Episcopacy?" is contributed by Rev. Charles H. Hall, D. D.; there are portraits of the late Bishop Channing Moore, of Virginia, and Wainright, of New York. "The American Pilgrim in Palestine," by De Leon, and "Among the Natives of the North," by Lieutenant Schwatka, are continued. There are also interesting articles by Ida Hervey, Rev. W. W. De Hart, Alfreton Hervey, Rev. H. Benham, Rev. H. M. Field, etc. The charming stories "The City of the Sun," and Mr. Burke's Nieces," are continued, and there are essays, sketches and poems of rare merit. The editor, T. DeWitt Talmadge, contributes "Helpfulness," and a sermon to the Home Pulpit, "Spice in Religion." The miscellany is abundant and the illustrations profuse. No family should be without this excellent magazine. Price 25 cents a copy; $3 a year, postpaid. Mrs. Frank Leslie, Publisher, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

In fact, it is believed by eminent dairymen that the coming cow will have less of the Jersey than other breed. —Flemington Democrat.

Two young men were working in a clay pit at a brick yard at South River, near New Brunswick, Monday July 23d, when one left for awhile. When he came back he missed his companion, but presently saw his feet sticking out of the clay. When taken out he was dead. It is supposed the man fell asleep in the pit, and was smothered by falling earth, a large portion having caved in.

Michael Quinn, a Queen's county, New York, deputy sheriff lost his life in saving that of a woman at the depot at Woodside, L. I., Sunday week last. The woman stood on the track in front of an approaching train, seemingly unable to move, and at the cost of his own life Quinn caught her in his arms and threw her from the track. He leaves a wife and family in straitened circumstances.

POETRY.

YOU ASK ME TO SHOW YOU BEAUTY.

BY MRS. M. A. KIDDER.

If you ask me to show you beauty,
  Apart from the red and white—
Apart from the shining tresses
  That gladdens the poet's sight—
I'll show you a face that's cheery
  And weareth a sunny smile;
I'll show you the charm of sweetness
  In lips that speak no guile.

If you ask me to show you goodness—
  The real, the true, the grand,
Proclaimed not upon the housetops
  Or trumpeted through the land
By the owner thereof—I'll show you
  The man who forgets himself,
And lays, in his zeal for others,
  His prejudice on the shelf.

If you ask me to show you riches—
  The treasures of sea and shore,
Apart from the gold and silver
  In its shining, goodly store—
I'll show you the rich blood flowing
  In a million human veins;
I'll show you that health's perfection
  Is greater than earthly gains.

If you ask me to show you wisdom
  Far greater than scholars teach—
The knowledge that comes of trusting,
  And seems out of earthly reach—
I'll show you the soul contented;
  That sayeth to pride, "Be still;"
The meek and the lowly spirit
  That bends to the Father's will.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

IN MID AIR.

'My dear Fred, will you not give up this hazardous life?'

'Yes, Annie, when this season is over I will abandon it forever, and we will get married and settle down.'

The young girl blushed deeply at the words of her lover, but she did not resist the arm that was thrown around her waist, and drew her closer to him, or the kiss that followed. In fact, she was very proud of his handsome face and manly form, but his dangerous profession—that of a trapezist—made her tremble for fear of accidents, and continued to plead that it should be given up.

'You have now some money, Fred—I a little, am an orphan as well as yourself, and we are all in the world to each other.'

'Indeed we are, Annie; but har fortune threw me into the life I am leading. It was a hard school I was trained in. I know little else, and after so many years of toil it would be almost foolish if I neglected the golden opportunity before I renounced it altogether.

'I believe you love it almost as well as you do me,' she replied with a smile.

'Not one thousandth part as well! And yet I must owe there is something attractive to me in the breathless swing—the hanging from the dizzy height—the dead leap in mid-air that makes the heart of every looker-on stand still.'

'And mine among the number,' she said with a heavy sigh.

'Have no fear, darling. Practice has made me so perfect that there is not the slightest danger.'

'Danger there always is, Fred.'

'I can see none.'

'You have to depend a great deal upon others, do you not?'

'Certainly.'

'And failure upon their part, carelessness—the breaking of a rope might be fatal.'

He could not deny it, though he made light of it, quieted her fears as best he could, and turned the conversation into another channel—the one that is nearest and dearest to young hearts.

For a year they had been acknowledged lovers, and there was no one to say them nay. He had striven to educate himself, and rise superior to iron fortune—had succeeded as men of resolute will ever do—had been frugal and saving, with the determination of some day turning his back upon tent, spangles and sawdust, and taking the place in society to which he felt he had a right.

And so it was in a measure with the girl who had become very dear to him and done much to strengthen his good intentions, to keep him from wandering into the paths that have been the ruin of so many who the world applauded to the echo for a time, only to forget as new faces came—who floated upon the topmost waves of success, to be the more certainly wrecked upon the dangerous rocks and dragged to the bottom.

She, like himself, had been early orphaned and knew something of the hard lot of being brought up by distant relatives—begrudged the little food she ate, and made to toil beyond her strength. But this was over now, and her slender fingers made her needle fly as she thought of the future.

And that future they talked of long and earnestly, laid their plans and made themselves supremely happy in what was to be. There was no single cloud save that of fear entertained by the girl for the safety her lover, and again and again it forced itself upon her mind, and found utterance from her lips.

'It is but a few short months,' he replied, 'before the tenting season will be at an end, and I am free. Now I am bound by a contract the most lucrative I have ever made, and to break it would be ruinous. There is little to be feared, my darling. All will go well. Winter will soon come, and then good-bye to this wandering life.'

'But only think how much time will elapse before I see you again. If I could only be with you, it would not be so bad. But I fear—fear that I shall never see you again.'

It was the old story of tears and comforting and promises to be faithful; and months indeed passed before they again saw each other's faces. But, as he had predicted, all had gone well. Fame as well as money had been gained by the young and daring trapezist. He stood at the very head of his desperate profession and the hearts of women stood still and strong men held their breath when he hung high in mid-air and leaped—a wonderful distance—from one swinging bar to another. Had it been the olden days of Rome they would have crowned him with the victor's laurels, borne him upon their shoulders, made him rich in gold, and hailed him as King of Athletes.

And now the last night came that he was to appear before the public—the very last night of the season, and that of his benefit. Well might he be proud of it. Well might he look longingly for it, for the substantial reward it would bring. A favorite with all, volunteers has been far more numerous than was usual, and the management more liberal. A whisper had reached them that he thought of leaving, and they were doing their utmost to bind him so as to secure him another season.

He had left Annie early to make the necessary preparations—but met her again as soon as he dressed—dressed in the most magnificent garments he had ever worn and her gift—the work of her own hands—and drawing aside as much as possible they talked gayly, much more than was customary for her to do, for she appeared to have forgotten all the fear for his safety.

'I feel, darling,' she whispered, 'that to-night is to be the greatest triumph of your life.'

'And the last.'

'The last!' appeared to be echoed by a stern voice, and they turned hastily around, but could discover no one near, and believing their ears had deceived them, she continued:

'How I shall glory in your success, Fred.'

'And I in outdoing myself for your dear sake.'

'Besides, it is so much pleasure for one to know that it is for the last time.'

'The very last?' was whispered to their ears as if by the lips of the wind that found its way through the little rents in the canvass.

Both started more fitfully than they had done before, and released the hand they had been pressing.

A horse—one of the finest in the stud—had been led out and was standing near the curtain that concealed the ring and spectators, ready to make a dashing entree.

By its side, but the opposite one to them, a woman was standing, black haired, brunette in complexion, with a tall suple figure, and eyes that flashed with almost more than human brightness. For a single instant Annie caught the expression of her face, and saw the line of sharp, white teeth that broke the intense red of the full lips, and drawing back with a shudder she could repress, she asked:

'Who is that, Fred?'

'She is known by the name of Cuban Queen'—is the best woman rider I ever saw—brave, dashing and fearless.'

'Has she been with you all summer?'

'Yes; but why! Are you jealous?'

'No, but—' and she blushed under his earnest glances.

'Well,' he continued with a smile, 'you might have had reason if you had been with us. Certainly I might have had her for a wife, had I but given her the slightest encouragement.'

'Does she love you?' and the voice of the girl was as low and sad as the beating of the waves upon the reaches of the silver sand.

'I believe she would have done so if I would have let her. But there was no danger of that, darling,' and he called her attention to the beauty of the horse.

The Cubanese had also been engaged in conversation, though a very brief one—only consisting in asking one of the riders if that was the girl the trapezist was to marry, and receiving an affirmative answer. Then she hid her face—one famed for its tragical beauty, but now almost devilish with the spasm of jealous rage that distorted it—for a moment in the flaring mane of her steed, conquered her emotion with a powerful effort, wreathed her lips into the studied smile of the artist, and stepped toward Fred, and said in a skillfully modulated voice;

'Let me congratulate you in advance upon the success of your benefit.'

'And let me thank you for the kindness you have shown in the matter.'

He would have introduced her to Annie but the girl had turned away, and so he he continued:

'You know that this night ends my connection with the company. Be assured, however, that if, in the future, I can do anything to promote your success or happiness I will do so, and hope you will feel free to call on me.'

'You are to be married?' she asked, without even a word of thanks.

'Yes. Will you come and dance at my wedding?'

'Certainly—when are you married.'

He did not notice the emphasis upon the latter part of the sentence—had no time to do so, for even as they were uttered the bell summoned the fair rider and she leaped unassisted, upon her horse and dashed into the arena. Then he called Annie again to him, and they took a place where they could see her speeding around the circle, while the air rang with plaudits. And well it might; such matchless riding had never before been seen—probably never would be again—and the horse she rode, goaded far beyond its trained and regular pace, ran and leaped as if entirely unbroken.

'The devil is in that woman to-night,' said one groom to another. 'Yes, and in the horse, too. I never knew her to ride with a spur before.'

'A spur!' was echoed in astonishment.

'Yes, I saw her get one of the ring master, and that she is using it you can tell by the firey leaps of the horse. He never would stand such a thing, and if he doesn't break her neck he will his own. By heaven! just look at her face. Her eyes are flashing like balls of fire and her teeth are set hard. I believe she is either drunk or crazy.'

'Pshaw! it is only her hot Spanish blood. Something has gone wrong, you may depend. But if she makes that leap over the garters with the horse running at that mad rate she is gone. No! She is safe. I never saw anything to match it in all my life.'

She is indeed safe, though she had taken desperate chances sufficient to break down a dozen necks, and as she sprang lightly from her foaming horse a flash of triumph shot from her black eyes, and scornfully disdaining the bouquets that had been flung at her feet, she rapidly disappeared, leaving the clown to appropriate and make merry over them.

Another act or two (very tame after the last) and the king of the trapeze—as the Cuban was the queen of the arena—was called to take his place. With a single word to the girl he loved, he sprang into the sawdust circle, and bowed low to the storm of applause—one wild enough to have turned a less steady head. But coolly, perfectly collected, he cast his eyes over the vast assembly, and a bright light came to them, and a truer smile to his lips, as he saw where his Annie was seated, looking at him with a not to be concealed pride.

He braced his muscles, drew up his head, ran his fingers lightly up through his curling chestnut hair, he thanked all for their presence. The dress he wore showed his finely knit figure to the greatest advantage, and flashed with every movement as if covered with stars and diamond dust. His face was glowing with health and hope, and many were the eyes of admiration that girlhood turned toward him as he swung lightly from bar to bar until he had reached the topmost one as easily, apparently, as a bird would have flown.

Feat after feat of the most dangerous character (so it appeared to the uninitiated) was performed and then came the crowning and final one. That it required a clear head, great precision and calculation, cool nerves and immense strength was evident to all from the minuteness and carefulness of the preparation.

The king of the trapeze stood leaning against the centre-pole and seemingly watching the proceedings, while he regained his somewhat overtasked breath, in reality more intent upon the beaming and anxious face of his love than any thing else.

'The feat now about to be performed,' said the master of ceremonies in explanation, and to do away with something of the tedium of waiting, is one that has never been attempted by any other man, and upon this occasion the leap will be greater than ever before. But as it is perilous beyond all description, I must beg the most perfect silence."

A net was about to be stretched so as to save the performer in case of falling; but he motioned that it should not be done, saying, so as to be heard distinctly by all:

'There is no use of that. I will—desire to make the jump without it—make one that will be long remembered.'

Those who understood the matter the best were the most thrilled by the words, and the same groom who had given vent to his feelings with regard to the dashing Cuban, whispered to his comrade:

'I believe they have all gone mad. Heaven give safety, but I wouldn't venture (even if I could do it as well as he) for the whole concern.'

'Is all ready?' asked Fred, as he ran his eyes swiftly over the slender cords and bars that were to be to him as the spinnings of fate.

"Ready!"

He kissed his fingers apparently to the audience, but in reality to the girl he loved, seized a rope, climbed to the first bar—then another and another until he reached the last, cut the others loose and performed all the various acts he had before gone through with from that dizzy height, and with as much certainty and seeming as careless as if but a foot from the ground in place of nearly a hundred.

Then he rested, and braced himself for the final one—the daring, thrilling, unmatched leap in mid-air, from one swinging trapeze to another, and failing to catch which at the proper instant and cling to it was death.

Backward and forward he swung, while a breathless silence reigned, prepared himself for the desperate feat, fixed his eyes upon the treacherous bar to which he must spring and fasten upon, shot through the air almost like a flash of light and clutched it safely with his hands, was struggling to gain a seat as the wild huzzas that could no longer be controlled burst from every lip, and then the supporters gave way, and with a mighty crash, he fell backward to the ground!

Women shrieked and fainted in terror, men were awe-stricken and incapable of action; but even in that swift descent was was heard above all the cry of "Annie!"

Carried from the ring with the form of the girl he loved wildly clinging to him, instant aid was obtained, but though no bones were broken, it was the opinion of the physicians that his recovery was doubtful, the jar had been so great and there might be internal injuries.

The sports of the ring had ceased, the audience been dismissed, but did not stir. Sorrowfully they waited and whispered with white lips, for some final tidings, something beyond mere uncertainty.

The company were gathered around the injured man with tearful eyes, and the grief of the girl would have melted the heart of stone. And silently there stood the fair Cuban, wringing her hands, and with the muscles of her face working tempestuously. But she was a woman, would naturally feel more deeply than men, and nothing was thought of it.

Meanwhile, even as the white-winged angel of life and the black-winged one of death were battling for their prey, an investigation was being made into the cause of the accident by those whose duty it was to see that all was safe, and upon the blame would fall the most heavily.

Ropes and bars were found to be intact. It was the iron rings that had broken, and wondering at this, they stood with them in their hands, when one of the physicians, (and by chance a chemist) who was in attendance came along, and had his attention called to the matter.

'This fatal fall,' he said, after even the most casual observation, "has not been the result of accident, but of premeditated malice upon the part of some enemy. The iron rings have been honeycomed, and rendered as brittle as glass by some powerful acids, rubbed over with varnish to hide it from detection. Whoever did the deed had murder in their soul."

At that instant came the murmur that the injured man had aroused from his stupor; had spoken, that there was no longer any doubt of his recovery.

'Thank God!' burst from the lips of all.

Even the pallid, ghastly face of the Cuban queen flushed, and she turned away when the other news—the treachery with regard to the rings—came to her ears, and hastily freeing herself from the press was lost to sight.

But almost instantly the double report of a pistol was heard, and rushing in the direction of the sound they found that she had shot her horse and then herself, and was lying gasping for breath, and with the life-blood swiftly flowing from a wound in her side.

'Beyond all help,' was the instant decision of the physicians; 'but can anyone tell the meaning of this?'

'I loved him; he would have married another. I tried to kill him—failed, and oh! God, I—'

They were the last words of the beautiful and passionate woman, but told the entire story, few as they were—was as the condensation of an entire volume.

From the admiring gaze of the public disappeared two stars on the same night. One we can follow to a home of light, love and happiness. And the other?

"I would rather kiss your beautiful lips than the picture of a saint. How do you know who had just kissed that picture before you did?"

"And if you were to kiss my lips, how would you know who had kissed them just before you did?" was the sharp reply.

THE QUAKER'S REPLY.

Among the people who came to our market the other afternoon, was a citizen of West Jersey. He brought a stock of eggs and butter.

In a big coop in the rearmost part of his wagon he had a splendid peacock, whose tail spread out, beautiful even to georgeousness, like the tail of a lady's dress. An Irishman passing observed the splendid plumage of the bird and inquired the price.

'Thee can have it for fifteen dollars,' was the reply of the owner, whose garb indicated him as a member of the Society of Friends.

'That's a good price,' interrogatively remarked the Celt, as he smoothed the ample tail of the feathered biped.

'There is plenty that will give that for him,' was the placid and very truthful rejoinder.

The Celt surveyed the bird, admired his proportions, but still endeavored to cheapen him.

'Mister,' said he, at last, to the grave gentleman who had the bird for sale, 'mister, people say that these birds have a very bad voice.'

'I have nothing to say about their voices,' was the quiet reply. 'If thee wants the fowl thee can take it.'

'But don't thim birds holler like the d——l?'

'Friend,' was the placid rejoinder, 'thee evidently has acquaintance that I have not. If thee thinks that the scream of this bird is like to that of thy friend whom thee has named, I will not contradict thee.'

The next minute the Celt was in the opposite stall in the market, buying a ten cent bunch of carrots. He bought no peacock that day.

EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

TO DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEES.

The Chairmen of the several county committees are requested to send their names and post office addresses to Richard F. Stevens, Secretary of the New Jersey Democratic State Central Committee, Bayonne, N. J.

Democratic papers will please copy.

DEMOCRATIC.

The Democratic State Convention of Pennsylvania, held at Harrisburg last week for the nomination of an Auditor General and Treasurer of State, was a large and harmonious gathering. The candidates selected rank high as citizens of character and ability, and the resolutions adopted utter clearly the safe and substantial principles of Democracy.

We extract as follows:

"The Democracy of Pennsylvania, true to the fundamental faith of their party, reassert their belief in a strict construction and rigid enforcement of the Federal Constitution."

That is genuine Democratic doctrine, the faith of Jefferson, Madison and Jackson.

That has been the distinguishing trait of the Democratic party from the very adoption of the Constitution to the present time, and it remains to be as positively so as ever.

In peace or in war, Democrats have ever contended that rigid obedience to the plain letter of the Constitution, not as designing men would have it read, was real loyalty.

Again, the Democracy of Pennsylvania declared that

"They believe in such taxation of the people as is requisite for the necessities of the Government economically administered, and that import duties should be so adjusted in their application as to prevent unequal burdens, encourage productive industries at home and afford just compensation to labor, but not to create or foster monopolies."

That is exactly the kind of tariff we have advocated as honest and of practical utility.

It is such as the country needs.

It is not wild free trade, nor is it mercenary prohibition.

It would encourage every species of legitimate industry and amply guard every department of labor.

It is for the people, not grasping monopolists.

It is honest protection.

Coming from a tariff State like Pennsylvania it demands respectful consideration.

Further, the Pennsylvania Convention resolved

"The people should not be taxed one cent for surplus."

That is an everlasting truth.

It is Democratic from end to end.

It justly rebukes the corrupt scheme of those Philadelphia politicians who had the brazen impudence to propose the continued raising of large surplus revenues for distribution among hungry State wolves like themselves, and which the Republican Convention foolishly adopted as a platform plank.

And—

"The existing surplus in the Treasury should be faithfully applied to the payment of the public debt."

That is wise finance.

And—

"The money not needed for the expense of the Government should remain in the pockets of the people."

To which every honest man will give assent.

And—

"We insist on reserving the public lands for actual settlers."

That, too, is level-headed Democracy, the opposite of which has taken millions on millions of acres of the peoples' valuable domain and given them to gambling speculators.

The Democrats of the Keystone speak well.

Democracy is the truth.

The peoples' good its only aim.
It seeks no loftier meed of fame.

NOW AND THEN.

The New York Times, an organ of the Republican party, the other day spoke thus—

"Dorsey, the star route thief, is detested for his villainies and despised for his falsehoods by every honest man in the country."

Three years ago, the same Dorsey, now publicly branded as a miscreant by a prominent editor of his own party, was engaged in the "star route" business and a trusted agent for the purchase of Republican Presidential success.

Then he was a great and honored patriot.

At a banquet given in glory of victory, the name of Dorsey was quaffed with glee, and his services in connection with the vote of Indiana made the topic of special praise by gentlemen claiming high toned intelligence and moral excellence.

Down with hypocrisy.

Dorsey is just as honest in 1883 as he was in 1880.

The leopard cannot change his spots.

* * *

There are a great many reasons why the Republicans should cease to be in power at Washington. Not the least are the following:

The Boss Sheperd Ring frauds in the District of Columbia.

The safe burglary iniquity.

The whisky frauds reaching to the White House.

The Freedman's Bank swindle.

The Belknap impeachment.

The Robeson naval frauds.

The Sanborn frauds.

The Indian Bureau frauds.

The Pension Bureau frauds.

The Black Friday rascality.

The theft of the Presidency in 1876.

The Indiana bribery in 1880.

And the star route frauds, not to mention a long list of other offenses any one of which ought to, and would, overthrow any other political party that ever existed in this country.—New Brunswick Times.

* * *

Hon. Richard Merrick, the Chief attorney for the Government during the trial of the Star Route thieves, was interrogated the other day about the case and in answer said:

"Oh, I had a beautiful jury, an unparalleled jury. There were four negroes, a crank, a man with mania-a-potu, a Welshman, who can neither read nor write any language." This is the kind of jury a Republican Administration furnishes to try a set of thieves who have robbed the Government of $4,500,000. It is high time that the Republican party be deposed and honest men get control of affairs.

FINE PEACHES IN NEW JERSEY.

The peach crop in Monmouth county, N. J., gives promise to be the largest known for years. The trees are loaded down. Prices will range low. In some sections a new disease has attacked some of the trees, causing them to wither and die with the fruit on their branches.

STATE ITEMS.

A married man has been arrested in Boonton for a criminal assault on a little eight year old girl.

After a full trial of the Edison incandescent light the citizens have made a contract to light the streets of Roselle for one year, with some fifty lamps, at $18 per lamp. Fifty houses are already lighted by electricity.

John D. Shute, of Mantua township, Gloucester county, has five acres of Early Rose potatoes, from which he will gather 2,500 baskets. He has just commenced to dig them, and from less than an acre he filled 500 baskets.

The West End Hotel at Long Branch, consumes 4,000 pounds of poultry a week, the price paid averaging twenty-five cents a pound; after thinking this matter over can you wonder why the chickens have taken to the woods?

The Grand Army of the Republic State encampment of New Jersey will be held from Sept. 3d to the 8th inclusive, at Princeton Junction, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, between New Brunswick and Trenton. The grounds secured are spacious, with plenty of shade and excellent water.

It was discovered the other day that the new track of the Burlington County Agricultural Society was just nineteen feet short of a half mile. The committee found it out on measuring the track to put in the quarter poles. The mistake was made by the engineer and will be rectified at once.

One day recently a resident of Cranbury picked up a land turtle on which the marks S. C. H—y, 1829, were quite legible, although the animal was evidently a very old one. Rev. Dr. Symmes C. Henry was no doubt the full name denoted by the initials, he being at that time pastor of the First church, Cranbury.

The New Jersey Republican State Executive Committee met in Jersey City Friday of last week, and a report was made of the condition of the party in every district of the State. It was decided to hold the State Convention on September 19th, six days after the Democratic nomination will have been made.

On Tuesday of last week a boy was engaged in ploughing in Burlington county when he saw an enormous black snake lying stretched on the ground near the fence. Frightened by the reptile the boy dropped the lines and ran for the house. Reinforced by several members of the family he went back, when one of the horses was found lying on the ground with the snake coiled about his neck. The snake was killed but the horse had been choked to death.

Northern philanthropists have given more than $25,000,000 to the South for educational uses since the war.

Montana will knock at the door of Congress next Winter and demand admission into the Union as a State.

If it required $432,000 to secure a Republican majority in Indiana, and the price of votes was two dollars each, Republicans must have been alarmingly scarce in that State at the beginning of the campaign.

In tearing down an old house near Warm Springs, North Carolina, a few days ago, the skeleton of a mail carrier was found, with a leather mail bag containing over 30 letters of the date of 1827, some of them enclosing old bank bills.

Private carp ponds give their owners fun as well as food. When the fish are wanted for the table, the proper way is to take them with the line, and, if the carp are of good size and not over-fed, they will afford as much excitement as can be had from angling for bass.

Jay Gould is credited with the remark "that people now study advertisements in a newspaper as they do receipts for doing things scientifically, because the science of advertising is successful to show where the best and cheapest goods of all kinds can be purchased."

Time works remarkable changes. An ex-soldier of the Confederacy, on trial for larceny at Beaufort, S. C., the other day, was defended by a colored lawyer, who made a pathetic appeal for the man who had lost an arm in the service, but the court gave him two years in the penitentiary.

Important to School Teachers.

County Superintendent of schools direct the attention of candidates for teachers' certificates to the following regulations recently issued by State Superintendent Apgar:

Every applicant for a certificate is expected to pass examination in the county in which he is teaching, or in which he has made an engagement to teach.

Every applicant who has not secured a position, if a resident of the State, is expected to present himself for examination in the county in which he resides; if not a resident, then in the county nearest his place of residence.

If, as a matter of convenience, a teacher desires to present himself for examination in some other county than the one in which he is teaching, or expects to teach, he may do so with the consent of the Superintendents of the two counties. In such case the examination papers are to be sent to the Superintendent of the county in which the applicant resides, or in which he expects to teach, by whom they are to be graded, and the certificate —if issued—is to be granted.

A teacher, changing from one county to another in which he has never taught, must, when he applies for a certificate, present to the Superintendent of the county in which he proposes to teach, a recommendation from the Superintendent of the county in which he last taught. This rule is to apply to applicants for each of the three grades.

CAPT. Chase escorted "Linen Duster" as far as New York, on Tuesday last, and saw the gentle female safely aboard a train bound for Ogdensburg, from whence she proposes to travel to her parental ancestor's home, never more to return to Plainfield. All in accordance with the views of City Judge Good, who thus exiles "L. D." because she is not wanted within our city limits on account of her loose morals.

Scotch Plains Fire Department.

Provision against fire has been increased in the township of Fanwood by the arrival, during Wednesday of last week, of a four-wheeled, double Babcock, extinguisher, for the Scotch Plains H. & E. Co., No. 1. The officers of this organization are:

Foreman—F. C. Gibbs.
1st Assistant—Geo. M. Wahl.
2d Assistant—P. P. Radin.
Secretary—J. B. Martine.
Treasurer—J. A. Bahr.

A trial of the new apparatus has proven its capabilities.

Closed for Repairs.

The Crescent avenue church is to be closed for three weeks to allow interior decorators to touch up its walls. Services will be held in the chapel during Sundays hereafter.

Base Ball.

The Crescents, since their recent game with the Elizabeth Athletic Club, will never again trust in Providence, and propose doing their best to defeat a nine from New Providence, to-morrow. A game with the Stars of this city is an event of the near future, that will settle the "championship" of Plainfield.

Temperance Meeting.

The temperance meeting will be continued in Berry's Grove next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when interesting addresses are expected. A large assemblage of citizens last Sunday afternoon listened to an able and instructive discourse by Chauncey Shaffer, Esq. The public are respectfully invited to be present at the coming gatherings in the Grove.

Make Them Give Bonds.

The Philadelphia & Reading R. R. Co. ask of the Council permission to erect temporary trestles under the street bridges until a contemplated reconstruction of such is completed. Our city fathers before granting the petition, should bind the R. R. Co. to some date when the proposed building shall be finished.

Grand Encampment.

There will be a grand Summer encampment under canvass of the Grand Army of the Republic of the Department of New Jersey at Princeton Junction, from the 3d to the 8th of September inclusive.

There will be guard mountings and other military exercises each day. Fireworks on Tuesday and Friday evenings, sham battles on Wednesday and Saturday. Preparations are now in progress to make this a grand time for all who attend.

At the Hotel Netherwood.

Varied and enjoyable entertainments at the Hotel Netherwood, are of almost nightly occurrence. Since our last issue there has been one particularly large ball, a minstrel show by the waiters, and several lesser hops, concerts and parlor readings. Next Wednesday evening, Mr. James S. Burdette, the talented elocutionist, will give a benefit performance that promises to be unexcelled in its line. The Plainfield public should attend in a body, if only as its duty.

Miss Shores Must Go.

"Linen Duster" has again put herself within the pale of the law, and Tuesday was arraigned before Judge Good in the court room of the City Jail. Mayor Maxson appeared for the City and Jackson & Codington for the defendant. A plea of non vult was entered, and sentence was suspended provided Miss Shores would leave the State. It will cost $13 to send her to "her folks" in New York, but she will thereby be gotten rid of cheaply—if she does not come back again.

They Bathed in Fresh Water.

The rain of Thursday last, was very much of a damper upon the proposed pleasure of the Mt. Olive Baptist excursion, to Ocean Grove. The five car-loads from this city, spent the day seeking shelter from the rain in pavilions and bath-houses, under sheds and wherever else standing room could be found, and four other excursions shared the continuous shower-bath with the Plainfielders. Why the railroad company would not allow the use of the cars as shelter, was not apparent.

Out-Door Festivities.

Tuesday, Aug. 28th.—Excursion of the First Presbyterian and Trinity Reformed Sunday Schools to the Highlands of Navesink.

Thursday, August 16th—"The Best of the Season." A grand picnic by Plainfield Eng. & Hose Cos. No. 2, at Wooden's Grove. Refreshments, dancing, and all pleasures of the season. If stormy postponed for one week. Tickets 25 cents.

Thursday, Sept. 6th—Water Excursion to Roton Point, Conn., including a magnificent sail up the Sound, by Plainfield Engine Co. No. 2. Tickets $1—children, 75 cents.

To-Morrow's Great Trot.

The match race to be trotted on Saturday next at the Plainfield track will doubtless draw a large crowd of the admirers of good horses. The race will be trotted on its merits and the best horse will win. The gentlemen owning the trotters are business men of Newark and do not trot horses as a profession. Star and Irish Lad with Adele Gould and Billy Button rank among the best horses which New Jersey has produced. Such a race as this will give precedence to our track and will likely be only the beginning of a series of contests of a high character. The track is being put in proper shape this week and with a fair day a great success will be scored on Saturday. The admission is fifty cents and twenty-five cents extra for the grand stand. This race being under the management of Col. Edwards of Newark, it will be necessary for stockholders of the Fair Association to purchase tickets of admission. The Directors having leased the track and grounds for that day the race is not under the management of the Association.

Carmon Parse, Esq., Cashier of the First National Bank, and wife, departed on Tuesday for the Adirondacks, to be absent a week or two.

The Com., stated its dissatisfaction with the gas furnished the city, and it therefore withheld the bill of the Plainfield Gas Light Co.

Vroom, $10; M. Kline, $7.50; A. Runyon, $3; Ford & Stiles, $18; Lyon & Vail, $30. Warrants ordered drawn.

The rules were suspended, and Mr. Jones of the Police Com., reported as correct the claims for police services in its hands. Ref'd to the Aud. Com., reported by it as correct, and warrants ordered drawn. (The settlement of the claims of G. W. Grant and P. Burgan were on motion, postponed, and warrants for $37.50 each on account of the same were ordered drawn—Mr. J. Simpson voting in the negative.)

Mr. Coriell moved that when a special policeman be put in place of a regular ("off duty"), he be paid no more than the regular would be paid.

Moved that the motion be referred to the Police Com., as well as the question of paying two officers for the same duty on account of the sickness of one.

Subsequently tabled and the Council adjourned.

Frightful Accident at Metuchen.

An accident occurred on Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock on the crossing of the Lehigh Valley Railroad and the main turnpike, Metuchen, which came very near resulting in the death of Mr. and Mrs. George Reighton, a married couple, living in the neighborhood of New Brooklyn. Reighton, who is a carpenter, had taken his wife in a buggy for a pleasant drive through the country. At the time stated they were nearing the crossing indicated, but they were not aware that an engine on the Lehigh road was approaching rapidly, drawing behind it a number of empty water cars. The engine was steaming up from Perth Amboy and Reighton only made the discovery of its nearness when the crossing had been reached, and it was then too late to cross over or to turn back. An instant of agonizing suspense, a piercing scream from the lady, and then the engine struck and killed the horse, tore the buggy into fragments and dashed its occupants out on the crossing. Reighton and his wife lay where they had fallen and it was feared at first they were dead. Both were found badly injured about the body. Mrs. Rieghton was injured internally and had to be carried to her home. The horse and buggy were worth $300. Dr. Andrews of Metuchen is attending the injured lady, whose husband has recovered from his bruises. The crossing is a very dangerous one, and there should be a flagman there at all hours. Mr. R. is a son-in-law of Mr. John Emmons, residing on Park avenue, this city.

Gored by a Bull.

A few days ago, T. D. Polhemus, of Middlebush, drove out a bull which had broken into his field, and supposed the animal had left him; but when Mr. P. turned away the bull sneaked up behind him, caught him on his horns, threw him up in the air so that he fell on the bull's back and then to the ground. The infuriated beast then seized him again with his horns and tossed him over the fence, and going around through the open bars he again assailed Mr. P. (who from the first moment of the attack was unconscious) and hooked him about on the ground, pawed him, and pushed him partially under the fence, where bleeding and mangled two neighbors found him, his clothing torn in shreds, and the enraged monster standing over his victim; for, providentially, Mr. Tunis Huff, a neighbor, who was driving a wagon at a distance, saw the bull stealthily following Mr. P., but his shouts of warning were unheard. Mr. Huff left his team standing in the road, called for help, and ran with all his might to the scene of the encounter, where in less time than it takes to tell it, the bull had nearly knocked the life out of his victim, before Mr. Huff and an assistant arrived. Then only by a vigorous application of pitchforks did they succeed in driving the bull away. After wrapping the unfortunate man in a blanket they took him to his house near by, and the feelings of his distressed family can be imagined. Dr. Fisher was soon on the spot, and found that a rib had been crushed, an eye pushed out of Mr. P's. head, and innumerable other bruises inflicted over the body. The unfortunate man was delirious for several days and the object of anxious care by physician and friends. Contrary to all expectations, we are glad to say he is now recovering rapidly from his dangerous encounter, of which, however, he remembers nothing.

Sons of Veterans.

At a meeting called for the purpose of organizing a camp of Sons of Veterans, held in the parlors of Dr. Mattison, Commander of Winfield Scott Post, on Tuesday evening last, Mr. Burlingame acting as Chairman and John H. Carney as Secretary, the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That all sons not less than seventeen years of age, of deceased or honorably discharged soldiers, sailors or marines, who served in the Union army or navy during the civil war of 1861-65, are cordially invited to join with us. For years our fathers have instructed us to love our country and flag. For years our fathers have reminded us of their sufferings in prison pens, and the hardships incident to strife and bloodshed on the battlefield. For years our fathers have sought to have us remember that the 30th of May was sacred to the memory of our dead heroes, whose memories must be kept green and graves decorated on that memorable day. We are told we cannot join the Grand Army of the Republic. This decision has caused us to unite in forming an organization called the Sons of Veterans. We are now organized and are banded together in friendship, charity and loyalty; and our ranks are cemented by the blood of those who sleep their last sleep on the battlefield. The question has often been asked who will continue the beautiful ceremonies of memorial day when the last comrade is called to the presence of the Great Commander? That question is now answered. Your sons and lineal descendants will do it, for we are in training for the good work. We are welded together by paternal ties, and our unity will secure peace to our government from strife within and enemies abroad. Our object is to inculcate patriotism and love of our country, not only among our own membership but among all the people of our land, and to spread and sustain the doctrine of equal rights, universal liberty, and justice to all.

The Present Laws Settle It.

Councilman Serrell offered the following, Monday evening, for adoption as a part of a proposed ordinance:

SEC. 5. Any person driving a horse or other animal either separate from or attached to a vehicle, shall concede to the rider of any bicycle or tricycle the same right of way that is conceded to other vehicles, under penalty of one hundred dollars for each offence, and imprisonment for a term not exceeding thirty days, at the discretion of the Court.

Certain Councilmen who desire the entire liberty of the thoroughfares for their own vehicles, "kicked" against granting any right of way to the "methods of locomotion" adopted by others. All Courts, however, before whom the question has been brought, have decided that bicycles are vehicles and the common law protects them in the same way and gives them the same privileges as other carriages. So in spite of one Councilman's expressed wish to "shoot" bicyclers, and another's implied intention of running over any who ride past his horse from behind, justice will protect the wheelman.

"Let Her Go!"

The Gazelle picnic that was postponed from the 2d inst, will take place this (Thursday) afternoon and evening in Wooden's Grove. Everything possible has been arranged to make this the best of the season.

An Entire Success.

The excursion of Laing & Nelson to Ocean Grove, Wednesday, proved to be one of the most pleasurable of the season. The day was a perfect one, bathing especially good, and the "run" there and back unusually fast. These courteous managers richly deserve the success they always achieve.

The huckleberry crop is very large and the berries are cheap.

WESTFIELD WISPS.

Miss Ella Welch is spending a week at Ocean Beach.

Henry Hosford and family left on Wednesday morning for their summer vacation at Lake George.

Mrs. Samuel Godschalk and her two sons Harry and Frank have gone to Ocean Beach for a week's recreation.

On Saturday Lud Clark, Jr., was struck by accident with a base ball bat in the back of the head making quite a wound. He was able to go to Jersey City Sunday.

Wednesday night August 1st, A. A. Drake, Esq., had his stable broken open and a set of double carriage harness stolen therefrom. No trace of the thieves has yet been heard of. Mr. Drake ought to have had his large mastiff in the barn, which would no doubt have saved him the loss of his harness.

On Saturday afternoon last the Westfield base ball club played a return game with the Roselle club on the grounds of the former. The result was—as usual—a defeat for the home nine with a score of 18 to 16. The Westfield boys ought to reorganize once more and then probably they might win a game.

On Sunday evening last Miss Wilson, school teacher at the Union School House, Branch Mills, came to the Presbyterian church with a friend, and left a satchel with her pocket-book, containing eighteen dollars in money, in the buggy under the church sheds. After the services were over, she found that the satchel had been stolen together with its contents. It is a poor place to leave money, in a wagon under a shed, without somebody to watch it.

On Tuesday after the return of the Westfield excursion, one of the brakemen of the train discovered that his hat, together with the conductor's, had been stolen from the car. He notified officer Marsh, who suspected the parties that had done the deed, and watched them until they had got home with the hats. Upon questioning the party his answer was he had seen another boy steal and hide them, and he went and got them and was going to take them home. Which story was very thin, and no doubt will prove so when the Court meets in October.

The annual excursion of the Presbyterian and Baptist Sunday schools together with the Willow Grove, Branch Mills and Locust Grove, occurred on Tuesday last. It left Westfield depot at 7.45 a. m., with sixteen cars, containing at least one thousand people. There was quite a number from Cranford and Scotch Plains. The committee in charge of the excursion were very courteous, and did everything in their power to make it pleasant and agreeable. Upon the arrival of the train at Elizabeth it was divided in two sections, the sixteen cars being too much of a load for one locomotive to make time with. They arrived at Asbury Park at 9.30. The day was as fine as could be wished for. It was good bathing at the beach nearly all day. The water seemed to be alive with human beings, both old and young. Nothing occurred to mar the enjoyment of all. The train left Asbury Park at 5 p. m. and arrived at Westfield at 6:30, which was fast time from the Park to Westfield. It was the Boss excursion of the season.

JOHN HARPER'S FORTUNE.

How it Came and Went and was not Regretted in the least.

'Past 7 o'clock and John not here!' said Mrs. Harper, wrinkling her pretty brows. 'I wonder what can be the reason?'

Tea was all ready on the little round table in the middle of the room; the copper kettle hummed merrily on the coals and a bunch of buttercups and wild columbine on the table betrayed the fact of Mrs. Harper's country walk that afternoon.

Nellie Harper and her husband, John, had been married just two years, and a happier couple it isn't often one's lot to see. They had married on an income that would scarcely furnish gloves and bouquets to some of Nellie's fashionable school friends; but with strict economy and carefully looking after the odds and ends, they had found it sufficient, and not until the baby was born did Nellie begin to feel uneasy as to financial matters.

'John,' said she, 'we ought to lay up a little for baby's sake.'

'So we ought, my dear,' said John, cheerily, 'and so we will.'

'Our income is very small,' sighed Nellie.

'You never said so before, Nell.'

'Ah, but we never had baby to care for before,' nodded wise little Nellie.

So John took extra writing from the law stationer at night to earn an odd penny for a little savings bank book, and Nellie spent her leisure hours in writing fanciful sketches for a New York story paper, which paid her a dollar apiece, money that seemed like fairy gold to the young authoress as it came in week by week, and yet the savings bank account so slowly grew.

'John,' said Mrs. Harper, 'we have fifty dollars laid up, haven't we?'

'About that amount,' said Mr. Harper, looking up from his law copying.

'Laura Don's husband tripled his capital by buying up 'Swamp Island' shares on Wall street last week, and selling out again when the market promised well. I am sure if you were to trust the money to him you might double it in—'

'And I am sure, Nell, it would be a great deal easier way to get rid of it to throw it down the well!'

'John!'

'No speculation for me, my dear,' said the young man. 'I've seen quite enough of that sort of thing. Small gains and sure—that's my motto.'

'Then you'll never be a rich man in the world, John,' retorted his wife, slightly piqued.

'I must take my risk of that, my dear.'

And so Mrs. Harper's attempt at inspiring her husband with speculative ambition fell flat.

But she didn't leave off thinking of it for all that; and to-night, as she sat waiting for her husband, and watching the sleeping cherub in his cradle, she wove an unconscious web of fancy about the little slumbering form.

'If we were only rich! If baby Charles could but have a college education, and go abroad, and take his place with the wealthy and honored of the land,' she murmured.

For every true woman is as ambitious in her heart as Napoleon Bonaparte himself. And all of a sudden a masculine footstep rang on the threshold, and John Harper burst into the room, flushed and eager, and panting with the unwonted haste he had made.

'John, what has happened?'

'What do you guess, pet?'

'Your salary has been raised.'

'Better than that.'

'My story has been accepted by the 'Weekly Star!''

'Better than that.'

'I give it up,' said Nellie. 'Oh, John, tell me at once—what is it?'

'Cousin Sam is dead and he has left me all his money.'

'Cousin Sam!' repeated Nell.

'That eccentric old fellow out in P——,' said John, sinking into a chair and fanning himself with the brim of his hat. 'My third cousin. He disinherited his daughter because she didn't marry to suit him; made at least half a dozen wills, and burned them all at last, leaving a codicil that makes the fortune mine. Hurrah! We're rich at last, pet? Eighty thousand dollars at least. Three cheers. And give them with a will?'

'Oh, John, take care! You've waked baby!' cried Nellie, flying to the side of the crib.

'Bother baby! Let him cry a little; it is good for his lungs. We can have a patent perambulator, and a nursery fitted up with all the modern conveniences, eh? That's something that's worth brawling for, isn't it, little, chubby cheeks?'

'Oh, John! And then we'll have Uncle and Aunt Mary to live with us,' said Nellie, trotting the baby on her knee.

'Uncle and Aunt Mary! 'What should they live with us for?' retorted Mr. Harper, somewhat contemptuously.

'But, John, they are so poor!'

'There are a great many poor people in the world, Nell.'

'And Cousin Will's education,' hazarded Nellie. 'We can help him through college now.'

'Well, I'd like to know what business it is of ours to help Will Brown through college,' said Mr. Harper. 'Nobody helped me through college, I know. If we're going to divide our money with all creation, there will soon be an end of our riches,' said he rather shortly.

Nellie looked timidly at him. How unlike was his manner to that of her penniless, light-hearted husband of twenty-four hours ago, who would lend his sole remaining dollar to a friend, and shared his last crust with a beggar.

'We'll have a house on Fifth avenue, pet,' he continued, excitedly; 'and—'

'Oh, John, I would much rather live in the country,' pleaded Nellie.

'I wouldn't then. The city for me.'

'Yes, but John—'

'Mrs. Harper, you will please to remember that the money is mine, not yours,' said her husband, imperiously.

Nellie recoiled as if some noxious insect had stung her, and bit her lip, while her eyes filled with tears.

'Good thing for me that Mary Potter threw herself away on that drunken fellow,' observed John, as he sat down to the table and began nervously crumbling up a slice of bread. 'It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good.'

'But, John, you will surely make the girl an allowance?'

'Make her an allowance? I shall do nothing of the kind. Why should I?'

'Because the money should be rightfully hers; because she is deprived of it by a mere caprice of her father; because we are neither more or less than thieves if we take it from her!' cried Nellie, earnestly.

'Nellie, you're a fool?' said John, disappointedly. 'Do look at things from a business point of view. The money is ours.'

'But it will be no blessing to us if it is wrongfully come by.'

'I am the best judge of that, Mrs. Harper,' said the husband, stiffly.

Nellie burst into tears.

'John you never spoke to me so before.'

'And you never made such a fool of yourself before.'

'I wish the money was at the bottom of the sea,' sobbed Nell.

'That's a woman's logic,' sneered her husband. 'Hello! what's that?' It was the postman with a letter. 'From Davis & Brown, Cousin Sam's lawyers,' said Mr. Harper, as he broke the seal. 'Vigilant, wide-awake fellows. I think I shall continue to employ them. Eh? How—why! What's this? The deuce!' The letter fell from his hands; he looked blankly at his wife.

'Oh, John, what is it?' cried Nellie.

'They've found another will,' said he, 'dated ten days later than any other document, and every cent is left to Patty.'

'I am glad of it!' exclaimed Nellie, heartily.

John Harper arose and walked once or twice across the floor; then he came back and stooping over, he kissed his wife's forehead. 'I am glad of it, too,' said he. 'Do you know, pet, I think I shouldn't make a good millionaire? I was getting grasping and greedy. I felt as if all the world was in league to cheat me. I am rich enough with you and baby, and I can carve out a fortune for myself! And neither John Harper nor his wife grudged poor Patty her stroke of good fortune.

TOWN CHILDREN IN THE COUNTRY.

The boys naturally took to the water like so many Newfoundland puppies. Wherever there were brooks and quiet pools they were to be seen at any hour of the day fishing, swimming, wading. One bright-eyed little sportsman, who had provided himself with two formidable bean-shooters gravely asked his host if the woods back of the garden was "gamy."

The boys were always saying queer things which convulsed the jolly farmers with laughter.

"Who watered those plants last night?" asked a little fellow at Guilford, catching a first glimpse of dew on the grass.

"My eye! what big lemons!" was an exclamation called out by squashes in the garden.

"I say, who owns all the robins round here?" was another very amusing question.

At Old Lyme, an urchin could not repress his astonishment when he saw a man digging potatoes in the field.

"Haven't you any barrels in your cellar?" he asked, contemptuously. "Why do you keep 'em stowed away in the ground in that way?"

One little maiden near Essex was not distressed when she found that she had no playmates in the house. She had her doll, and that was company enough. She chose a sheltered corner of a front yard as her nursery, and every morning went out to sing her dolly to sleep, her favorite lullaby being a popular religious hymn. Across the road lived a country lad of her own age, who at once began to annoy her by repeating her music in a high key, with numerous variations. For two days she paid no attention to her troublesome neighbor. On the third her blood was roused. She propped up her doll against a post of the fence, marched across the road, with flashing eyes, and cuffed her audience of one boy about the ears.

"Now, just see here," she exclaimed, "I came here for two week's fun, and I mean to have it!"

The boy fled riotously, and the moral effect of the demonstration was marked. The sturdy little maiden was suffered to have her fun in peace and quiet until it was time for her to return to the city.

The pathos of neglected childhood softened many a heart.

There was the motherly little maiden who, accustomed to looking after her agile brother, discovered on the second day that he had shed a button, and sedately produced from the depths of her pocket a pill-box labeled, "For Johnny. Take one every hour." The hourly dose was only a button, which she proceeded with great earnestness to sew on his jacket.

"What do you think Heaven will be like?" asked a teacher in one of the city mission schools during the autumn.

"Oh, I know! I know!" exclaimed a little girl. "It will be like the country!"

Perhaps she had seemed thankless and indifferent while she was there, but the country remained in her mind a blessed and restful thought.—Saint Nicholas.

WHO IS IT?

A few days ago the Treasurer of the United States received a letter enclosing a draft for $4,000 signed "Unknown Debtor," and asking that the sum be placed to the credit of the United States. The World speculates upon the sender as follows:

This at once raises the question, who can this unknown debtor be?

He cannot be one of the Star Route thieves, for the Department of Justice has just succeeded in proving, at an expense of $700,000, that they never stole anything.

He cannot be one of the Whisky Ring thieves, for the last ungathered rose on that blooming tree of rascality was just compromised a judgment of $150,000 for $1,000.

He cannot represent the land-grab subsidy grabbers. When they begin paying in conscience money they will have to send in not forty-nine hundred but forty-nine million dollars.

He cannot be one of the Navy Ring, for in the long list of steals, peculations and frauds from the days of Robeson to the days of Chandler no one was allowed to disgrace himself by stopping at so pitiful a sum.

He cannot be one of the Credit Mobilier statesmen. They have all been whitewashed until they look like plaster angels around a church door.

He cannot be one of the carpet-bag Governors, for we sent the last of these gentlemen to jail a few weeks ago for stealing an overcoat.

He cannot be a granite contractor nor a friend of Hill's, for they all lost money.

He cannot be a Senator who has saved up a million dollars out of his pay of $5,000 a year, for those gentlemen made their money in outside deals.

It cannot be Howgate; we are sure it is not Howgate. Howgate is not that kind of a man.

It cannot be Ottman, nor Biles, nor Crowley, nor Hasing, nor any one we think of that has Government money that does not belong to him.

The likeliest explanation is that it is some Republican statesman who expects to get an office, and who has the forethought to return a percentage of the money he proposes to steal.

This is the only possible explanation of the mystery. The certainty about it is that it comes from a member of the grand old party.

THE BATTLE OF ARDMORE!

Being a Graphic Account of a Fierce Domestic War.

The sunshine never kissed a lovelier day, nor blessed a fairer scene. All the land, and the sky and the clouds were clad in the beauty of June. The lanes were fringed with emerald; the round-eyed daisies peeped out from the billowy fields of grass, and daintier wild flowers of the woods nestled like gems in the velvet moss. Down in the meadows the buttercups gleamed like buttons of gold. Over the low hills the soft winds whispered to the leaves about other summers, and down through the shadowy woods the little brook laughed and sung and babbled like a child playing by itself. Here and there a cottage nestled among the trees. The distant calls of children came rippling across the fields. The long road wound away, yellow and quiet, until it turned out of sight beyond the little church with its snowy walls and slender spire.

How quiet and peaceful all the world lay before the window of my prison that day in June! Far away the note of a meadow-lark came, and was heard no more. Now and then the whistle of a robin; at times the twitter of a bluebird. It was such an afternoon as you would wish to endure forever. White-winged peace smiled in the sunshine, and sang with the zephyrs and the brook, and the far-away calls and scarcely heard laughter of the children playing somewhere unseen. Its music is the crown of the lays' beauty and tranquility.

THE BUGLE CALL.

Clear, mellow, distant, four or five notes of a bugle ring out over the low hills, and come echoing down the forest aisles. How my heart leaped at the sound of the bugle call! How my blood went surging through my veins like a tide of lava! Out of my prison window I look with straining eyes. In the fluttering leaves I can see no glitter of bayonets. I listen, but down the road or across the meadow I can hear not the rumble of a battery hurrying into position. How silent is all this! And yet not silent enough. I want the wind to hush, and the leaves to keep still, and the brook to stifle its babble and laughter. I am listening for a foot-fall, the crackling of a twig, the muffled tramp of a column of men stealing through the woods under leafy cover. I am listening for the neigh of a horse, a clatter of rythmic hoof-beats, a ringing carbine-shot. Peering out of the window of my lonely cell, I am listening—ever since that first bugle-call came winding over the hill I have been listening—for sterner music than the robin's note and the wood brook's murmur.

"March!"

There it is at last? I can see nothing from this window. The voice comes like a far-away echo of the bugle—a boyish voice, softened into music by the day and the distance. I picture to myself the fair haired Lieutenant who commands the skirmishers. All those days made men of the boys; the schoolboy fought beside the veteran, and the Adjutant of 20 messed with the Colonel of 40. Will the line never come in my sight?

"Halt!"

Silence again, and once more the bugle calls down the unseen line. Now I can hear the tramp of feet amid all the terrible hush of preparation. All about me the tide of battle will sweep, save only where I can see it; and I—penned in this prison like a caged rat, with ringing bugle and clanking saber calling me out, shouting my name in words that burn and ring and ring again—and I am here.

THE MARCHING HOSTS.

"March!"

Away off the tap of a drum, the flam, flam, flam, cadencing the step of the marching column. Nearer it comes, and further away it sweeps, faints into quiet at last.

Tramp, tramp, tramp. Muffled, yet distinct, and stepping nearer with every foot-fall. "There they come?" shouts some one. I hold my breath; I press my hand to my heart and wait for the first shot from the skirmishers.

"Ready!"

The click of a musket so close it seems in the room where I am. Gods! I listen for the sound of the boyish voice again. It seems to me, in my excited condition, there is a childish treble to it. I wonder if—

"Fire!"

How the cheers, pealing up in waves of sound, drowned the crash I was listening for! Again the boyish voice calls, "Fire!" and again the shrill cheers follow. They hush as the bugle-notes come pealing down the line again. I hear the wheels as a battery is hurrying forward. I hear a drum beat. I hear the tramp of hurrying feet. Some one is calling for "the flag." Once I heard—so close the tide of battle swept to my prison—a saber spring from its scabbard with an angry sweep. And all this time I could only see the golden sunshine—only the fluttering leaves and the playing shadows lengthening into the waning day; and floating in at my window came the mellow whistle of the robin.

The cheers are fainter now, as the shadows grow longer. The robin's note has ceased. Mellow, clear, and beautifully imperious as ever, the bugle calls again. A pall of silence falls upon the clamor and din of the battle. I try the door of my prison. It yields to my touch. Down a stairway, with a noiseless tread, I hasten. I step through a curtained door. I stand on the field where the waves of contention have thundered and dashed. The level rays of the setting sun drift over the helpless figures stretched about me like a blessing upon the dead.

At my feet the overturned cannon lies. There are its shattered wheels. Lying across the brazen muzzle, "his back to the field and his feet to the foe," is stretched an artillery sergeant, still grasping the broken saber in his nerveless hand. Here is a group of infantry soldiers; they will never stand upon their feet again. Here is a trooper; headless he lies under the horse that, with two legs torn away, has fallen upon him.

THE DEAD.

A little drummer-boy—how came such a child here where the fierce maelstrom of war circled and eddied in fire and carnage and fury?—lies by his drum. I bend above him, and in face and form there is nothing human left. Red are the stains about it, and the broken little hand hangs stiff and rigid on the edge of the shattered drum. It is terrible. Here, ghastly and horrible, lies a head, the blue cap with its scarlet and white pompon still resting jauntily over the brow; but nowhere can I see the soldier's body. Here is a saber bent and twisted in the fury of hand-to-hand combat. I walk among the headless trunks, arms and legs without bodies, crippled horses lie prone on their sides, or stand wearily, and with dumb patience, upon three legs. I tread carefully over and around the broken, shattered bodies of the fallen men. Here is the flag, tattered and unfurled, just as it dropped from the hands of the sergeant; here an epaulet, glittering in crimson and gold; here is the gilded belt of a General; here, marred, bent and dented, lies the bugle whose silver voice called into play this wreck and carnage. And here, away off on the edge of the field, away where just the spray of this angry sea of strife could have reached, my foot almost falls on a child lying prostrate, half turned on her face. The dainty feet peep out of a cloud of silk and lace; the tangled hair of gold, a skein of sunshine, half hides the brow and cheek. There is no sign of life in the beautiful face. Killed by the terror and fear born of the battle? I bend to lift the little form, and the arm upon which I thought the child was lying is gone; a horrible gash reaches from the temple to the base of the brain, and the left eye is crushed in its socket. The child—the dear, sweet little girl; somebody's darling, fair sacrifice to the hideous Moloch of war, how could—

"Bobbie!" I hear the voice of her little serene highness. "Bobbie! come, now, and pick up your toys, dear. You've left your dolly and all your soldiers scattered about over the floor, so that papa can scarcely walk across the room. And somebody has stepped on poor little Bessie's head. I'm afraid she'll have to go the surgical institute."

A patter of flying feet, and the blue-eyed commander of the troops, aged 6, comes charging into the room, and, resolving himself into an ambulance corps, collects the dead and wounded with both hands, scoops them into a big box, examines the fracture in the wounded dolly's head for saw-dust, and appears surprised to find the skull lined with a hole.

"Papa!" he cries, "did your hear 'e battle sis apperoon?"

"Yes, Major, I heard it."

"We fighted awful," the Major says, "an' I fell down on my drum and broked my cannon, but grampa will get me anuzzer one.—Robert J. Burdette.

HIS OPINION.

IN CLEAR SENTENCES AN AUTHORITY ADDS HIS OWN TO THE POPULAR JUDGMENT.

191 West Tenth Street, New York, Aug. 11, 1880.

MESSRS. SEABURY & JOHNSON:—I am slow to pin my faith in any new curative agent. Benson's Capcine Porous Plaster has won my good opinion. I find it an exceptionally cleanly plaster to use and rapid in its action. Many tests of its qualities in my own family, and among my patients, have convinced me that there is no other single article so valuable for popular use, none so helpful in cases of Lame Back, Local Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Congestion of the Bronchial Tubes and Lungs and Lumbago. You may feel free to use my name. H. H. Kane, M. D., Physician-in-Chief of the De Quincey Home. Price of the Capcine 25 cents. Seabury & Johnson, Chemists, New York.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

"PERSEVERANCE."

Just at the instant of sunset the light broke through the leaden masses of cloud like a leaf of brass, red, threatening, yet most welcome. For there, darkly outlined against the sullen glen, stood a little cabin, with its thread-like wreath of smoke curling upward, and an old fisherman sitting mending his nets on a bench beside the door.

And Mr. Cheston, who had been wandering hopelessly among the marshes for some time, with a lively sense of the inconvenience of getting lost in those saline deserts, stood and stared at it as if it were a will-o'-the-wisp.

'I'm sure it couldn't have been there five minutes ago,' he pondered within himself.

'Evenin', stranger!' said old Zadoc Peck. 'Been a shootin', eh?'

'I've lost my way,' said Cheston, plunging through the tall reeds, until at last he gained a secure footing by the cabin door.

'Well, I thought likely,' commented Zadoc. 'Ain't many folks come here a purpose.'

'Could I obtain a nights' lodging and some supper?' hinted our weary sportsman.'

'I guess so,' serenely answerered Mr. Peck, 'if you don't mind sleepin' up in the garret. As for supper, Perseverance has gone out to dig clams for us. Like baked clams, eh?'

'His son,' thought the mayjor. 'What a quaint couple they must be.'

But he sat down in the read light and looked at the morning-glory vines trained to the window, the busy fingers of the old man, the murmuring wilderness of reeds and rushes beyond.

'That's right,' said Zadoc. 'Set down and take it easy. Perseverance will be back pretty quick with the clams, and then you'll get some good hot supper. Perseverance is a master hand to cook.'

'Perseverance came presently, but to Major Cheston's infinite surprise she was no lubberly boy nor half-civilized young man, but a tall, blooming maiden of sixteen, with jetty hair floating down her back, large dark eyes, long lashed and almond-shaped, and checks like roses. Her short, gypsy-like skirts revealed shapely brown feet, yet bearing the im*press of the wet sands, where she had* waded out to dig clams, and on one arm she carried a basket of clams whose weight would have been no trifle even to the stalwart muscles of this major of cavalry.

She was not at all embarrassed by the presence of a stranger, but came frankly up to him, setting down her basket to examine the contents of his game-bag.

'You've had poor luck, stranger, haven't you?' she said, pityingly. 'I could ha' done better myself on them marshes at this time o' year.'

'Perseverance is a first-rate shot,' chuckeled the old man. 'Go now, girl and cook us some supper.'

The roast clams, coffee and corn bread were most palatable, and after supper Major Cheston gave Perseverance a newspaper from his pocket.

'It is this morning's,' said he. 'Would you like to see it?'

But she motioned it away.

'I can't read,' said she, indifferently.

'You cannot read?' echoed the amazed major. 'Why, how old are you?'

'Sixteen,' Perseverance answered, reddening.

'My sister Kate is only sixteen,' said Major Cheston, speaking without due reflection, 'and she reads and writes four different languages, plays the piano and guitar, draws and paints, and—'

'Pshaw!' said Perseverance, arching her slender neck. 'Can she shoot black duck and curlews?'

'That is hardly one of the accomplishments prescribed for young ladies,' said the major, smiling.

'Can she swim?'

'No, but—'

'Can she clip a blue heron on the wing! or get in a haul of bluefish when the tide is strong and the wind due east? or fight a shark, hand to hand, with only a marlin spike for a weapon?'

And once again Major Cheston was compelled to answer in the negative.

'Well,' said Perseverence, complacently, 'I can!'

And she rose and went out of the room, and Major Cheston saw no more of her that night.

'She isn't offended, is she?' he asked of old Zadoc Peck, who was smoking a pipe and staring hard at the fire all the while.

'Offended! Our Perseverance offended?' echoed the old man. 'You don't know her, stranger!'

'But really,' hazarded Cheston, 'it is scarcely right to bring up a girl like that in such total ignorance, now is it?'

'Well, we haven't no schools nor aca*demies hereabouts,' said the old man.* 'And if we had, Perseverance wouldn't go to 'em. I don't see but what she gets along first-rate?'

And Major Cheston wasted no more time in argument.

He slept well and soundly that night under the sloping roof of the little gar*ret, through whose shrunk boards the* quiet stars peeped down at him, and at daybreak he went down upon the shore. The reeds were all effaced now—the tide was coming in with a rush and a roar, and an occasional flying shower of spray. The fresh wind took off his hat, and whirled it in the water. He made an involuntary plunge after it, lost his footing on the slippery sands, and the next instant he was struggling for dear life with the surf, dragged constantly down, and still further out to sea by the treacherous undertow. In a last effort to regain himself, he struck his head against a jagged point of stone and knew nothing more.

* * * * *

'You needn't thank me, stranger,' said old Zadoc Peck, as he stood over the recovering patient with hot towels. 'I didn't know a thing about it till she ran up, as white and breathless as a snow flurry, to to get me to help you in. She had swum out to sea and dragged you back to land herself! She's a brave girl, is Perseverance, and there's nothing she can't do if once she sets herself about it.'

Major Cheston thanked his young rescuer earnestly; but nothing would induce her to take the gold he offered her.

'It must be a poor creature that wants reward for saving a man's life,' she said with a short laugh.

And Cheston desisted.

'The girl is too pretty,' he said to himself. 'No one but the hero of a third-class romance ever marries a half civilized young savage, because she has dark eyes and hair growing low on her forehead. I must get away from this place—and I must keep away!'

Physically this was an easy thing to do; but mentally—what is there but the wild winds of heaven so uncontrollable as a man's thoughts?

At the end of a year he came back from Switzerland and went straight to the Long Island marshes.

'I must see her,' he said to himself. 'I must tell her that I love her, I must ask her to be my wife.'

When the train reached Nineveh, the nearest station, a tall, beautiful girl, in a cashmere dress, sparkling with jet, and a saucy black hat, came to him, holding out her hand.

'You are Major Cheston?' said she.

'And you,' he answered, 'are Perseverance Peck?'

She smiled and nodded. How beautiful she had grown.

'I was going out to the old house,' he said.

'I do not live there any more,' said Perseverance. 'Father's dead, and I'm being educated. You see,' she added, 'that your words, hard and cruel as I then thought them, were not without their effect. I am staying with some friends, and I share the advantage of their governess. And Mr. Russell thinks I am not a stupid scholar.'

'Russell!'

The name was very familiar to him.

'At Castle Point, a little way down the island,' explained Perseverance. 'They know you very well. Hugh Russell and I often talk of you.'

Hugh Russell? A dagger thrust of jealousy went through Major Cheston's heart. Hugh Russell, whom he remembered such a handsome, daring young fellow. Was he, then, too late in his decision? Had some other hand gathered this exquisite wild flower?

And then, with the innocent hypocrisy of lovehood, he vowed that he had intended all along to visit the Russells, and accompanied Perseverance there at once.

'Yes,' said placid Mrs. Russell. 'Is she not beautiful? She used to come to my Sunday school class last summer, at the Sandy Point chapel, and when her poor old father died, I took her to stay with me. And we are all so attached to her, and she is so lovely and winning. Quite like my own daughter.'

Late that evening Major Cheston went out on the stone-paved terrace, where Perseverance was sitting on the rail, looking up at the million golden stairs which spangled the violet sky. She welcomed him with her quiet, self-possessed smile.

'Perseverance,' he said, 'you are seventeen years old, now?'

'Yes,' she assented, 'I am seventeen years old.'

'Almost a woman,' said he.

'Quite a woman,' she responded. 'Oh it seems as if I had grown so many, many years older since poor father died.'

'Has any one spoken to you of—love?' he asked, abruptly.

'No,' she answered, with gravity.

'But they will—sometimes.'

'I suppose so,' said Perservance.

Evidently there was nothing of the coquette about her.

'Would you be very much surprised, Perserverence, if I were to tell you that I love you?'

She started and colored to the very roots of her hair.

'Surprised?' she repeated. 'Yes—oh, yes! For you despised me in those days.'

'Never!' he cried.

'Or at least I fancied so,' she faltered.

'But I love you now, Perseverance—sweetest, treasure of my soul!' he went on, reading some dim encouragement in the downcast eyes, the red, quivering mouth. 'I will not let you go until you promise to be my wife. You have saved my life once and it is in your power to save it from further shipwreck now.'

Hugh Russell had spoken the same words of love in her ear two hours before and she had run away from him, half angry and wholly frightened. But this—this was different.

'Will you promise me, Perseverance?' he gently reiterated.

'Yes,' she answered.

And that was the way in which Major Cheston, whose heart had been so long regarded by his lady friends as an invulnerable fortress, won the beautiful young wife who was as unlike the other belles of society as is the tropical blossom of the scarlet pomegranite to the commonplace red roses of the garden border.

It was a strange meeting, a still stranger wooing, but a most happy marriage. And perhaps this is the most satisfactory record that any love affair can leave.

ARE YOU THERE, "MORIARITY?"

The winds were whispering low, and the sentinel stars set their watches, if they have any to set, up in the skies, as Mrs. Tomly leaned from her chamber window, and asked in a low and trembling voice:

'Is that you, Henry?'

Now it is a peculiarity of Mr. Tomly that when under the influence he has great difficulty in finding his home.

He has once been arrested as a burglar, and several times kicked out, so when he heard the female voice say, 'is that you, Henry?' he said:

'For I ansher that question I'd like ter know if that's you, Sarah,' said Henry, holding on to the front gate and leering up at Sarah's chamber window.

'Why certainly, it is me.'

'Is this the corner of Austin avenue and B. street?'

'Why, of course it is, Henry.'

'Then,' said Henry, indignantly, as he swayed up against the fence, 'of course it's me. What you ask fool questions for? Don't you know your own hus*band?*"

The "Sun" Cholera Mixture.

The season is furnishing a good deal of what the old people call "cholera weather," while the epidemic as it prevails in Egypt has been pronounced of the genuine Asiatic type and causes no little uneasiness in Europe and America. Though we have doubtless but little to fear from the real out and out contagion, yet there will be ample need, as usual, of remedial agents to meet the attacks of some of the numerous cholera family, for which the "Sun cholera medicine" has been used with wonderful success more than forty years. It has stood the test of experience as the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised. As was once vouched for by the New York Journal of Commerce, "no one who has this by him and takes it in time will ever have the cholera." Even when no cholera is anticipated it is an excellent thing for the ordinary summer complaints, colic, diarrhœa, dysentery, &c., and we have no hesitation in commending it. Here it is: Take equal parts of tincture of cayenne, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose, fifteen to thirty drops in a wineglass of water, according to age and violence of the attack. Repeat every fifteen or twenty minutes until relief is obtained.

Our fellow creatures can judge of what we are only from what we do; but in the eye of our Maker what we do is of no worth except as it flows from what we are.

It is no disgrace not to be able to do everything; but to undertake, or pretend to do what you are not made for, is not only shameful but extremely troublesome and vexatious.

The crowning fortune of a man is to be born to some pursuit which finds him in employment and happiness—whether it be to make baskets, or broadswords, or canals or statues, or songs.

Anything that makes the heart deeper, anything that makes the current of affection run fuller, anything that makes gratitude and love and honor and truth and faith strong, makes man stronger.

Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things in which smiles and kindnesses and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure comfort.

If thou art rich then show the greatness of thy fortune, or what is better, the greatness of thy soul, in the meekness of thy conversation; condescend to men of low estate, support the distressed and patronize the neglected. Be great!

A man who owes a little can clear it off in a very little time, and if he is a prudent man, will; whereas a man, who, by long negligence, owes a great deal, despairs of ever being able to pay, and therefore never looks into his accounts at all.

Pride often miscalculates; and more often misconceives. The proud man places himself at a distance from other men. Seen though at a distance, others appear little to him, but he forgets that this very distance causes him to appear equally little to others.

THE NORTH POLE IN IT.

A delapidated looking tramp, with sixteen patches on his clothes and a plaster over his eye, went into an Omaha saloon, slapped down a worn out dime, and bawled out: 'Give me a soda-water cocktail with the North Pole in it.'

A crowd outside, thinking free drinks were to be set up, crowded into the saloon, and watched and waited. The man of rags who had ordered the North Pole in drinks, ate up all the lunch he could find, chewed up the coffee and cloves, and was tackling the mint when the bartender quietly asked;

'What did you say you wanted in your drink, Mr. Gould?'

Mr. Gould steadied himself a moment, grinned on the crowd and at himself in the looking-glass, and replied:

'If you please, sir, I'll have the North Pole in it.'

The bartender remembered an old piece of gas tubing about three feet in length, which had been left around. He got it and blew some cayenne pepper down the inside, put one end of it in the cocktail and smilingly handed it to Mr. Gould. Mr. Gould took it, gave a first preliminary pull, and then a hurricane arose. It seemed as though the combined tornadoes of eight Eastern states had broken loose. An immense conglommeration of legs, arms, hats, canes and bodies was observed piling out of the saloon ten moments after; and today, when the saloon keeper reckons up the losses of a broken head, cracked mirror, scratched and stained counter and liability of being sued, he will sadly remember the last words of the tramp as he closed the door and shot up the street.

The Constitutionalist.

W. L. FORCE & A. L. FORCE,
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

KILL THE SERPENT.

There is abundant evidence to sustain the assertion that Presidents, Governors, Senators and Congressmen have been elected, or declared elected, through the corrupt use of money, and that high officials of the Government, and even Judges of the United States Supreme Court, have obtained place and power by means of the same nefarious influence.

That is a startling fact, and as nationally disgraceful as it is dangerous to the liberties of the people.

Allowed to grow as it has insolently grown during recent years, popular freedom in this country is surely doomed to fall.

The glory of ancient Rome expired when vice dominated virtue and offices became purchasable articles.

So will that of America, unless the people, happily as yet unsubdued, concentrate might and sweep political villainy out of existence.

The worst foe that the American Republic has to fear lurks within her own borders.

It is political profligacy nurtured by mercenary wealth.

The Republic can withstand every species of hostility but that.

It is time for the people, the honest masses, to arouse and crush the serpent's head, or be stung to death by his poisonous fangs.

Men claiming distinction as statesmen, lawyers, bankers, corporation magnates, church members, and professed leaders of morality and respectability, have lavishly contributed funds for electioneering purposes, not to meet legitimate expenses, but to secure partisan results for unprincipled personal advantages, through systematic bribery and corruption, so brazen and base, that were the simple demands of Justice satisfied, the whole bevy of them would now be wearing convict uniforms behind prison bars, instead of rolling in rich luxuriance and conspiring how most effectually to debauch future ballot-boxes, in order to disarm popular sovereignty and defraud Freedom of her dearest rights.

Language cannot too severely condemn such bribe-stained miscreants, nor is it possible for punishment to outweigh their committed crimes.

Highway robbers and sneaking house thieves are sent to State Prisons for long terms of years, why should greater criminals, they who filch from citizenship its sacred prerogative, be permitted to roam at large seeking, like wolves, whom they may devour?

Scurvy politicians may deem the darkest hued rascality fair political action, and bloated monopolists treat the people with contempt, yet there still abides in this country a power which, when fully aroused, is capable of sinking all opposition deeper than plummet ever sounded.

That power is the will of the honest masses.

May its thundering voice and vivid flash soon be heard and felt?

Public safety so demands!

When that calls 'tis duty to obey!

There is the name of one Democrat, as worthy and true as he is modest and preeminently capable, which has not been much mentioned for the Governorship, though he has hosts of friends who would be delighted to see him occupy the position. We refer to Hon. Joseph Yates, of Plainfield.—Palisade News.

According to the terms of the reward offered for the arrest of Jarrard, Pinkerton's detective will not be entitled to the $1,000 unless he delivers his captive "into the custody of the Sheriff of Middlesex county." The Board of Freeholders will probably modify the terms should the charge of forgery not be sustained.

Beer drinkers are hereafter to know all the ingredients used by beer brewers in the brewing of beer. The new forms under which the brewers are to report to the Collectors require a sworn monthly statement of all the details on the subject and the penalty against fraud is heavy enough to make it dangerous. We have from time to time heard alarming stories about the harmful ingredients put into beer by some of its manufacturers, but it will be well for them now to take warning and refrain from evil practices.

Col. A. W. Jones, formerly editor of the Woodbridge Independent Hour, and who was a representative from Middlesex county in the New Jersey Assembly in the Legislatures of 1868, '69 and '70, has been nominated for the State Senate of Virginia by the Readjuster Coalition Convention for the 34th District, composed of the counties of Hanover and Caroline, which met on the 4th inst. The Richmond Whig says he did not seek the nomination, but was unanimously asked to do so by the convention. The Whig predicts his election.

The State Convention of the National party of New Jersey assembled at Educational Hall, Asbury Park, Wednesday of last week. 140 delegates reported, representing every county except Middlesex. W. L. Hope of Monmouth county was made permanent chairman. A Vice President was chosen from each Congressional District, as follows: First District, C. P. Atkinson; Second, A. K. Rowans; Third, F. Terlinde; Fourth, A. W. Davis; Fifth, W. E. Mulford; Sixth, A. J. Whitehead; Seventh, A. Fitzpatrick. B. W. Terlinde of Union county was made Secretary.

The next Congress will be called upon to make a legal tender of the trade dollar or provide for its redemption at par. If it fails to do this, a large holder of the coin will bring the matter before the Supreme Court, in order that the law taking away its legal tender quality to the extent of five dollars with which it was originally invested, may be declared unconstitutional on the ground that it involves a violation of contract. The claim is made that the law which made it a legal tender, represents a contract with the holder that it should be worth one hundred cents.

At Trenton, robbers have resumed operations in that vicinity. On a freight train on the Pennsylvania Road loaded with valuable merchandise, it was found that a number of bales of silk and boxes of dry goods, valued at several thousand dollars, had been thrown out by the thieves at points where their pals were in waiting to promptly receive the stolen stuff. It is thought the thieves board the trains at New Brunswick, and having duplicate keys, easily get into the cars and drop out the goods, and then escape at some small stopping place along the line.

MURDER WILL OUT.

On the 11th of February, 1881, there was a grand dinner at Delmonico's, New York, given to celebrate the Republican victory of the previous October in Indiana, and especially to glorify ex-Senator Dorsey as the hero of that event, and to lay before him grateful homage for the illustrious services he had thereby rendered the Republican party.

Ex-President Grant presided, supported on one side by Stephen W. Dorsey and on the other by Chester A. Arthur.

To the right of Mr. Dorsey sat John Jacob Astor, Hon. George S. Boutwell, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, F. S. Winston, Hon. F. T. Frelinghuysen and Hon. W. Windom.

To the left of Mr. Arthur were arranged John A. Stewart, Hon. Hamilton Fish, Judge Noah Davis, E. W. Stoughton, Hon. Levi P. Morton and Rev. J. P. Newman, while around the richly laden tables clustered a large number of similar distinguished supporters of the party of moral ideas.

They were there to honor Dorsey.

For doing what?

For stumping the State of Indiana, and by dignified argument and honest effort convincing voters that the Republican party was right and the Democratic wrong?

Not a bit of it.

But because Dorsey, as Secretary of the Republican National Committee, had been active and instrumental in disbursing throughout the State of Indiana a corruption fund of four hundred thousand dollars, raised for the express purpose of polluting ballot-boxes.

That the partakers of the Delmonico banquet must have known to be a fact.

Grant, Arthur, Beecher, Windom and Whitelaw Reid knew well, when heaping words of eulogy upon Dorsey, the disreputable means employed to carry Indiana.

Yet they could scarcely find praise fulsome enough to applaud his partisan deeds.

Now he is branded by Republican editors as a thief, a star-route robber.

What was he three years ago?

Are aiders and abettors a mite better than performers?

Do receivers of stolen property enjoy immunity from crime?

We have no apology to make for Mr. Dorsey, but must repeat the before expressed belief, that he is now just as honest and honorable as he was in 1880.

Murder will out.

Dorsey has confessed.

In the old graveyard attached to the almshouse at Blackwoodtown, Camden county, is a solitary mound marked with a slab which tells that there lie the remains of Thomas Seeds, born 1697, died in 1806, aged 109 years. The deceased must therefore have lived in three centuries.

Dr. Ezra M. Hunt, Secretary of the New Jersey State Board of Health, has made an exhaustive examination of the Ocean Grove system of sewerage, and expresses himself as highly gratified, stating that he thought the system a perfect one. The present Summer population of Ocean Grove is 15,000.

The five Chinamen whose queues were cut off by the penitentiary barber at Trenton really suffered a greater punishment than the law contemplated. There is no disgrace to the average Caucasian in the "State Prison cut" of hair; it is even fashionable. But to the Chinaman the loss of his queue means personal and social ignominy.

THE ARMY REUNION.

Extensive preparations are already being made to make the G. A. R. State Encampment a great success at Princeton Junction, from September 3d to the 8th inclusive. The 4th and 6th Regiments will be at Camp Olden the whole week; the 3d, 7th and 9th Regiments three days each. There will be sham battles Wednesday and Saturday. Fireworks Tuesday and Friday evenings. Clam bakes and a balloon ascension each day. Arrangements have been made with the Pennsylvania R. R. Co. to run 5,000 people daily to Camp Olden. The grounds selected are the most spacious and convenient in the State for camp purposes, with plenty of shade and water.

The potato crop is so great it is predicted that the tubers will sell for twenty-five cents per bushel this fall.

GLEANINGS.

Philadelphia has a female base ball club. It has been started in the hope of reducing the size of the average girl's hand in that city.

Oscar Wilde, the Aesthete, has returned to this country, and proposes lecturing this winter. He has cut his hair short and discarded knee breeches.

Twenty-seven persons in one boarding-house in Chicago were suddenly seized with cramps after eating dinner. As the menu consisted of roast veal, green peas, watermelon and ice cream, nobody but the sufferers are astonished

Marie Colletto, an Italian woman, confined in the Ludlow street jail, New York city, as a United States prisoner on a charge of passing counterfeit coin, gave birth on Thursday of last week to the first child ever born in that prison.

Lillie A. Van Woort, of Troy, N. Y., a handsome miss of 16 years, went to a dentist last Saturday to have a tooth extracted. She insisted on being put under the influence of chloroform. She did not rally from the effects of the drug, and died the next day.

The Great Inter-Ocean Show.

"Largest and best show on earth." It surprising to see how much that is attractive, entertaining and instructive can be crowded into one day, as it is done by the Great Inter-Ocean, Largest and best show, which will be here on August 22d. Commencing with the throng of people themselves, the grand free street demonstration, the free exhibition upon the grounds at the end of the parade, matinees and soirees in the arena, the great show itself, together with levees held by the wonder of the World, Millie-Christine, the Two-Headed Lady, go to mark the busiest and best day in the year.

The Mare Wanted her Dinner.

A bay mare belonging to Dr. Thomas S. Stevens, a dentist in Trenton, was driven to the stable one day last week, and left standing inside untied while the hostler ascended to the hay mow. His surprise was great when he saw the head and shoulders of the animal appearing up the stairway, which she had climed in safety. The stairway is quite steep, and contains twenty-two steps. The hostler had been tardy in putting down the hay for the mare's dinner, and she had become tired of waiting. Dr. Stevens said he had no doubt that she would have followed him down again, but hardly cared to take the risk. Some carpenters built an incline plane from the hay mow door to the opposite side of the street, upon which the adventurous beast descended in safety.

A New Beverage.

"We intend," said a popular druggist, "to put in a hot water fountain this fall. The rage is now for a glass of hot water in the morning. You would be astonished at the number of applications we get from old customers for a glass of pure hot water every morning. They used to drink Vichy or Seltzer, or Kissingen, but now they call for hot water instead. The trouble is that the hot water they get at home is impure, and may do them more harm than good. We will clarify city water for that purpose."

There are physicians who laugh at the idea of hot water as a cure all. But a large number do not deny the efficacy of hot water in the morning. But they say that taken repeatedly it soon ceases to do any good, just as the constant use of mineral waters will after a while be rather deleterious than beneficial.

A Peculiar North Carolina Stone.

Some ninety or 100 years ago an Indian, passing the home of the grandfather of Mr. Pointer of Roxboro, was kindly entertained for several days without charge, and when about to leave he took from his pocket one of three stones, saying: "Here is a mad stone; take it and if I call again it is mine, otherwise it is yours. When you are bitten by any poisonous insect, reptile, or mad dog, apply this to the bitten place and you shall suffer no harm." The stone has been in the possession of some member of the family ever since, and has often been applied to both man and beast, and is an infallible cure. You may apply it in any case and it fastens itself, refusing to come off until impregnated with the poison, and then it falls off of its own accord. Drop it in sweet milk and it discharges the poison, and will again attach itself with its former force.

Large Fires.

A fire at Vineyard Haven, Martha's Vineyard, Sunday morning, destroyed all the business portion of the ancient town excepting one store. Over thirty buildings were destroyed, and a great many are rendered homeless. About two hundred summer boarders were left without accommodation. The loss is about one hundred and ninety thousand dollars.

The well-known Kimball House situated at Atlanta, Ga., was burned Sunday morning. All the guests were promptly notified and escaped. The hotel cost $600,000 and the furniture $125,000 more. The insurance is only $80,000. The Gate City National Bank, Harralson & Brothers, tobacconists, John B. Daniel, drugs, and others are among the losers. The total loss is $1,000,000. The insurance is not over $200,000. The fire is thought to have been of incendiary origin. In the vaults of the Gate City Bank was $500,000, the safety of which is yet a matter of doubt.

Railroad Accidents.

A wheel of one of the coaches of the fast Philadelphia express on the P. & R. Railroad broke early on Saturday evening near Bayonne. Two coaches were damaged in the crash, but by the instant application of the air brakes the train was stopped before any cars were overturned. The track was blocked for an hour and a half.

At nine o'clock on the same evening a coal train was wrecked at Green Brook, near this city, seven cars being piled up on the tracks.

Forty coal cars of a train on the New Jersey Central Railroad were thrown from the track at the Phillipsburg, N. J., depot Saturday morning. Fourteen of them were wrecked and their contents scattered along the track for a distance of several hundred yards. The track was blockaded for several hours. A brakeman was slightly injured.

Monmouth County Agricultural Society.

The 30th annual fair to be held at Freehold, N. J., September 11, 12, 13 and 14. Among the many improvements made by this Society upon their grounds, may be mentioned a thorough overhauling of the track and the widening of the same, making it, in the opinion of competent judges, rank among the first in the State. Also, the erection of forty or more box stalls for the accommodation of visiting, trotting and running horses, and the erection of a large number of cattle sheds; altogether the outlay will probably reach the sum of Three Thousand Dollars. This at least indicates progress of the Society and vim and determination of its Board of Managers to have their exhibitions in the future rank second to none in the State. The outlook for the coming Fair is so promising that it is expected in every particular to excel by far anything ever done heretofore by this Society. Excursion rates over all railroads. The premium list for the coming Fair will reach $6,000. It will pay our readers to visit the Monmouth County Fair in September next.

The Season for Budding Trees.

Mr. S. F. Briant, of Dover, Morris county, who has had a large experience in budding trees, says this is the proper season for treating peach, pear, apple and plum trees, as well as rose bushes, although peaches and apples can be budded later. Among many it has been the custom to cut out a piece of wood with the bud and put it in the branch to be budded. This is wrong for two reasons—the wood never grows, and is most inconvenient in shape to fit in its new place. Mr. Briant takes the branch from which the buds are obtained, holds the butt of it from him, draws the knife deeply under the bud toward him, then makes a cross cut through the bark only, and with his thumb and finger removes the piece of bark containing the bud, but none of the wood. The rounding inner surface of the bark, therefore just fits to the branch upon which it is to be budded. He then takes the branch to be budded, makes a cross cut through the bark and from this a slit running down the branch. Then opening the lips of the bark he inserts the piece of bark that contains the bud under them, and cross the lips over it, leaving the bud protruding between. He then takes a fine ligament, carefully prepared from the silken like film obtained from between the wood and bark of the bass wood tree. Commencing at the back of the branch from the cut, and above the bud, he draws it tightly, thus bringing the lips close, and then passes it around again below the bud and ties it. At this season the bark unites in fifteen or twenty days, at the expiration of which time the ligament may be removed and the work is accomplished. After some practice a single person can set from one to two thousand buds in a single day, and thus in a little while prepare the way for a large amount of choice fruit.

FIRE MATTERS.

The following officers have been elected by Resolute H. & L. Co., of Morristown; President, Chief Engineer Harry A. Freeman; Foreman, O. F. Lozier; Ass't Foreman, D. L. Fox; Secretary, Wm. C. Leek; Treasurer, W. A. Halstead; Stewart, F. Schrandenbach. These are the old officers re-elected.—Iron Era.

Gazelle Engine Co., No. 1, having voted against the intention last Monday evening, there will be no parade of the Fire Department this Fall, as was hoped by the public and a majority of those interested. Chief Carney is much disappointed, as he naturally desired to show our citizens what a fine lot of apparatus and able looking set of men composed his force. Why the largest company in the department should go against the desire of the others, is not understood.

Owing to the absence of Commissioners Morris on Long Island, Depew at the Catskill Mountains and Gillies in Ocean Grove, the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Managers of the Plainfield Fire Department adjourned last Tuesday evening for one week—President Van Winkle and Messrs. Jones and Flaig being present. Chief Carney submitted for consideration a proposition from the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Co., to put their system in the city for $1,275, which price allowed for eight boxes.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

Plover and bay snipe shooting are now in order.

Mr. Tappen has a fine fleet of boats at Boynton Beach, which he lets out at reasonable rates. He also funishes bait and lines. The fishing at this point is fine.

Weak fishing is now splendid at Woodbridge Beach. Good boats, bait and lines, may be procured at the Sewaren House, J. P. Turner, Proprietor, at reasonable prices.

The happiest people in this country today are probably the farmers. Good crops and big returns fill the farmer's waking dreams, and the best of it is that these dreams are likely to be realized.

A few moments sometimes make a great change. A man with blue eyes was seen to enter a beer saloon one day this week, and when he came out a little later he had black eyes.

City Judge F. P. Good participated in the festivities and speech-making incidental to the presentation of a handsome cane to Mr. William Townly, at Elizabeth, last Thursday evening.

The latest anecdote about the old lady who thinks that she "knows everything" is about how she went to a church sociable, and as she entered the room the young ladies said: "Good evening, Auntie, we are glad you came; we are going to have tableaux, this evening." "Yes, I know, I know," was the reply, "I smelt 'em when I first came in."

Wake Up!

The Committee appointed to confer with property owners on Park avenue between Fifth and Sixth streets, regarding the setting back of the sidewalk and mending the roadway, is either neglectful or exceeding slow. The matter should be attended to at once.

Ministers and Their Substitutes.

While the ministers are afar off drinking in beauty and fresh milk by the seashore or the mountains, the editors are attending to their flocks. It is difficult to tell what the ministers would do without their faithful assistants, the editors. Satan, it is to be feared, would obtain full possession of the City during the Summer months.

Sunday at Netherwood.

Rev. Dr. John C. Bliss of this city, will preach in the Netherwood Union Chapel next Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock. Several members of the celebrated choir connected with St. Thomas Episcopal church of Fifth avenue, New York, who are spending the summer at the Hotel Netherwood, will render the musical part of the service.

Jealousy and Justice.

Miss Williams struck Miss Green, Monday, because she thought the latter was trespassing upon her right to the entire affection of a young gentleman of this city. The matter of assault was brought before Justice Wadsworth, who held the assailant in $100 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. All the parties concerned were colored (except the Court). Miss Williams plead guilty.

Plainfield's Gain—Dr. Lewis' Loss.

The Rev. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, has declined the call to other fields we recently spoke of, and will remain in Plainfield. He is now at his old home in Wisconsin where he was summoned Monday of last week by a telegram announcing the serious illness of that father whose only son he was. Dr. Lewis arrived Wednesday night only to learn that he had died the day before.

Base Ball.

The Crescents are having a hard time securing games with any clubs in the vicinity. They all—probably excepting the Elizabethans—seem afraid of the Plainfielders. The Newarkers backed out, and the New Providence boys wouldn't accept a challenge. However, a game on their grounds in this city is expected to be played by the Crescents, to-morrow, against a nine from the 7th Regiment of New York.

They'll Bewitch the Bashful Bachelors.

The merry maidens of this city will iron the tucks and flute the ruffles of their choicest white dresses, comb their bangs and curl their frizzes, and attend the picnic to be given in Wooden's Grove, Thursday, the 30th inst., by the Junior Bachelors of both sides of the brook. Every member of the gentle sex is expected to do her duty upon that occasion, and turn from the selfish ways of single life some one of the organization.

Fe, Fo, Fi, Fum!

In Plainfield, Union County, the contest is at present turning upon the remark of the Republican organ that electric lights would probably blaze along the beach at Asbury Park to mitigate the darkness upon the occasion of a colored church's excursion to that resort. The colored voters hold the balance of power in the city, and the pastor of one of the churches announces that not one of his congregation will vote the Republican ticket this fall.—N. Y. Sun.

The Pennsylvania railroad company have paid them a sum in settlement for all claims for damages by the accident.

A large circle of friends and acquaintances in this vicinity will learn with surprise and regret of the decease of Mr. John Prentiss, formerly residing near Westfield. His death was sudden, resulting from a cancer on the face, last Saturday morning. The funeral ceremonies occurred on the Monday following from his residence 158 West 27th street, New York city. Deceased was in every sense of the word one of nature's noblemen, true-hearted, generous and honest. We doubt if he had an enemy in the world. "Uncle John" will be greatly missed by his many admirers and friends. Peace be to his ashes. A widow and three children survive him.

Killed by the Cars.

Mr. J. H. Kilbourn, a former resident of this city, was killed on Friday last by accidentally falling from a car of the Brighton Beach Railway, on which he was employed. His wife, who was boarding with Mr. E. L. Boice of Park avenue, was summoned by telegraph and took charge of the remains.

Burdette's Benefit.

Mr. James S. Burdette the elocutionist, who has so often this season entertained the guests of the Hotel Netherwood with his talents and accomplishments, was tendered a benefit by his friends at the Hotel, Wednesday evening. Owing to the weather, numbers of our citizens who had intended being present were unable to attend. A ball followed that added to the success of the evening.

A Missing Line Man.

A line-man in the employ of the New Jersey Telephone Company, which is building a telephone line through Elizabeth, and across on Staten Island, has been missing since Saturday evening. He has been working on the outskirts of the city and had been followed and annoyed by alleged strikers. Foul play is suspected.

The above is from the Elizabeth Herald. We learn from manager Ohl of the N. J. Telephone Company, that the person alluded to was in his employ, and went to his home sick. From this came the story of his disappearance.

A Just Complaint.

The stone wall along the brook in the rear of the manufactory of Messrs Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., that was washed away by the freshet of last Fall, has been re-built by that firm. They are also deepening the brook and grading the bank to drain off the pools of stagnant water that collect on their premises. The firm has recently made a complaint to the Union County Board of Freeholders regarding the condition the sidewalks, &c., at Grove street have been left by the contractor who built the stone work of the new bridge.

A Beguiling Boarder.

A young man who stated he was in search of board, visited Mrs. Bowman of West Front Street, Thursday of last week, and was told that if the present occupant of one of the rooms was willing, he could be accommodated in the same apartment. The applicant left to inquire of the party referred to, and returned later with what he claimed was a verbal permission. Upon his own suggestion, the new boarder paid his landlady for a night's lodging in advance and twenty-five cents for the express charges on a trunk that was to arrive. He then went to the room, opened the trunk of its occupant, abstracted eleven dollars and left.

The Trot Last Saturday.

There was a very fair audience at the Fair Grounds last Saturday to witness the trot between the fast horses "Star" and "Irish Lad" for a stake of $1,000. Owing to the track being heavy in consequence of no water being had to sprinkle it, neither horse trotted up to its usual standard. In horseman's parlance, Star "soured" on the track, and only made a fight to win in the third heat, which he undoubtedly would have taken but for his bad break on the first turn of the track. Irish Lad was full of trot and could easily have made a better record than he did. He won the three heats easily in 2:37¼ 2:35 and 2:34. Another race between the horses is soon to come off.

J., will deliver the annual address at 2 o'clock p. m. Other addresses will follow. The Cornet Band of Chester, N. J., will be in attendance to furnish music for the occasion. A Committee of Dunellen citizens visited this city last Friday, and presented Engine Company No. 2 the following testimonial:

We, the subscribers, citizens of Dunellen and vicinity, desire to express to the members of Fire Engine Co. No. 2, of the city of Plainfield, our grateful appreciation of their kindness and good will, as manifested in their effort in extinguishing the fire on the morning of the 9th inst.

Dunellen, Aug. 10th, 1882.

At Cape May last week an impatient young man walked up to the door of one of the bath houses and knocking on the same inquired: "When in blaz—s are you going to get those pants on?" There was a faint giggle and a silvery voice replied: "When I am married, I suppose." He had mistaken the door, that's all.

Two's Picnic.

During next Thursday afternoon and evening, the boys of Plainfield Engine and Hose Co's No. 2, will hold in Wooden's Grove their usual Summer picnic. The best of music has been engaged for the enjoyment of all, and such other features as will add to the pleasure of those who attend, have been secured.

A Volunteer Police Force.

A driver for one of our city milk-&-water-men, claiming that his employer owed him eight dollars collected such amount recently and appropriated it to his own use. Monday he was seen by his former boss who attempted to arrest him; but he escaped, and in spite of the hot pursuit made by Messrs. J. G. Cadmus and James Connoely in a buggy, the accused out-run the horse, and reaching the residence of ex-Mayor Evans ahead of his pursuers, hid in a corn-field.

A Result of Advertising.

There appears on our 4th page the advertisement of the Pope Manufacturing Co. of Boston, makers of bicycles and tricycles. Its first insertion was less than two months ago, yet in that time six of their "Experts" have been purchased in this city. This result is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that up to July 1st, although a number of our citizens were wheelmen, not one of the above mentioned machines were in use—imported bicycles predominating.

The Netherwood Takes The Cake.

The festival and cake-walk given in Cutter's Hall, during Thursday evening of last week, was a most re krky affair that brought together the e-light of Plainfield's colored society and secured a handsome profit to be used in the purchase of uniforms for the Star Base Ball Club. The music was exceedingly hot, and the captain-of-the-club filled the position of floor manager in a thoroughly satisfactory manner. The decorations of the room were gorgeous, and "de cake" a work of art. The judges awarded the latter to a couple from "The Netherwood," whose walk was a thing of beauty and of grace.

Gazelle's Gayeties.

Gazelle's postponed picnic which took place during Thursday of last week, was a success in every particular. The number in attendance was unusually large, and the grand march included the longest line of couples ever seen. Prof. Frazee, as is his way, furnished the best music of the season, which was thoroughly enjoyed until the morning dawned. The affair was under the able management of General Director, J. A. Moore; Floor Director, Frank Wright; Floor Managers, W. Van Sickle, Chas. Johnson and Geo. Demarest; Com. of Arrangements, J. Huntington, C. Ward, J. B. Gable, F. Wright and J. A. Moore. A satisfactory financial success was the result.

The Tappen Family.

The third annual re-union of the Tappen family will take place on the 20th of September, 1883, at the Osborn Prarie Church, Stone Bluff, Fountain County, Indiana. Judge F. P. Good, of this city, a descendant of this family by his mother, who was a Tappen, has arranged an accurate table of this family from the first to the eighth generation from 1665 to 1883. Since the last reunion in 1882 there have been eight marriages, six births and two deaths. During the eight generations there have been 820 births, 445 boys, 357 girls; 257 marriages, 266 deaths and 554 living up to date. Judge Good is the only bachelor of this large *family. The Tappens of Union and Mad*ison Counties, Indiana, are members of this remarkable family.

Fraternal Visit.

Wednesday evening last, August 2nd, Winfield Scott Post of this place was honored by a fraternal visit of about a dozen comrades from Winchester Post, of Brooklyn, N. Y. An exceedingly pleasant time was spent in the Post room until ten o'clock. After the regular business of the meeting had been transacted, speech-making, recitations and singing was indulged in. The company were then taken to a place near by where refreshments were served to which all did justice. There the time was again enlivened by war stories, songs and fraternal ex*changes. The particular object of the* visit was to give a personal and special invitation to the Winfield Scott Post to attend their annual camp fire in October. The invitation was unanimously accepted. The visitors returned home later in the evening well pleased with their visit.

Accused of Forgery.

A warrant was issued by Police Justice Ricord, of Newark, Tuesday, for the arrest of S. Orville Heaton, residing at No. 104 E. Front street, this city, on a charge of forgery of mercantile paper. The warrant was given to a detective, who started for Ocean Beach, where Mr. Heaton has been staying with his family, but the accused could not be found. The affidavit was made by John D. Vermilyea, of Newark, and the specific charge is that Mr. Heaton passed upon him a note for $250 which purported to have been indorsed by Wm. U. Jube, a member of the firm of John P. Jube & Co., of New York. Word was sent to this city, but at the accused's residence his wife stated he was not at home. Mr. Jube denies the indorsement and so the matter rests until Mr. Heaton can be heard in his own de*fence.*

Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

The Saratoga Daily Journal of August 13th, says that Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of Plain*field, N. J., occupied the pulpit of the* Regent Street Baptist Church last Sunday morning, and preached a characteristically earnest and effective discourse from the text: "The heart knoweth his own bitterness." In treating this topic the speaker showed deep insight into the human heart, and profound knowledge of human nature. No soul, he said, however happy or cloudless its life might seem to be, was without its own peculiar sorrow of some kind. The speaker then drew a powerful contrast between the negative condition described as happiness in Buddhism, and that sublime elevation and sanctification of the heart, gained through the purifying power of Christianity. It was a noble sermon, such as Dr. Yerkes always gives to his hearers in Saratoga. Rev. Dr. D. G. Corey, of Utica, read the scriptures and offered prayer.

A Fearful Fall.

The six-year-old son of John H. Van Winkle, Esq., Saturday evening last, fell through a sky-light in the building at No. 5 West Front street, from the hall way of the second floor where is located his father's law office, down into Vermeule's hat store, a distance of eighteen feet. Although the little lad was so fortunate as to escape striking the counters below, yet the fall was so great that possible internal injury is feared. The body was badly bruised, and the head cut by pieces of glass that fell beneath him. At present he seems to be getting along comfortably.

The boy was playing hide-and-seek with his father and had climbed over the iron rail and on the wooden frame work around the sky-light. His father in coming into the hall had just turned and caught sight of the lad, when the latter with an unconscious movement at being seen, stepped upon the glass and through into the store below. Mr. Wm. Wright, of Mr. Vermeule's establishment, picked up the lad and Drs. Long and Tomlinson dressed the wounds. He was subsequently taken to his home in North Plainfield.

A Rule That Works Both Ways.

The Republicans think it shows sharp practice for the Democrats to postpone the official announcement of the date of their State Convention. They say the Democrats are trying to get in after the Republicans. Well, are not the latter waiting to fix their convention after the Democrats?

The Weal of the Wheelmen.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club, which now numbers twenty-one members, has been requested by the managers of the Fair Association to give a tournament on the grounds of the Association during a Saturday afternoon previous to Fair week. The matter is now under consideration by the Club, and probably two or three races will be arranged and other features of an exhibition prepared for a date to be announced later. In anticipation of such possible event, a number of the bicyclists are already training, and sub-Captain George Craig has picked a company of eight that he will instruct in the evolutions of an exhibition drill.

The Club at its last meeting adopted its insignia. It is a silver wheel, from the hub of which is spread three gold wings surmounted by the monogram P. Bi. C., in blue oxidize. The uniform is dark green cap, coat and knee-breeches, with maroon stockings.

Two moonlight-runs have been called for the present week. Tuesday evening a number of the members wheeled to New Brunswick and back; and this (Thursday) night will be spent in a run to Orange and return. The Citizen's Club of New York city, of which the Rev. T. Mc K. Brown is President, having heard of the pleasures of a ride from Plainfield to Long Branch, propose visiting this city some evening soon and remaining over night. The Plainfield Club will the next day act as its escort to Long Branch.

Murder at Rahway.

Rahway was the scene on last Saturday night of another tragedy caused by rum, in which August Dietz, a man of family and a blacksmith, was the victim. He sat out a pleasant evening at Fritz Pommerehne's hotel, drank nothing but ginger ale and started for home at a little before twelve o'clock in company with a near friend by the name of George Heim*stadter, both perfectly sober.* At the corner of Grand and Irving streets they stopped to talk about business, when a man under the influence of liquor came across the street and entered into an al*tercation, Dietz and the young man finally* coming to the ground in a struggle. They were parted and again the young man came across the street. There was another struggle, and they fought to the middle of the street, another young man coming into the fracas. Finally the cry of "police" separated the parties and the young men ran away. Dietz was helped to the home of George Helmstadter, corner of Freeman and Grand streets, the blood washed off and he allowed to go to sleep. In the morning Dietz was found to be dead.

Lawrence May and George Layton were arrested for the murder of Dietz. Both young men are barely over twenty years of age and acknowledge that they were in a fight. May was arrested half an hour later while fighting with another man half a mile from the scene of the first fracas. Layton was arrested at his home at the head of Grand street. They worked at Bloodgood's mill, and it is averred that May, who was the principal fighter, never was before seen intoxicated. Dietz kept a blacksmith shop in Grand street, Upper Rahway, was an industrious German about forty years of age. He has a family and his wife will soon be confined. On Monday afternoon an autopsy was held by County Physician Terrill, all the physicians of Rahway were present. They came to the conclusion that death was not the result of dyspepsia or of any natural causes, but of unnatural causes. They also decided not to make public the particulars of the autopsy until the inquest was held.

A preliminary examination of the prisoners was held the same morning at ten o'clock at police headquarters, Rahway, before Justice Tunison. The court room was crowded to suffocation, and C. Addison Swift acted as substitute for Prosecutor of the Pleas Wilson, and conducted the examination. The court ordered that the prisoners be committed to the county jail to await the Coroner's inquest, to be held on Monday next, at one o'clock, at Rahway.

Like Old Fractional Currency.

The new postal notes which were authorized by Congress will be used for the first time by the public on September 3d.

The notes are printed on pure linen bank-note paper, chemically prepared in such manner as not to be effected by the action of acids and other reagents used for removing inks.

The amount for which the notes are issued as punched out in dollars, dimes and cents similar to a railroad ticket. The paper is a lemon tint, and on the face is printed, over the entire surface, an underlying tint in golden brown ink.

In size the notes are about the same as the U. S. notes, but similar in character to the old fractional currency. The paper is water marked, and each note contains a complete design of a ribbon formed in shape of a figure 8. No note contains the design intact, however, as it is so arranged that parts only of each design will appear on a single note, and by this means the exact position on the Sheet of paper can be determined if necessary.

Three printings are required to complete the note. The body of the note is covered with miniature pantographic designs containing the words, "United States postal note, U. S. P. N.," repeated many times and so small that at first it would not be noticed, but each letter is perfect. The upper part of the underlying tint under the words 'postal note' is composed of winged wheels, with a halo running in all directions.

The engraving and printing was done by the Homer Lee Bank Note Company, who had employed over 200 skilled artisans day and night in making the notes required.

The system will no doubt make a revolution in the transmission of funds throughout the United States and make great inroads on the money-orders now in use; over 80 per cent. of which are now for sums less than $5. The notes will prove a great convenience to business firms, as it does away with the trouble of procuring a money-order, is made cheaper and furnishes an easy method of mailing any sum less than $5.

The notes have the advantage of bank checks, and the paper being thin the presence of money cannot be detected as is the case with silver, bank bills or postage stamps.

The note will fill the space vacated by the discontinuance of the fractional currency, as these notes may be passed over the counters at their face value for three months from the last day of the month of issue.

The Bank Note Company is now engaged in manufacturing an additional supply of several million notes to supply future orders.

The notes are received by Mr. Frank Raymond, United States Postal Note Agent, and Mr. A. G. Lathrop, of the Post Office Money, Order Department, who have their offices in the works of the Bank Note Company on Broadway at the Corner of Prince street. The premises are fire-proof. It requires a vault fifteen feet square to hold the notes required for the first issue.

After they returned to Boynton most of the party enjoyed themselves in bathing and crabbing. On their way home they stopped and visited Essex Co. Lodge No. 27, at Rahway. They were heartily welcomed by the members of that lodge and handsomely treated with a fine supper and all the delicacies of the season. Sam had a private bottle to which he treated several of the boys. It contained pure and unadulterated salt water.

SUMMER RESORTS.

HOW THEY APPEAR IN ADVERTISEMENTS—WHAT THEY REALLY ARE.

A FEW NOTES CAPTURED FROM THE NOTE BOOK OF A SUMMER VISITOR.

[From the Detroit Free Press.]

'I believe you advertise good fishing?'

'Yes, sir.'

'Where is it?'

'Over in the lake. We never fish on dry land here.'

'But I have been over there all day and never had a bite.'

'Of course not. If you want to fish come here in June. This is August, and the fish won't bite. Sorry, but you are two months too late.'

AT THE NEAREST RAILROAD STATION.

'How far is it over to Rosebush Lake?'

'Sixteen miles, sir.'

'Why, I was told that it was only half a mile from this station! This is a pretty state of affairs, I declare! How do you get over there?'

'I have never been there, sir. I presume you can hire a farmer's team or walk it."

'It's a dead swindle!'

'Well?'

'And I'm a fool for leaving home!'

'Yes.'

'And I'll take the down train.'

'Certainly. Only sixteen hours to wait for it. Sit down in the freight-house and make yourself comfortable.'

TOO PREVIOUS.

'See here, landlord, didn't you advertise an entire absence of flies and mosquitoes at this place?'

'Certainly, sir; but those advertisements were prepared in March, and I assure you in the most solemn manner that we weren't troubled in the least until the last of May. If you had only come up here in April you would have had a glorious time.'

AN OFF YEAR.

'Hot! Why, it's five degrees hotter here than at home! I thought this was one of the coolest places in the country?'

'My dear sir, this is an off year, you know! Every year but this we have had to keep up fires in July, and we shall probably have to next year again. It is a sort of an extra season, you see.'

'But where are those cool breezes you advertised?'

'Oh, they are over on the other side of the lake to-day. You see, this is only one side of the lake, and we can't expect to monopolize all the breeze there is. We must divide up and give the other resorts some of it.'

CAME IN HANDY.

'See here, landlord, you advertised a big, four-story hotel, with a grove, fountain, bathing, boating, etc., and I arrive here to find a shanty stuck in the pine woods and the nearest lake a mile away. Explain yourself, sir!'

'With the greatest of pleasure. The cut of the hotel was one left on the printer's hands, and he worked it in to fill out the column. I ought to have mentioned in the advertisement that it was a cut of a hotel at Long Branch, but I neglected to. Come right in—beautiful scenery, woods full of snakes, rates down to $4 per day and children charged full price.'

DOG CHEAP.

'Landlord, this bill is downright extortion!'

'How is that?'

'Why, I can stop at the Grand Pacific for less than you have charged me!'

'Yes, sir, but is the Grand Pacific among the hills? Is it surrounded by pines? Has it a boiling spring? Can you walk over a precipice within 200 feet of the Grand Pacific? I charge two dollars a day for the precipice, another for the hills and the spring, and if twelve shillings a day for hotel rates are not dog cheap then I don't know how to please you. Why, sir, if the Fifth Avenue Hotel was on the brink of a precipice 200 feet high, you couldn't stop there for $8 a day!'

GENEROUS.

'Didn't I tell you not to ask your Uncle James for money?' said a mother, casting a hard look at her son.

'No'm.'

'What, didn't I tell you this morning not to ask him?'

'You said not to ask him when you was around—'

'Jeems!'

'But to strike him for a dollar while you was out an' you would give me a nickel of it.'

IN UNCERTAINTY.

He was hurrying along Centre street the other morning, when a boy about his own age stopped him and called out:

'Struck it?'

'Yes.'

'What?'

'Going to sweep an office for a feller.'

'Who?'

'Dunno.'

'How much?'

'Can't tell.'

'Why?'

''Cause if he's a lawyer he'll give me ten cents and predict that I'll be President some day, but if he's a broker he'll flip me half a dollar and not care two cents whether I bring up in Washington or Halifax! S'long!'

HOW TO TELL GOOD EGGS.

A good egg will sink in water.

Stale eggs are glassy and smooth on the shell.

A fresh egg has a lime-like surface to its shell.

The boiled eggs that adhere to the shells are fresh laid.

Eggs packed in brine for a long time smell and taste musty.

Thin shells are caused by lack of gravel, etc., among the laying hens.

After an egg has been laid a day or more the shell comes of easily when boiled.

A boiled egg that is done will dry quickly on the shell after taken from the kettle.

Eggs that have been packed in lime look stained, and show the action of the lime on the surface.

If an egg is clear and golden in appearance when held to the light it is good; if dark and spotted it is bad.

The badness of an egg may sometimes be told by shaking it near the holder's ear, but the test is a dangerous one.

With the aid of the hands a, piece of paper rolled in funnel shape and held toward the light, the human eye can look through an egg, shell and all.

THE SULTAN'S HAREM.

A Turkish gentleman who recently arrived in New York, and who is the son of N. de Castro Bey, private counsel to the sultan, told a reporter some interesting things about the harem of the son of the sun. The first question asked by the reporter was suggested by a habit which is by no means confined to American ladies, but is universal throughout the feminine world. He wanted to know if the ladies of the harem flirted, to which Mr. de Castro replied:

'No; they can't. Like all other women, however, they would like to.'

'Why can't they?'

'Their religion compels them to hide their face whenever they meet a man. If they happen to be met without a veil they will gather up one of their skirts and throw it over their heads.'

'Where does the sultan obtain his wives.'

'From Circassia and a certain part of Asia. These countries are noted for the beauty of their women, and the sultan has emissaries stationed there to make selections and importations. The governments of these countries often send portly young women to the sultan as presents to obtain his good will and favor.'

'Are the women blondes or brunettes?'

'Brunettes.'

'Do they ever bleach their hair?'

'Oh, yes. Blondes are so scarce that they are in great demand, and the women use a plant for turning their hair yellow.'

'What is the color of their eyes?'

'Black as jet and as bright as diamonds.'

'Are they petite or large?'

'Small of stature, but very plump. When young they are really the handsomest women in the world, but they don't last a great while.'

'They fade, do they?'

'Yes. Their lives are so luxurious that they decline from want of healthful exercise.'

'What do they do?'

'Sit on low divans under bright canopies and smoke cigarettes and drink strong coffee.'

'How do they dress?'

'In loose, bright garments. They dress in the Turkish style, but are adopting the European fashions as much as possible. The sultan has often issued decrees against the adoption of European tastes, but the women don't care about the dress nowadays, and when on the street many of them wear high French heels and bustles. They always wear white muslin veils, however, which add much to the seductiveness of their general appearance.'

'How do the ladies wear their finger nails?'

'They bleach them red, and have them cut short. The nails are short, I suppose, because they are afraid their tempers might get the better of them,' and Mr. de Castro stroked his mustache and laughed heartily.

BEING KIND TO A STRANGER.

Among the passengers in a parlor car on the Lake Shore road the other day was a handsome woman, whose husband shared the seat with her, and who would have been picked out as a quiet, sedate, absent-minded man. The seat opposite was occupied by a flashily-dressed young man, with a lady-killing twist to his mustache, and he was considerably surprised when the husband handed him a daily paper with the remark:

'Have a glance at the news. Plenty of excitement around the country, I observe.'

The young man was busy with the paper for half an hour, and then the husband offered him a popular magazine. This entertained him for an hour, and he had scarcely closed the book when the good man reached over with:

'Have a cigar. These are prime Havanas, and I know that you will enjoy one.'

The young man accepted with thanks and naturally made his way to the smoking-car, where he put in nearly another hour, but without the other's company. When he returned he was greeted with:

'Perhaps you'd like to look at the latest novel? Very entertaining, I assure you.'

He read until weary, and upon being offered another cigar replied that he was to leave the train at the next station, and added:

'I want to thank you again for your many courtesies.'

'Oh, don't mention it.'

'You never saw me before?'

'Never.'

'Don't know my name?'

'No.'

'Then tell me why you were so very courteous to an entire stranger.'

'Young man, I will explain. In times past when a loafer sat and stared at my wife as a steady job, I got up at the end of an hour and broke his neck. This makes me much trouble and expense, and I changed my programme. I now carry books and cigars to bribe them. Had you been going a hundred miles further, I should have offered you a new puzzle, two more dailies and another cigar, and my wife would have secured quite a rest.'

'Sir! I—'

'Oh, it's all right—all right! It was cheaper than throwing you out of the window, and I hope you'll get up to the hotel safely. Good day, sir—glad to have met you!'

And the young man with the lady-killing mustache and crockery-colored eyes and hair parted on an even keel, picked up his grip-sack and walked out without being certain whether he had been mashed in a collision or pulverized under a land roller.

Knot-withstanding—Bachelors.

A little girl at dinner the other day had a finger bowl placed before her for the first time and she startled the company by asking: 'Say, grandma, where is the soap?'

Josh Billings says: 'When a young man ain't good for anything else, I like tew see him carry a gold-headed cane. If he can't buy a cane, let him part his hair in the middle.'

A Scotch boy had delivered a message to a lady, but did not seem in a hurry to go. Being asked if there was anything else his mother bade him say, he whimpered out: 'She said I wasna' to seek anything for coming, but if ye gave me anything I was to take it.'

Peddler: 'Where is dot lady what lives here?' Friend at the wake: 'Whist! be aisy; she died two days ago.' Peddler: 'So help me, gracious, I am sorry! If I had come two days sooner I could have sold her dose two napkins she promised to buy last week.'

The Fruit Crop.

The peachy period has arrived and this week will behold a superabundance of the favored and luscious fruit. Delaware and Maryland will be as usual first in the field. A plentiful crop of pears may also be expected, and apples will come in due course.

Union County Jail.

The last quarterly report of Warden Cahill of the Union County Jail, presented to the Board of Freeholders at their last meeting shows that the number of prisoners under his charge up to August 1st, was 49. The expenses per day per prisoners was 22 cents and 8 mills.

Doctor Who?

Ground is being broken for the new Plainfield Opera House. The people there have been sighing for a theatre for years and now it looks as if their hopes will be realized. The grounds for the building have been donated for the purpose by the heirs of Doctor Thompson, of that place. The new theatre which will be maintained by a stock company, will stand about 200 feet back of Front street, and will be erected at a cost of about $40,000.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

Counterfeit Nickels.

Counterfeits of the new five-cent pieces, which did not have the word "cents" upon the coin, have appeared. The counterfeit is a very poor one. It is of a light lead color, and the thirteen stars surrounding the head of the Goddess of Liberty are much smaller than on the original piece. There is an open space between the bottom of the V in the latter coin In the counterfeit the V almost touches the wreath underneath.

Thin pennies are also electro-silver plated and passed at night for ten cent pieces upon unexpecting shopmen and the Chinese laundrymen.

This Doesn't Mean You!

The Trenton Times is not always wrong, as the following truths from its columns prove:

"There are many persons who subscribe to a journal and then treat it as though it were a gift newspaper. They pay when they feel like it, or not at all, if they can help it. It is this thoughtless habit that has ruined many a weekly newspaper and now and then endangers a daily journal. A newspaper that is not worth paying for in advance is seldom worth reading, but there are thousands of readers who know the value of the paper they take, but fail to enhance that value by paying for it. A general movement by newspapers, especially weeklies, to destroy the gift system, might meet with great success."

Our Jersey Lakes.

The statement that Lake Hopatcong is 500 feet higher than Lake George, is very likely to be news to some readers. The long journey up the Hudson, the heights of the Highlands, and the approach to the foot hills of the Adirondacks, are singularly deceptive. As a matter of fact, some places in New York city are about as high as Albany's Capitol, and the fall in the Hudson from Albany to New York is almost imperceptible. Our New Jersey lakes really needed only a gentle "boom," with good hotel accommodations, to give them the advantage of Lake George. They are quite as cool, are free from insect annoyances, and much more accessible. A couple of hundred thousand could be invested at Hopatcong or Greenwood Lake with better results than at most resorts.

THE LAY OF THE GALLANT COWBOY.

Oh, it was a gallant cowboy
Who had traveled from afar
On the southern exposure
Of a hog and cattle car,
Just to be a bold road-agent,
As in books road-agents are.

He'd a second-hand revolver,
And a six-inch jack-knife, too,
And he wore but one suspender
And a hat with holes jabbed through,
And he thought a story paper
Just to tell him what to do.

Then he made a call of business
On a leading tenderfoot,
And observed, "My gentle pardner
I'll relieve you of your loot;
So elevate your digits,
Or I'll be obliged to shoot."

But arose with ire malignant
The ungentle tenderfoot,
And impaled the gallant cowboy
On his patent box-toe boot,
And caused him through the gloaming
Like a whirligig to scoot.

Goes against the grain—the reaping machine.

SPORTSMEN'S CORNER.

John C. Roe and William DeGraw on Saturday evening astonished the natives about Greenwood lake by going out for Oswego bass after dark. The result astonished the fishermen as well as the rest. The bass is a very peculiar fish and it was always supposed by most fisherman that he would not bite after dark. A fishing excursion at that time was accordingly a novelty. Had it not been for the reputation Roe and DeGraw have as fishermen they would have been laughed at. They provided themselves with the bait at which black bass are biting at present, frogs, and proceeded to skitter. The night was very dark and a thunder shower was threatened. It did not take long, however, before a fine bass took the bait and was brought into the boat. Others followed suit until the two fishermen returned home with eight fine bass. These were about the only fish caught at the lake on Saturday. Yesterday there were quite a number of fishermen out but none caught anything worth taking into the boat. Roe and DeGraw do not go out on Sundays and so the fish were given a rest. Mr. De Graw keeps the Lakeside hotel and Mr. Roe is a relation of his.—Paterson Press.

LITERARY NOTES.

"On a Mexican Mustang" is the suggestive title of a new book written by Alex. E. Sweet and J. Armoy Knox, the humorous Editors of the famous Texas Siftings, now the most widely quoted journal in the United States. The book is a large 700 page volume, illustrated with nearly 200 original illustrations. This book is not a collection of witticisms without connection, but as a continuous narrative descriptive of the peculiarities, characteristics and atrocities of some of the quaintest people in some of the queerest corners in the United States. Although brimming over with humor and sparkling with wit, it is more than a volume. It contains a vast quantity of valuable information regarding Texas and Mexico, their resources and industries, the manners, customs and habits of their people, etc.

The publishers, Thayer, Merriam & Co., 606 Arch street, Philadelphia, may well be proud of the handsome manner in which they have turned out the book. It will be sold only by subscription. The publishers want agents in every township in the country, to whom they are prepared to offer liberal inducements. They will send circulars, instructions and sample pages free on application by letter, or complete outfit for canvassers for $1. As all the world has laughed at the humorous writing of the editors of Texas Siftings, almost every one who can read will want a copy of their book. It will, therefore, be a bonanza to agents, who will earn money rapidly by selling it.

POETRY.

A MERRY HEART.

'Tis well to have a merry heart,
However short we stay;
There's wisdom in a merry heart,
Whatever the world may say,
Philosophy may lift its head
And find out many a flaw,
But give me the philosophy
That's happy with a straw!

If life but brings us happiness—
It brings us, we are told,
What's hard to buy though rich one's try,
With all their heaps of gold.
Then laugh away—let others say
Whatever they will of mirth;
Who laughs the most may truly boast
He's got the wealth of earth.

There's music in a merry laugh,
A moral beauty, too—
It shows the heart's an honest heart,
That's paid each man his due,
And lent a share of what's to spare
Despite of wisdom's fears;
And made the cheek less sorrow speak,
The eye weep fewer tears.

MISCELLANEOUS READING.

SECRET OF A LARCH-TREE.

A lady, young, beautiful, blonde, sparkled with diamonds as she danced, herself the magnet of all eyes, amidst the music, light, and revelry of the August night at Silver Spring. Diamonds twinkled in the fair hair, poised there as a butterfly; diamonds trembled like dewdrops about the snowy throat, and formed a blazing pendant medallion amidst the flowers of the satin corsage; diamonds flashed in the tiny ears and on each dimpled wrist.

'Professor Horton, do you see the lady with the diamonds?' inquired the Colonel; with his soft, good-natured laugh.

'Yes, I see her. What then?' retorted the professor, grimly.

'Oh, nothing at all, only the Silver Spring will be regarded as a fashionable resort, what with the new Bellevue Hotel and such guests. Next year we will be able to hold up our heads with Saratoga and Newport, if we can add a race-course and club-house, sir."

Here the colonel rubbed his hands together with a gesture which has become traditional with the hotel proprietor of all ages.

The face of Professor Horton was lean, sallow, and dolorous, on the contrary, and was clouded by the discontent of one who has a grievance to lay at the door of circumstances.

He retorted, sharply. 'Mrs Delaunay is the name, eh? Are the diamonds real?'

'Real! They are of the purest water, and cost seventy-five thousand dollars, I am told. She was an heiress, you know, and when she married last year, the accumulated interest of her minority was invested in these jewels.' Such was the Colonel's glib explanation.

'Who is her partner,' pursued the Professor.

'Oh, the French Marquis de Ratti. They say he followed Mrs. Delaunay here, after being all about in society at New York and Washington last winter.'

'I do not believe in foreign noblemen,' grumbled the Professor. 'They prove to be valets and barbers more often than not. He looks more like a prize fighter than a gentleman; but perhaps the prize-fighting element is the highest evidence of blood among the nobility,' mused this republican spectator. 'Humph! I should not like to meet him in the dark. He might crack my skull like an egg-shell between finger and thumb. Oh, the customs of fashion! That young husband, leaning against the wall, permits the Marquis to waltz with his wife, instead of knocking him down for his impudence.

At this moment a pretty girl appeared behind the professor and the landlord, with round fair face and hair meekly brushed back from the temples: and, ingenous blue eyes.

The pretty girl smoothed her neat apron and lowered her eyes demurely as she demanded, in the softest of voices, 'If you please, sir, may I have my tea?'

'Mrs. Delaunay's English maid, Alice,' explained the Colonel, when he had granted the request.

Why did Professor Horton follow the English maid, so young, so genteel, so demure, with his eye? He could not tell. He saw her pause outside another window, where the Marquis de Ratti was taking the air, the dance being over, and it seemed to the observer that the two exchanged a glance, a smile, a signal, before the girl disappeared around the corner of the house.

'We only lack the gallantries of noblemen and ladies' maids to complete the ruin of our Silver Spring,' muttered this stern moralist, whose ideas were so old fashioned. He sought his own chamber gloomily for in addition to perturbation of mind, owing to having his sylvan retreat invaded by the Philistines of fashion, he was literally broken by bodily fatigue. He had rambled many miles that day, botanizing in the valleys, and seeking geological specimens on adjacent hills. His shoes were dusty, his raiment brier-torn, his loose sack-coat freighted with the 'rubbish' precious to the savant in the wide external pockets, while rheumatic twinges in knee and back reminded him that he was no longer young, thereby increasing his exasperation. Then to return to a hotel where all the world was dancing, and one woman was decked like an idol with seventy-five thousand dollars' worth of diamonds. The Professor's cup of bitterness brimmed over at these reflection.

The room was stifling hot, but he lighted his lamp, and forced himself to read an extract from Dr. Dollinger, while mothes blundered about the flame, frying themselves to a condition of unpleasant crispness, and mosquitoes stung his temples. His watch marked mid-night, and still the movement of the ball-room and the twang of musical instruments reached his ear, precluding the possibilites of sleep.

'Squeak, squeak, fiddles! Boom away. Keep up till morning, by all means. I wonder if that is the music of the future? A-a-h!" Here the listener clinched his teeth, with a truly diabolical expression of countenance, as the violins shuddered over his nervous system, snatched up his broad felt hat, and strolled out of doors, actuated by the impulse of escape

The night was sultry and oppressive. The Professor breathed a sigh of relief as he quitted the vicinity of the hotel, which sparkled with many lights through the trees like an ogre's eye. Darkness and the obscurity of shrubbery welcomed him abroad at this unusual hour. He strolled about the graveled paths, fanning himself with his hat, and paused beneath the projecting roof of the ornamented kiosque of the Silver Spring.

'There will be a thunder storm before morning,' soliloquized the Professor, replacing his hat.

All was deliciously still here, and far below, guarded by the encircling basin, bubbled the Silver Spring, cool and limpid, source of health, as the Professor firmly believed. Had not the nymph of the fountain spread her wings in startled flight in the disastrous change from rural tranquility to a fashionable resort? The Professor leaned on the parapet, and peered into the crystal depths of the spring, musing in this vein.

As he did so he perceived two persons advancing from opposite directions to meet a few yards distant from himself. They proved to be a man and a woman, and they scarcely paused before separating again with the same rapidity of movement as they had met.

'Wait for me,' said the woman. 'I shall have to manage, to get away at all.'

'I will wait till morning,' replied the man.

'She is sure to dance to the very last you know,' added the woman.

'Don't lose your head, that's all,' admonished the man.

'I lose my head, indeed!' retorted the woman, whose voice and bearing were youthful.

The professor moved slowly away scarcely heeding these words wafted to his ear by a passing breeze. At an angle in the path was a rustic bench beneath a larch-tree, known as Professor Horton's favorite seat. Hither he directed his steps in an irritated mood, and sank down on it in sheer weariness. The scent of flowers reached him, while the foliage seemed to spread above him 'fragrant robes of darkness.' Grateful repose succeeded noise and light, lulling all his senses to soft oblivion: he fell asleep.

He was awakened by a terrific peal of thunder, and opened his eyes with a bewildered uncertainty as to surrounding objects. The trees swayed wildly in the rising wind; a few large drops of rain fell heavily among the leaves; lightning quivered on the horizon. Suddenly a female form bent over him, some small object was thrust into his hand, and a voice whispered in his ear:

"I am early. She had a headache Quick! take them, or I shall be missed."

The thunder rolled, the trees swayed, the woman vanished. Professor Horton winked several times, and opened his mouth to speak, then closed his lips without sound. The object thus unexpectedly consigned to his care was a small leather bag, scarcely more than a tobacco pouch, and heavy. Mechanically he thrust it into one of the wide pockets of his loose coat. Hark! A heavy foot-step crushed the gravel on the path to the right. The professor rose to his own feet as if moved by a spring, his knees shook, his teeth chattered, a deadly fear smote him.

Fear of what evil? He did not know. To shrink to the left, gain the next clump of shrubbery, and conceal himself, was the work of a moment, and accomplished with the more ease that he knew every inch of ground from long familiarity. Had he not planted many of these trees which now proved friends? The hiding place gained was a larch surrounded by stiff little Japanese cedars, and forming a sort of labyrinth. Scarcely had the Professor glided into this shelter than a vivid sheet of lightning illuminated the whole country side. He saw himself seated on the rustic bench beneath the larch-tree! He could not believe the evidence of his own senses; the breath remained suspended on his lips. Had he been a devout Catholic he would have crossed himself, invoking the protection of a calendar of saints; a chill of superstitious dread certainly stagnated his blood. Was he to believe that his hour had come! There sat his own image on the rustic bench, the soft felt hat pulled down over the brow, the broad shoulders, the nondescript attire; nothing was lacking to complete the resemblance. Was he still asleep, victim of nightmare, or had he gone mad? He pinched his flesh and rubbed his eyes violently. The figure under the larch-tree did not vanish. Swift realization of the truth dawned on the drowsy scholar. He was alone, at a distance from the now silent hotel, and he had in his pocket a bag which belonged to the other. What if this unknown had found him still on the bench? What if he emerged now, accosted the stranger, and gave him the bag?

'I should be murdered as surely as there is a Heaven above us," shuddered the man of letters, with a conviction for which he could give no reason.

At this juncture the wind freshened, and the rain fell in torrents; while the lightning became less frequent. Prof. Horton quitted the larch-tree, reached the hotel with surprising agility, found a window of the recent ball room unfastened, groped his way through that deserted apartment, and gained his own chamber. The bag was gone. He had lost it from the wide pocket, probably in his flight. His watch marked two o'clock. The Professor extinguished the candle, opened the shutters of the window, and seated himself with his eyes fixed on the eas*tern horizon. He was a prey to the most* exciting emotions.

Prof. Horton was the first votary of the Silver Spring abroad next morning. If he was feverish and haggard, with a stealthy, even furtive aspect, the boy at the fountain did not notice the circumstance. Always an early riser, the Professor sipped a glass of the sparkling water, and then walked along the upper paths of the grounds. Cautiously he skirted the rustic seat beneath the larch-tree, and approached the larch. A short, dry laugh of triumph escaped the lips of the usually undemonstrative student. A leather bag, half pouch, lay, concealed by the long grass, beneath the spreading boughs. The larch-tree had kept its secret well. The bag remained where it had fallen from the Professor's wide pocket. He clutched it, returned to his room, and proceeded to investigate the contents. The little bag held the Delaunay diamonds. Necklace, bracelet, butterfly ornament—nothing was lacking in this precious heap swept hastily from cumbersome case and casket.

Five minutes later the busy landlord was seized by the collar, dragged into his private office, and confronted by Professor Horton, whose agitation verged on sheer lunacy. The latter took from his pocket a little bag, and poured out the Delaunay diamonds, telling a wild and incoherent tale meanwhile about a larch-tree and midnight rambles.

'Nobody would believe it, you know,' said the Colonel, coolly. The hotel proprietor is never surprised in this world.

'Take the trinkets, and restore them in your own way. Do not mention me in the transaction,' retorted the Professor. He stooped and plunged his fingers once more into the rainbow of precious stones with a sort of intoxication; the starry rays of rose and blue dazzled, blinded him. 'Beautiful and fatal gift to man!' he murmured, with parched lips.

The Colonel closed one eye, with the aspect of a sagacious bird.

Prof. Horton sought his bed, and slept heavily until four o'clock in the afternoon. He was awakened by voices, and peered through the shutters of his window. A carriage waited to take the Delaunay party to the steamboat on the lake. Mr. and Mrs. Delaunay were already seated, while Alice, the maid, had paused to reply to the head waiter, after which she re-entered the hotel. At this moment Prof. Horton's door was opened, and the Colonel entered with the bouncing swiftness of moment peculiar to fat men in haste. If the conduct of the Professor had been extraordinary in the morning when he had restored the jewels, that of the Colonel was not less so in the afternoon. He locked the door, made a warning gesture to the Professor, and stole on tiptoe to a second door at the extremity of the large room, where he lay down on the floor and applied eye and ear to the crack. Voices became audible in the adjoining chamber.

'I was there at one o'clock, and gave it to you,' said a woman.

'A lie! I watched all night and you did not come,' said a man.

'I gave it to a person under the tree, and he took it,' gasped the woman.

'Fool! Then the game is up. Get yourself dismissed at Newport, and cut to New York. If I believed you were tricky, my girl, it would be the worst for you.'

There was a sound of footsteps, and immediately afterward the Delaunay carriage rolled away.

The Colonel rose to his feet, chuckling at the success of his stratagem.

'Set a thief—ahem!—I mean a woman to catch a woman. My wife thought of having the English maid sent back in search of the missing bag, in order to give her a chance to communicate with her accomplice in the hotel, if she had one. The bag was dropped in the empty room next to you, for the purpose, and a man joined her there. Your story is amply corroborated, you see, by the few words exchanged.'

'I believe the Marquis de Ratti is the accomplice, and no more a Frenchman than you are,' exclaimed the Professor.

'So do I; but how to prove it?' rejoined the Colonel.

'You should have them arrested,' urged the Professor.

'What is the charge? Your adventures of the night? The noble Marquis is caught whispering with a pretty girl? No, no; I gave back the diamonds to Mr. Delaunay—with a suitable explanation—and he has carried them away in a money-belt. We alone know the whole truth.'
